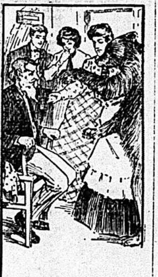
The relations between the squire and the widow had been strained for three or four years when two new characters came into the cast. A smart, good looking girl named Betty Lee came to live with the widow, and she hadn't been there two weeks when Harry Davis saw and fell in love with her. The son had tried to stand neutral in the quarrel, though naturally leaning toward his father's side. Perhaps one reason why he couldn't be brought to think altogether ill of the widow was on account of her bear. She had bought the animal of a stroller who had been taken sick and slipped to a distant town. It was a big black bear, full of tricks and good nature, and it had taken a great liking to Harry. When the quarrel reached a certain stage of bitterness he had to part with the bear as well as the widow. The separation had lasted two years or more when Betty Lee arrived. A month later the young man was visiting the widow, the girl and the bear and enjoying each and every occasion. These visits were unknown to the father, of course, and he did not discover them until rumor said that his son was going to marry Betty and that the widow Jenkins had brought things about to spite him.



THE SQUIRE TURNED PALE AND SHOOK IN HIS CHAIR.

"Young man, is it so or is it not?" he demanded of Harry after inviting him out to the barn for a talk.

"I love Betty and am going to marry her," was the reply.

"You'll never do it with my consent."

"But I am of age, father."

"Then I'll cast you off. If you marry that girl you cease to be a son of mine and shall never get a cent of this property."

Harry didn't indulge in any heroics. On the contrary, he took the matter so quietly that his father chuckled to himself and believed that he had gained a victory in the first round. He let it be known that he expected Harry to cease his visits to the farmhouse, but at the same time he was prepared to close his eyes for a time and give the boy a chance to retire with dignity. Things went on for three months without anything further being said—that is, while it was said on all sides that Harry and Betty would be married on Thanksgiving day the talk did not reach the squire's ears until one evening in October. He was a man who acted on impulse. He determined to go straight over to the widow's and settle things his way within fifteen minutes of arriving.

The widow's bear had no particular grudge against the squire, but he was a watchdog as well as a bear. He had been turned out that evening to roam around and see that all was well, and when he suddenly discovered Squire Davis coming cross lots through the barnyard it was only natural that he should fasten his teeth in the farmer's trousers leg and conduct him to the door of the house. The squire didn't scare at bulls or tramps or mad dogs, but he drew the line at bears. He was in a cold fright when he reached the house, and the widow added to it by allowing the bear to follow him in and sit up before him and growl and show his teeth. Harry had come courting as usual, and of course the position was embarrassing for a couple of minutes. It might have lasted longer but for the presence of mind of the widow. She realized that the bear had dealt her a winning hand, and she proceeded to play it for all it was worth.

"I am very glad to see you," she said as she placed a chair for the caller. "I am Widow Jenkins, as perhaps you know. This young lady is my friend, Miss Lee, and the young gentleman there is your son Harry. The bear has introduced himself, but I wish to say on his behalf that he is aching to make mince meat of you."

"Harry, what are you doing here?" hoarsely demanded the father.

"Courting Betty, sir," was the reply. "We are soon to be married, and I was going to tell you of it in a day or two."

"Married to that girl—never! You will remember that I told you"—

The bear reared up and growled ominously, and the squire turned pale and shook in his chair.

"You must not talk so loud," cautioned the widow. "Bumbo has got one of his savage fits on, and I can't hold him. What's the matter with Miss Lee that you don't want Harry to marry her?"

"I don't want him to marry any one just now."

"Don't you? Down, Bumbo! Well, as the two are in love and engaged, I think they will marry, and you will be very silly to interfere. Don't move your legs or Bumbo will have them!"

"Why don't you call off your blamed old bear when you see that he is ready to eat me?" shakingly exclaimed the squire as the sweat broke out on his face.

"I can't. He gets these savage fits on once in awhile, and there's no doing anything with him. If he gets his teeth into you I don't think we can save you. Have you anything against Miss Lee?"

"N-o."

"Don't you think she would make Harry a good wife?"

"I told you I didn't want— By thunder, are you going to see me eaten alive?"

"Bumbo, spare him a little longer!" appealed the widow. "Now, then, Miss Lee comes of a nice family and is worth $8,000, and she and Harry are to be married Thanksgiving day—that is, they were to be, but I have concluded to have the ceremony performed this evening. Squire Davis, you are a justice of the peace."

"What! Me marry 'em!" he shouted. But the bear started in to hug him, and he almost fainted away in his terror.

"Yes, you will marry them," quietly replied the widow after a bit. "It will be a neat, nice thing to do, and it will be a good joke on the people who expect you to make a fool of yourself. That's one side of it. The other side is that the bear is getting overanxious."

The squire fought against it for a quarter of an hour, but the widow, the bear and the girl, aided by occasional appeals from Harry, carried the day, and he stood up with the bear beside him and welded two souls according to law. Then the bride was kissed, the bear chained up, and as the squire nibbled his doughnut and sipped his glass of cider he was man enough to admit that he guessed it was all for the best—"gaul durn that bear!"

Too Busy to Make a Noise.

A Kansas City teacher of a kindergarten was incapacitated from work one day by the following incident. The subject of the lecture and object lesson was animals, birds and then more animals.

"Now, children," said the teacher. "I want each of you to think of some animal or bird and try for a moment to be like the particular one you are thinking about and make the same kind of noises it is in the habit of making."

Instantly the schoolroom became a menagerie, lions roaring, dogs barking, birds singing and twittering, cows lowing, calves bleating, cats meowing, etc., all in an uproar and excitement—all, with one single exception.

Off in a remote corner a little fellow was sitting perfectly still, apparently indifferent and unmindful of all the rest. The teacher, observing him, approached and said:

"Waldo, why are you not taking part with the other children?"

Waving her off with a deprecating hand and wide, rebuking eyes, he fervently whispered:

"Sh—sh—sh, teacher—sh! I'm a 'ooster, and I'm a-layin' a aig!"—Kansas City Star.

Better Late Than Not at All.

The pastor of the little country church had been much annoyed by having the members of his congregation straggle in long after the service had begun. One Sunday morning, when he felt that further forbearance with this fault was impossible, he decided to rebuke some conspicuous offender. About twenty minutes later than the proper hour there entered a mild mannered little woman, one of the regular attendants of the church, but quite incorrigible in her tardiness. The minister looked up, fixed her with his spectacles and remarked:

"Sister, you are very much behind time. I hope you will not be so late in getting into heaven!"

The little woman looked up, smiled sweetly and without a trace of confusion replied placidly:

"I shan't care about that, doctor, so long as I get there."

And now the pastor feels that the smile that went round the church somehow spoiled the effectiveness of his reprimand.—New York Tribune.

Mal-nutrition under many aliases is killing hundreds of thousands every year

Nearly every disease that is prevalent can be traced to improper food. An ill-nourished body is an invitation to disease. If you are eating heat- and fat-producing foods such as butter, white-flour bread, fat meats, etc., you are neglecting the vital elements of your body—the principles which build muscle, bone, brain, tissue and nerves, the elements which resist the attacks of disease.

To be free from sickness you must build up every element in your body.

CHURCH CHIMES OF YESTERDAY.

Bridge St. Celebrates Its 89th Birthday—Sermon by Toronto Divine.

Notes of Songs and Services in Other Places of Worship in This City.

Bridge Street.

Bridge Street Methodist Church had another anniversary yesterday. You never saw such a church for having anniversaries. It was their 89th, which shows that in 1815 the first Methodist church of this city was inaugurated. Every time the church has a birthday the members hold anniversary services, and sometimes they manage to work in a few extra ones. One peculiar thing about the Bridge St. people you cannot help noticing—they actually seem to think it is a pleasure to go to church. Not a bit like some church-goers we have seen, who seem to think they deserve a medal if they get to church more than once a Sunday, and who can be easily kept away by a threatened shower or snowstorm. However, to return to yesterday. The Bridge St. people had a Toronto minister to preach to them, the Rev. Solomon Cleaver, D.D., and a very eloquent and clever preacher he was, too. He preached in the morning, and was "welcomed" in the Sunday School in the afternoon, but it is the evening service we are going to drop a few remarks about. There was a large congregation present when the services began, and when the writer was shown to a seat Prof. Hunt was playing, as an open voluntary, one of the sweetest and daintiest little gems we ever heard. The opening voluntary was "I Waited for the Lord," with solos by Mrs. Parker and Miss Vermilyea, and a duet or two by the same ladies. The chorus by the choir was grandly sung, the balance being very good, indeed, and the attack and retreat excellent. The next musical event was a solo by Mr. Cameron, "Bless the Lord, O my Soul."

Rev. Dr. Cleaver took as his text the 1st verse of the 47th chapter of Ezekiel, which chapter he had before read as a lesson. The sermon was a brilliant and eloquent effort, and the preacher likened the stream seen by the inspired prophet to the stream of Christianity which began to flow when the Saviour came upon the earth. The 4,000 cubits, he thought, were 4,000 years, and when Christianity had been that long in the world, it would, like the stream seen by Ezekiel, become a river that no man could pass over. Ezekiel looked forward 600 years to see this stream; we, to-day, were privileged to gaze upon it and drink of its waters. The foundation of the true Church was built upon the brink of that river, which was the Gospel of Jesus Christ. "Men have always," the preacher said, "been looking for and trying to build other foundations, but without success. Some thought music was the best foundation for a church; a sad mistake to make. Music had its place in the service, but it could not be the foundation. Some thought a learned and eloquent preacher was the best foundation: another mistake. Some thought if they had a grand and ornate church building they would be sure of success, but all these were errors. To be successful in doing the Lord's work and following its mission a church must have Jesus Christ as its foundation, and a church which was built on any other foundation than that would be found to be a fostering home for pride and arrogance. "Brother, sister," said the preacher, "what are you building your foundation on? On music? You're wrong. On eloquence and sensational sermons? You're wrong again. On a grand church edifice? That will not do. On the Gospel of Jesus Christ? Build on, for your good work shall endure forever." Then there were different doors to a church, and all people did not enter the right one. There was the back door of avarice, for it paid, nowadays, to belong to the Church of God in this country. There were the side doors of fashion, for some people went to church to show off their fine clothes. But there was only one front door, which admitted those who desired to live a good life and further Christ's Kingdom upon earth. Brother, sister, how did you come in? By the back door of avarice, or by the side door of fashion? If so you'd better get out and come in by the front door of faith." On the course of the river seen by Ezekiel there were marshes and swampy places, and, alas! on the course of the river of Christianity we see many of them. Marshes are caused by stagnation; the swamps absorb all the living water they can get and decline to pass it on so as to help others. So along the river of Christianity we find swampy men, and swampy families, and swampy churches. The frogs and croakers were there, filling the air with their croakings. "Show me a croaker," said the preacher, "and I'll show you a swampy soul, every time." The river that was flowing on its course swiftly had no place for frogs or croakers; and the man, or family, or church, that was spreading the blessings of Christianity had no place for them, either. On the old farm where he lived as a boy they did away with the swamps by cutting a channel so that the marsh had an outlet into living water and that was what was needed in a swampy soul or church. They must dig a ditch of self-denial, pass on the blessings they had themselves received, and all the croakers would disappear. The Gospel stream was growing deeper. Japan, China and Thibet would soon bow the knee before the results which flowed from it, and although now it was no higher than a man's knee it would soon be flowing with resistless force, till all the world would become tributary to Jesus Christ. The preacher, in a beautiful and impassioned peroration, prayed and hoped that God would hasten the day.

During the offertory Mrs. Parker sang a solo, "Come Unto Him," very sweetly, and a trio by Miss Vermilyea, Mr. Cameron and Mr. Jessop, "Praise Ye the Lord Almighty," was given in a most delightful way.

Emmanuel R. E. Church.

The service at the above church yesterday morning was taken by Rev. Robt. Wallace, who preached a very helpful discourse on "The Imperialism of Christianity," showing that the same methods advocated by Hon. Joseph Chamberlain for the unification of the British Empire were necessary in the Christian church if it was to be successful in its fight against Satan. The evening service was conducted by Mr. Raney, of Albert College.

Tabernacle Church.

At the morning service the Pastor, Rev. Geo. Brown, occupied the pulpit, and his text was from Philippians, 1st chapter, 21st verse:

"For me to live is Christ and to die is gain."

In the evening the Rev. J. R. Real conducted the services and preached. During the service Miss M. Stork sang a solo entitled "Just for To-day."

Christ Church.

At last evening's service there was a large congregation present. The Rector, Rev. W. B. Heeney, preached, and his text was from St. Matthew, 24th chapter, 35th verse:

"Heaven and earth shall pass away, but My words shall not pass away."

St. Thomas' Church.

"The Ascension of Christ" was the subject discussed by the Rector, Rev. G. R. Beamish, yesterday morning. His text was from Hebrews, 9th chapter, 24th verse.

Baptist Church.

At the close of the regular evening service last night the sacrament was administered. The Pastor officiated and preached an instructive sermon. His text was from the 116th Psalm, 8th verse.

St. Andrew's.

Rev. Mr. Logie, of Winchester, preached at both services yesterday and created a favorable impression. His discourses were both ornate, instructive and logical. In the morning his text was from St. John, 7th chapter, 37th and 39th verses. At the evening service the choir rendered the anthem, "I Waited for the Lord," a duet in it being taken by Misses N. Lazier and G. Webster.

The Credit Canadien And the Local Rolling Mills.

INTERVIEW WITH MR. J. F. WILLS REGARDING AN ARTICLE PUBLISHED IN A MONTREAL PAPER.

No little interest is taken in Belleville in matters relating to the Credit Canadien, a banking institution in Paris, France, not on account of the affairs of the company, but on account of its connection with the rolling mills enterprise in Belleville.

The Montreal Star of the 14th inst. contains the following:

"'Le Credit Canadien,' one of the Carbonneau enterprises in Paris, has gone into liquidation. The shareholders of the company are Mr. and Mrs. Carbonneau, Dr. Wills and Mr. F. J. Marchand, who is also the manager or managing director. The names of several prominent Canadians have been mentioned within the last few months in connection with this institution. One of them yesterday denied all connection with the Credit Canadien. He said that the presidency and vice-presidency had been offered to Sir Mackenzie Bowell and Col. Drolet, but neither had accepted the offices. In like manner, in November last, the promoters had sought to set up a new directorate, taking in a certain number of Canadians in Paris. None of these had accepted seats on the directorate.

"Mr. Carbonneau left France some months ago, and has been in the United States and Canada since that time. During his absence, he did not deem it necessary to communicate, in a business sense, with the managing director of his company in Paris. The latter thought it prudent to liquidate the company, which has more assets than liabilities.

"The object of the establishment was the launching of Canadian shares on the Parisian market. Its chief company was the Gold Run Mine, and it launched that company successfully."

The foregoing article was shown to Mr. Frank Wills, of this city, who was asked if he had anything to say in reference thereto. His reply was that he had received from Mr. Carbonneau a telegram dated Hot Springs, May 14th, which reads:

"No truth in report, but Mr. Marchand is withdrawing from Credit Canadien."

A telegram from Mr. Carbonneau, dated Hot Springs, May 13th, 1904, appears in La Patrie and La Presse of Montreal, which reads:

"A telegram reached me that you published Wednesday the news that the Credit Canadien was in liquidation. You are maliciously informed."

Mr. Wills adds that this will in no way interfere with the putting into operation of the rolling mills, which operation, he anticipates, will be at an early date.

Oils, Plasters and Operations Fail to Cure Cancer

There is a peculiar condition of the blood which favors the growth of cancer germs in the system, and that is the reason that local treatment like the above fails to make permanent cures.

Rubber Boots Stolen.

A few days ago a pair of long rubber boots, belonging to Mr. Dan Donohue, were taken from Mr. Adam Henry's store. The theft was reported to the police with the result that the boots were recovered, and Gordon Sharpe was arrested on Saturday evening charged with the offence. At the police court this morning the accused was charged with entering Mr. Henry's store and stealing therefrom a pair of boots. Through his solicitor, Mr. Carnew, Sharpe pleaded guilty and the Magistrate reserved judgment until Friday morning. Donohue and Sharpe were both employed at Mr. Henry's.

CHINESE LYING IN WAIT

Will Pounce Upon Russians When Japs Drive Them North.

St. Petersburg Sees Another Boxer Uprising in Agreement Between China and Japan—A Sample of Eastern Intrigue—Chinese Bandits Growing Bolder—In Fierce Fight the Chinese Were Driven Back By Charging Russians.

St. Petersburg, May 16.—In view of the official despatches regarding the hostile attitude of the Chinese within and without the Russian sphere of influence, the authorities here do not conceal their apprehension as to the outlook, especially in the north of the Empire, for they purpose to call the attention of the celestial Government to the impending uprising in Tapadciatsi, in order that repressive measures may be instantly taken.

It is known and appreciated here that all the powers have made strong representations to Pekin in the interest of the preservation of the tranquility of the Empire, but it is stated that Major-General Pflug's despatch of May 14 shows the necessity for further impressing the celestial with the advisability of acting with a firm hand.

The authorities do not forget the Boxer revolt, which spread from Shantung, would have involved the entire Empire had it not been for the firmness of the southern viceroys. The military authorities in St. Petersburg claim to have information of a sensational character to the effect that the Chinese have tacitly agreed to co-operate with the Japanese operations against the Russians.

An Eastern Intrigue.

The Japanese propose, it is stated, to drive General Kuropatkin's forces into Mongolia, which would place the Russians in the positions of invaders of neutrality territory and enable reprisals by General Ma's army. This army, it is asserted, is kept in that region for that special object. Thus the slightest infringement of neutrality of China by Japan would be cleverly avoided and the Chinese troops, by not crossing the Manchurian frontier, could not be charged with a violation of pledges in respect to non-interference in military operations in Manchuria.

The opinion of an eminent strategist, with whom the Associated Press talked yesterday, is that the Japanese intend to attack not only Liaoyang, but all along the line, in an effort to drive Gen. Kuropatkin into Mongolia, where the Chinese are waiting for him.

Knowing these conditions, Gen. Kuropatkin, he said, would not be likely to make a serious resistance at Kaiping or Haicheng, but would withdraw to the north. This would enable the Japanese to march on Newchwang with little hindrance, and would permit their unopposed use of that point as a base from which men and supplies could be sent north without any violation of neutral zone west of the Liao River.

Bandits Grow Bolder.

Liaoyang, May 16.—The Chinese bandits are becoming bolder and are causing considerable trouble to the Russian outposts. A swarm of the bandits at noon, May 13, attacked the coal mines on the branch line east of Yantai Station, ten miles north of Liaoyang. The mines, which supply the whole railroad, were guarded by 200 riflemen and 100 Cossacks. In a fierce fight the Russins repelled the bandits and then charged them, the bandits fleeing to the hills and to three neighboring villages. The troops surrounded the villages and demanded the surrender of the bandits. The surrender was at first refused, but, fearing that the Russians would destroy their homes, the villagers finally revealed the hiding places of the fugitives. The bandits fought with the desperation of entrapped rats, and fifty of them were speared and killed. The Russians suffered no loss.

Capt. McGee's Tragic Death.

Ottawa, May 16.—James McGee, captain of the Rough Rider champion football team, and a stellar player on the Ottawa Hockey team, died in the Catholic General Hospital yesterday afternoon as the result of being thrown from a horse on Monday. He never recovered consciousness. He was out with a riding school class at the time of the accident. He was a son of J. G. McGee, clerk of the Privy Council, and a nephew of the late Hon. D'Arcy McGee. The death has cast a gloom over the city, as he was exceptionally popular.

Praise From Dundonald.

Toronto, May 16.—The annual garrison parade took place here yesterday, and immense crowds watched the soldiers as they paraded through the streets. Of cavalry there were 13 officers and 219 men; artillery 3 officers, 47 men; Queen's Own Rifles, infantry, 667 strong; 48th Highlanders, 550 strong; Royal Grenadiers, 532 strong, and Army Medical Corps, 40 strong. Lord Dundonald said that the parade was very creditable, and he regretted that want of time prevented it being more minutely seen.

With 127 Gill Nets.

Port Stanley, May 16.—Capt. E. Dunn of the Dominion cruiser Petrel arrived here yesterday morning with one hundred and twenty-seven American gill nets, which he found set in Canadian waters, about five miles north of the boundary line and east of Pelee Island.

Artillery Officer Missing.

Kingston, May 16.—An artillery officer has disappeared. He has not been on duty for several days, and is absent without the necessary permission, a very serious offence. There are various conjectures as to his disappearance.

BRITAIN TO BE INVOLVED.

Brazilian Officers Stopped British Ship on Its Way Up the Amazon.

Washington, D.C., May 16.—It is possible that Great Britain may become involved in the threatened clash between Brazil and Peru.

U. S. Minister Thompson cabled the State Department Saturday from Petropolis that the Brazilian officers on Friday stopped a British ship at Manaos while she was making her way up the Amazon River on the ground that she had aboard 260 cases ammunition destined for the Peruvian military forces in the upriver country, the possession of which is now a subject of dispute between Brazil and Peru.

As there has been no declaration of war it is expected that the British Government will enter a protest against the stoppage of the ship as illegal.

Prisoners Broke Out in Cheers.

Kingston, May 16.—It was reported that there was an attempt at mutiny in the penitentiary because the prisoners were dissatisfied with the food set before them. It seems, however, that all the prisoners did was to break out into a suppressed cheer while at dinner because of an extra good dinner that was on the tables.

Negro Lynched.

Augusta, Ga., May 16.—Charlie Cummings, a negro, 19 years old, was taken from jail at Apling, twenty miles from Augusta, early yesterday morning and lynched by a mob of masked men.

WATER JOURNEY CHEER

REV. DR. TALMAGE ELOQUENTLY RECALLS PAUL'S VOYAGE.

CONFIDENCE VS. COWARDICE

Influence of Personal Feelings Upon Those About Us—How Mental States Beget Similar Mental States in Others—Faith As Well As Cowardice Infectious—What Makes Men Heroes.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1904, by William Baily, of Toronto, at the Dep't of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 15.—A timely gospel for the great multitude who cross the ocean at this season or who journey on any waters, whether for pleasure or business, is to-day the theme of the preacher. The text is Acts xxvii, 36, "Then they were all of good cheer."

Have you ever followed the sea? In these days of multiplied facilities for ocean travel, when mammoth liners, equipped like floating palaces, carry tens and hundreds of thousands of passengers to and fro across the seas, with a sense of security added to the maximum of comfort, we little think of the discomforts attendant upon the ocean voyages of half a century ago. But though the conditions of sea travel have so vastly improved in recent years that a journey across the Atlantic or up the Mediterranean is no longer an undertaking to be dreaded there are still many traditions of the sea which time has not materially changed. If you have traveled much upon the ocean, you must know that there are superstitious sailors who dislike to carry ministers, or, as they call them, "sky pilots," in their ships. Ever since the recreant Jonah was the cause of a Mediterranean cyclone, because he would persist in going to Tarshish when God told him to go to Nineveh, there have been sailors who believe the presence of a minister upon their ship means head winds and storms and disasters and misfortunes. This prejudice against carrying a minister, like the prejudice against carrying a corpse or the starting of a voyage on a Friday, has been gradually getting less and less as sailors have become better educated.

Rev. Dr. James McGregor Alexander, the honored missionary of India, told me that when he and his wife and five other missionaries in 1865 set sail for India the sailors were in almost open mutiny at the idea of carrying such a dangerous cargo of human freight, but when they arrived in Calcutta, after a long four months' voyage of unprecedental clear weather, those sailors were so surprised that instead of considering their ministerial passengers "Jonahs" they looked upon them as "fair weather" angels. So completely had their opinion changed that they told their captain, who knew of their former foreboding, that they wished the missionaries were going back with them on their return voyage.

Superstition, however, is not easily eradicated. This prejudice against ministerial passengers has survived for centuries. Yet in the scene of my text we have an instance of its being overcome. Here is Paul, a landsman, a prisoner and a missionary, so winning the confidence of the crew that they heed his warnings and follow his suggestions. It was, too, in a crisis when nautical skill was needed that they listened to him. There was a storm raging of unusual violence. The dreaded hurricane they called euroclydon was lashing the Mediterranean into fury. There was darkness even at midday; all reckoning lost, all hope given up. Then the 275 persons on board turned to this little Jewish missionary for guidance and encouragement. They had begun the voyage against his advice. They might be prejudiced against him as a preacher and a prisoner, but they listened to him when he addressed them, bidding them be of good cheer. "And when he had thus spoken he took bread and gave thanks to God in presence of them all, and when he had broken it he began to eat. Then were they all of good cheer, and they also took some meat."

Why were the crew and the passengers of this Alexandrian corn ship happy of heart? First, because faith always begets faith, and confidence confidence, and good cheer good cheer. The belief which Paul felt that "there should be no loss of any man's life, but of the ship," was, by his personal example, instilled into the hearts and minds of those by whom he was surrounded. We know that cowardice is infectious. We know that when a ship is sinking at sea there is liable to be such a rush for the boats that a panic may ensue. Then the captain, knowing well that only by order and equanimity is there hope for the safety of any, will draw his pistol, and, with determined mien, declare that he will shoot the first man who disobeys orders in forcing his way into the life-boats. We know that when a regiment is resisting the charge of an enemy the colonel will take his position in the rear of the line and shoot down any cowardly soldier who would turn and flee. If one soldier were allowed to run to the rear, the whole regiment, like a herd of terror stricken cattle, might be stampeded with fear. If cowardice be infectious, why may not hope also be infectious?

In the storms and trials of life how often have courage and fortitude been inspired by the example of some man strong in faith and undaunted in his confidence in God! Men will believe in Christ's power to save when they see a man whose reliance on him keeps them calm in the presence of death. When Hugh Latimer, the dying martyr, turned to the trembling Ridley, who was being tied to the stake at the same time that he was being tied, and said, "Be of good comfort, Master Ridley, and play the man; we shall this day light such a candle by God's grace in England as I trust shall never be put out," at once Nicholas Ridley became a man. His nerves ceased their quivering, and he was able to die as a Christian hero.

Yes, yes. We all know what the power of a personal example means in life. We know that when men are brave about us they make us brave. We know that when men are true they make us true. We know that when men are noble examples of Christian faith they inspire us with like Christian faith. So when Paul, amid the shriekings and groanings and heavings and bombardments of the Mediterranean whirlwind, calmly and deliberately stepped forth and said, "Men, I exhort you to be of good cheer, for there shall be no loss of any man's life, but of the ship," then the sailors and passengers stopped and said to themselves: "Why, that is strange talk. We cannot understand it, but Paul must have had a supernatural vision, or else he could not have spoken thus. You speak so positively, O preacher, that we believe you. What a God yours must be to inspire such confidence! Would that we had your faith and your religion." Men and women of the Christian life, are your actions and words living witnesses of your faith in the saving grace of Jesus Christ?

Why are the crew and the passengers of this Alexandrian corn ship happy of heart? Because Paul kept holding up before them the mistakes of their past life in order that they might the more easily be led to follow in his way. Paul was not a mere taunter, a sneerer, a ridiculer, a tantalizer. He was not one of those mean, contemptible fellows who always stand around when anything goes wrong and say, "I told you so."

But Paul was like a good physician who comes to an overworked man and says: "My friend, I told you if you did not hold up you would have a nervous breakdown. Now this breakdown has come. Therefore I want you now to trust me and do what I tell you to do, and then we will make you well." Paul in the same gentle way as the good physician stand before those helpless voyagers and says: "Friends, I told you not to loose from Crete. I told you that if we tried to make Rome during this winter equinoctial you would regret it. But now that this harm has come to you I want you to obey my commands, and I promise, by the God whom I represent, that there shall be no loss of any man's life, but of the ship."

It is a contemptible characteristic to tell a man his faults and keep telling them, merely to glory in his misery, even as a fiendish cat might tease and tantalize a little mouse and yet not kill it. It is a contemptible thing for a man to come around when your little child lies cold in death and say: "Well, So-and-So, I am sorry your baby is dead, but I knew she would die. I knew it when you called in Dr. Bigdose as your physician. He always kills more patients than he ever cures. I told you so. I told you so. If you had only followed my advice, your baby would be alive to-day." Can he being the child back to life again?

In order to erect a mansion it is often necessary to tear down and clear away the walls of an old family homestead. But no man has a right to tear down or destroy anything unless he can erect a better in its place. The most mischievous of all social reformers is the destructive iconoclast who has nothing to offer us in the place of the institutions he would tear down. It is easy enough to be a censorious critic. It is not so easy a matter to furnish a better for that which you deride. I remember many years ago, as an imaginative boy, I read that strange, weird, horrible story called "Caesar's Column." In fascination I followed its author step by step as he deftly tore the beautiful patterns of modern society into shreds. In horror I read on as he denounced the social status, not as the generation of a Noah was destroyed by this old earth as a water-logged craft, shipping tidal wave after tidal wave, but as a huge column of piled up corpses. But as the years have passed by and boyish imagination has given place to sober thought, the flames and the smoke arising from the funeral pyre of Caesar's column, embellished with dead bodies, have grown less and less. The great airships which circled about in the heavens as great flocks of destroying birds have collapsed. Why? Because I see as a man that, though Ignatius Donnelly might advocate the destruction of society by finding fault with it, yet with his brain he could not construct for us a better Utopia. Like Paul, never ridicule a man, never probe for his faults, unless at the same time you can show him how to correct those faults. Never refer to a man's malady or deformity unless you can tell him of a doctor who can apply a remedy for it.

Why were the crew and the passengers of the Alexandrian corn ship of good cheer? Because Paul was a man of Christian commonsense as well as of supernatural visions. He knew that the only religion that could really help a man must be a religion that could help him in the present life as well as fit him for a life beyond the grave. It was not only the promise of safety in the future that he gave those people, but the sound commonsense counsel of preparation, by keeping up their strength for insuring that safety.

"What are you driving at anyway?" says some one. "Is Paul a mere hygienic lecturer?" He is more than that, but he does not think it beneath his dignity, after seeing the vision of God, to tell the crew and the passengers of the Alexandrian corn ship to look after their physical necessities. He does not think it irreligious to gather the men and the women of the doomed ship together and say: "Men, you are going to be saved, but God will never do his part unless we are ready to do ours. Now, to-morrow we are going to all get safely to land, but there is to be a big drain upon our physical resources. Some of us are now completely fagged out. We have not had a good meal for nearly two weeks. Let the cooks go and prepare the most nourishing dinner they can; then let us by turns gather in the cabins, old and young alike, and eat a good, hearty repast. We need faith for the soul; we also need meat for the body." Some people think the most dramatic episode of Paul's life was when he stood upon Mars hill and argued with the Greek philosophers; others when he pleaded for his life before Agrippa. I think the most impressively dramatic incident was when he was standing upon the rocking, heaving deck of a vessel whose hull was gradually filling with water and telling the passengers and the crew to eat and look after their bodies, as God would surely save them on the morrow.

Why were the crew and passengers of the Alexandrian corn ship of good cheer? Paul had not deceived them as to the manner of their coming rescue. He had bluntly yet clearly told them what would happen, and, as events were turning out just as he had described, they were not in the least astonished when the ship came within sight of land and they knew that she was doomed. Though the vessel might be lost, they felt that their own lives were to be saved.

Just read very carefully, if you will, the account of this prophecy. Paul did not stand forth in the midst of them and say: "Oh, men, the tornado will cease and the billows of the sea shall lie down, and the sun will again break forth from behind the clouds, and, in gala day attire, we shall sail into the harbor of our destination." He did not prophesy a pleasant voyage with all friends gathered on the shore to greet them as they disembarked. He did not say, "We shall only be detained a few days and then hurrah for the pleasures of life in the city!" Oh, no; that was not Paul's way. He told the truth. He said: "Men, we shall be saved; but, like Job, we shall only escape as by the skin of our teeth. We must become water-logged. We must beach our craft and it will be beaten and gnashed into kindlings. We must lose all our cargo and personal baggage. We shall be rescued alive, but that is all." Then, when the sailors saw the literal fulfillment of the prophecy of Paul, their faith in their leader and and in their leader's God not only continued, but increased day by day.

I believe that in urging men to come to Christ we make a mistake when we do not frankly state the hardships and difficulties of the Christian life. There are, as every experienced Christian knows, sacrifices that must be made, privations that must be endured, struggles that must be fought. It is better that we acknowledge the fact, as Christ did when men came to him offering themselves as his disciples. If we fail to tell them that they must expect trial and perhaps adversity in following Christ they will consider that they have been deceived and will be disappointed and discouraged when they encounter trouble. As Paul told these men that they would have to battle with the waves and be in danger of death on that rocky coast before they reached safety, so we should tell men that the way to heavenly joys is often hard and toilsome. Paul demanded of those passengers and sailors of the Alexandrian corn ship the same sacrifices for their physical salvation which Hernando Cortes demanded of his followers for the conquest of Mexico. During one of his marches the Spanish soldiers became disaffected. Cortes assembled his men in line. "Men, some of you are grumbling," he said substantially. "Some of you want to know what rewards I have to offer you at this time. This is my answer." Then, drawing a line upon the ground with the edge of his sword, he pointed with his steel toward the great east and said, "On that side of the line are ease and comfort and friends and a life of ease in fair Spain." Then, pointing to the great west, he said: "Yonder are sickness and privation and hunger and cold and death. But yonder is the beautiful capital of the Montezumas. Which shall be yours? Choose ye this day as ye will. Choose ye as brave Castilians."

Christ to-day, like Paul, like Hernando Cortes, promises his followers not peace, but struggle and privation; not ease and comfort, but storm and suffering and trials and misery. But in the end, like Paul, Christ assures you of salvation. Aye, more than Paul offered to the shipwrecked sailors and passengers of the Alexandrian corn ship, Christ offers to you spiritual redemption for time and for eternity. Men and women, are you ready to face suffering and sacrifice in the name of Jesus Christ? Are you willing to believe him and trust in him.

But why should not the passengers and crew of the Alexandrian corn ship be of good cheer? Did not the prophetic words of Paul literally come true? When the mighty ship struck the beach what happened? Paul turned to the brawny-armed men about him and said, "Leap into the surf and swim for your lives." And these stout-limbed men flung themselves into the seething waters and swam on until at last their feet touched the shore and they made ready to rescue their struggling friends. Some of the women, being in all probability strapped to spars, were lifted by the heaving billows and swept upon the rocks, where they were rescued. Some of the men may have come ashore clinging to boards and broken gunwales. At times it seemed as though they must be washed off, but somehow they are at last all landed. So in the end of time and in the beginning of eternity all Christians shall be safely brought to the heavenly shores, through stress and storm and peril, it may be, but still safe. Yes, we will be there. We shall all be there. Courage, Christian brother. Fear not the perils of the passage. "Though the waters thereof roar and be troubled, though the mountains shake with the swelling thereof," the promise of Christ, like the words of Paul, shall come gloriously true.

London, May 17.—The Shanghai correspondent of The Morning Post, cabling under date of May 16, says that according to native reports from Port Arthur the Japanese are vigorously beseiging the fortress night and day by land and sea, and that sixty Japanese warships and transports have been sighted in Blackney Bay, and that heavy firing has been heard in Kichau Bay.

Japs Undecided Say Russians.

St. Petersburg, May 17.—The following despatch from Major-General Pflug, dated May 15, has been received at the War Ministery: According to information received up to May 13 the enemy's advance from Fengwangcheng towards Liaoyang is characterized by indecision. It is to be supposed that the objective of principal Japanese forces is a point beyond Haicheng or Haityoou (Kaichau), another important group of these forces is concentrating in the district northwest of Takushan. Several skirmishes have occurred with Chinese bandits, in which three Cossacks were killed and four are reported missing. In the maritime provinces all is quiet.

The general staff has received the following despatch from Lieut.-General Sakharoff (Gen. Kuropatkin's chief of staff), dated May 15:

20 Dead Bandits.

"On May 14 I was informed that Chinese bandits had appeared in villages 16 kilometres west of Liaoyang, and I sent out detachments of riflemen, mounted and on foot and a company of infantry. No bandits were found in the villages, the inhabitants of which answered evasively. As the force was returning from the Village of Shantaidtza, 12 kilometres west of Liaoyang considerable numbers of bandits were discovered at a spot where they had been concealed by the villagers. The riflemen attacked the bandits, who occupied the outskirts of the village, from which they were dislodged. They left 20 dead and a number of rifles and many cartridges. Our loss was two soldiers killed and three wounded. The Japanese have reoccupied Kaouindian Sian."

THE MIYAKO STRUCK MINE.

Jap Cruiser Destroyed With Two Killed and 22 Wounded.

Tokio, May 17.—The Japanese despatch boat Miyako was destroyed in Kerr Bay by striking a submerged mine. Eight casualties are reported.

The Miyako was lost while assisting in the operations of clearing the Russian mines from Kerr Bay, northeast of Talienwan Bay, on which Port Dalny is situated. Admiral Kataka (commander of the third squadron), returned there Sunday with a detachment of his squadron, protecting two flotillas of torpedo boats, which had been detailed to complete sweeping the harbor by the removal of mines. Five mines were discovered and exploded, and the work was being suspended for the day when the Miyako struck an undiscovered mine, which exploded with tremendous force under her stern, on the port side, and inflicted immense damage on the hull. The Miyako sank in 22 minutes. Two sailors were killed, and 22 men were wounded. The rest of the crew were rescued.

Russians Retained Position.

Admiral Kataka reports that the Russians withdrew from Robinson Point (northeast of Kerr Bay, which adjoins Talienwan Bay), May 12, but they erected a temporary fort on a height northeast of Taku Mountain, where they mounted six guns and constructed protecting trenches. The vessels of Admiral Kataka's squadron shelled the Russians throughout Sunday, but the latter stubbornly retained their position.

The Japanese flotillas, while sweeping the bay, were exposed to the Russian fire all day, but continued their work uninjured.

The Miyako a Cruiser.

The Miyako was a cruiser of 1,800 tons displacement, and was 314 feet long. Her armament consisted of two 4.7-inch quick-firing guns and ten 3-pounders.

50 Miles of Railway Blown Up.

St. Petersburg, May 17.—The Japanese evidently are determined that there shall not be any further rail communication between General Kuropatkin and Port Arthur. Official advices received yesterday by the general staff say the Japanese have destroyed fifty miles of the railroad north of Kinchou.

No resistance was made by the Russians, who are gradually abandoning it, on the Japanese approach, Col. Spiridorof is seeking to render the railroad as useless as possible to the enemy by removing the switches and otherwise disabling it. The Russians are retiring because of the approach of the Japanese columns sent westward by General Kuroki immediately after the occupation of Fengwangcheng.

Experts who discussed the military situation yesterday expressed the opinion that General Kuropatkin will not remain at Liaoyang.

Russia Is Without News.

St. Petersburg, May 17.—Owing to the interruption of communication with Port Arthur, the Admiralty has no information of its own, either regarding the blowing up of the Japanese cruiser Miyavo on May 15 or the torpedoing and crippling of an armored Japanese cruiser in Talienwan Bay, May 10, by a naptha launch in command of a young Russian naval officer.

TWO ICE BREAKERS.

Government Will Hereafter Keep St. Lawrence River Channel Clear.

Montreal, May 17.—Commodore Spain of the Department of Marine and Fisheries, at a meeting held yesterday of the shipping interests and members of the Harbor Board, announced that the Government had decided to place two ice-breaking steamers on the St. Lawrence route between Quebec and Montreal. There will be one big steamer, which will keep the channel at Cape Rouge, the most dangerous spot in the channel, clear of ice during the entire winter, and a small steamer, which will be used between Sorel and Montreal.

Pig Iron From Canada.

London, May 17.—(C.A.P.)—The Glasgow Herald declares that the combined cargo of steel and pig iron on its way from Nova Scotia to the Clyde is full of interest to Britain and America. The question of the open door in Canada for British finished products, if Canadian bounty-fed steel continues to be received, is bound to become a live one in the early future. The paper deplores the fact that the Scottish iron-masters have not diverted their capital long ago to the ironstone fields of Newfoundland and Eastern Canada, instead of the unsatisfactory fields of Spain and Algiers.

Toronto Rhodes Scholarship.

Toronto, May 17.—Ernest Riddell Paterson, B.A., son of John A. Zaterson, K.C., 51 Wal[illegible] road, was awarded the Rhodes Scholarship at the special meeting of Toronto University Senate last night. At the University he took honors in classics, which is his favorite course of study, and which he intends to pursue at Oxford, whither he goes in the fall. He graduated in 1902, in which year he was editor of Varsity.

Judgment Reserved.

Toronto, May 17.—In the Court of Appeal Chief Justice Moss presiding the application on behalf of E. A. Dunlop, M.P.P., for North Renfrew, was heard yestorday. Mr. Dunlop wishes to have the Rev. J. A. Macdonald, managing editor of The Globe, committed for contempt of court, on account of an editorial published on May 6 entitled "A Celebrated Election Case." I. F. Hellmuth, K.C., appeared for the applicant, and A. B. Aylesworth for the defendant. Judgment upon the application was reserved. The argument lasted over three hours.

MAIL BAG ROBBERY AT NAPANEE DEPOT.

LETTERS FOUND RANSACKED AND BURNED BY TRACK.

Napanee, May 16.—Some time during Sunday morning a locked mail bag was stolen from the G. T. R. station here. The first known of the theft was when some children walking on the track east of the station on Sunday afternoon discovered some letters near a culvert about 500 yards from the station. The matter was reported to the Chief of Police, who, upon investigation found the bag which contained the letters and a number of burned and torn letters near the culvert.

On making further enquiries it was learned that A. Giroux, the night operator at the station, had occasion between 4 and 5 o'clock to step out of his operating room to the semaphore close by to turn it for an incoming train, and when he returned he observed the door of his room standing open. He glanced in the corner where the mail bags lay and thought everything was all right, and that perhaps he had not closed the door when he went outside to the semaphore.

It is said that the bag contained about one thousand ordinary and several registered letters. A registered package addressed to W. P. Deroche was not tampered with, and only one registered letter is reported missing.

The rain-soaked and mutilated letters were gathered together, and as far as possible will be delivered to the owners. In some cases the address is completely obliterated owing to exposure to the rain which fell Sunday morning.

A PECULIAR FEATURE OF THE CONTRACT.

The average man would be inclined to think that the Grand Trunk Railway Company, having induced the Dominion Government to build $151,000,000 worth of the new transcontinental railway, while the company pays for only $14,500,000 worth of it, would have been satisfied. But there seems to be no limit to the demands of the men who are engineering the deal. In addition to the concessions set forth, the Grand Trunk drove the Government into an arrangement whereby the country, at the end of the company's fifty year lease, will be compelled to take over such non-paying branches as the company may elect to dispose of. Of course the country will be forced to hold the bankrupt portions of the line.

But the Government, in addition to assenting to such generous terms for the company, have stipulated that, at the end of the lease, the Grand Trunk shall have running rights for a further period of fifty years over the Eastern division. That means that the Grand Trunk will be in a condition to compete with the Government over a line built exclusively by the people. But this section of the road extends only to Winnipeg, and will include only such feeders as the Grand Trunk will have found to be unprofitable. The Grand Trunk on the other hand will hold the Western section and the paying branches. On none of these will the Government have a right to run its trains. Why should the Grand Trunk get running rights on the Government section, whilst the latter is to be shut out from the company's territory? Could a more ridiculous arrangement be imagined? But it is to such a scheme that Laurier has committed Canada.

TIMELY TOPICS.

No use railing about the rails on Front street. When the litigation is over they will be either taken up or covered up, and in the meantime people can grin and bear it.

By the way, where is that litigation going on? Before the Privy Council?

• • •

The city's interest account is an interesting matter, especially to the interested parties.

• • •

A member of the Board of Education tells us that he has looked into the matter ventilated in this column on Saturday last, namely, the alleged over-working of school-children by allowing them to attend school during hours not authorized by the school regulations. The results of our informant's investigations show him that: The teacher whose actions have been the cause of criticism is one of the oldest, most capable and painstaking of the Public School staff; the practise complained of has been going on at this season of the year for some time; the children attend, during the unauthorized time, entirely of their own volition, by and with the consent of their parents; the work performed by the teacher in question is entirely gratuitous and simply for the good of the boys and girls, who desire, by a little extra effort, to perfect themselves in certain branches of study; and, lastly, anybody who sees the children in question would scout the idea that extra study was injuring their general health.

• • •

That is the other side of the question, and rather a creditable side, too, it seems to us. It is not denied that the children do extra work, neither is it denied that the Board of Education could, if they so desired, put a stop to the practise by refusing the use of school buildings during unauthorized hours, but it is not likely, according to our informant, that they will do anything of the kind. Our informant seems to think that a school teacher who takes sufficient interest in his pupils to give up a large portion of his own time for their benefit is entitled to much more praise than blame, and many people, no doubt, will agree with him.

• • •

Is the above explanation satisfactory to the gentleman who unloaded the complaint on Saturday last? If not, we will be glad to hear from him again.

Mr. Hays, manager of the Grand Trunk Railway, gives as a reason among others, for increasing freight rates, the Government Bill passed last sesion by the Ontario Legislature. He says: We cannot have our expenses and taxes materially increased, and also increase our capacity at great cost, without adding to our income by raising the rates to a reasonable extent. Our actual expenses for "snow removal" (not including detention time of trainmen, etc.) for January, February and March, 1904, for our lines in Ontario, composing the Northern and Middle divisions only, as compared with the same three months of 1903, show an increase of $242,399, or 870 per cent., also $231,013, or 586 per cent., as compared with 1900.

Now that war is again raging, it is interesting to look over the cost in men and money of some great wars of the past sixty years. The American War of Secession is computed to have cost £160,000,000 ($1,740,000,000) and 554,000 men. To France alone the war with Germany cost £348,000,000 and 127,000 men. The Germans lost 44,890 men. Russia's last war with Turkey cost her £100,000,000. The total loss in men was about £308,000,000, and 386,000 men.

Dr. Cleaver in Bridge St. Church last night, but I failed to see why, when the entertainment was supposed to start at 8 o'clock, and the audience was particularly requested to be there at that time, we should have been compelled to sit for nearly half an hour and listen to Mr. Hunt's playing, of which most of us hear enough on Sunday, I think, if he wanted to play selections on the organ, he might have started earlier. Had the vocal number been commenced at 8 sharp, it would have been much before 10.30 when Dr. Cleaver's interesting lecture was concluded."

SPORTING NOTES.

The West Belleville Bounders challenge any nine in the city to a game of baseball on Victoria Day, May 24. Nobody barred; the best team on the east side will be given a hearty welcome and a trouncing.

The two Canadian clubs are pretty well down towards the foot in the Eastern League table. It looks as though they will have to strengthen up a lot if they hope to catch a place in the first division.

The King's Plate, it is now said, will number fifteen. War Whoop looks like the probable favorite.

Jake Brown, of Cobourg, a hockey player, was given a purse of gold and a pearl pin on the occasion of his leaving that town for the west.

How many Browns are there playing hockey in the good old winter time?

In the Eastern League, Jersey City, with 13 games won and only 1 lost, looks like the best of good things. The Jerseymen seem rather fast for their company.

Under the new baseball rules, the batter is not entitled to be given first base for a balk. Balks now only affect the base runner, and the only effect of a balk is to advance all base runners at the moment on bases. In the Eastern League, however, special instructions nullify this latter clause with regard to the runner on third base unless forced to score by others behind.

A NOTED HORSEMAN'S EXPERIENCE.

Mr. Antoine Wendling, owner of Deveras, 2.11 1-4, and proprietor of the Clifton House, Brockville, says no liniment compares with Nerviline for general use around the stable. For strains, sprains, swellings, internal pains and especially for affections of the whirl bone Nerviline is unequalled. Mr. Wendling believes Nerviline is indispensable as a horse liniment; it has strength, penetrating power and works thoroughly. Every horse and stock owner should use Nerviline. THE NEW ELECTRIC ROAD.

CONTEMPLATED LINE BETWEEN TORONTO AND KINGSTON.

(Toronto World.)

A. B. Turner, who is connected with the Ontario Electric Railway Co., which proposes constructing a line from Toronto to Montreal, is at the King Edward Hotel. He gave the world a most interesting interview of how the big undertaking is progressing, and enumerated just a few of the advantages the road when completed will have to offer the thirty-four cities, towns, villages and townships between Kingston and Toronto. It is between these points that the first construction work will be commenced and the road operated. When asked what he thought the chances of the Ontario Electric Railway becoming a reality were, he replied:

"They become brighter every day. And the reason of this is, to my mind, the fact that communities in which we have so far gone fully realize the benefits a transportation service of this kind has to offer. So far there have been fifteen towns and townships between Kingston and Cobourg. Without exception the citizens have almost unanimously declared in favor of having the railway. Meetings have been held in all these places referred to, which have been called by the Mayor or Reeve, and it is by the amount of enthusiasm at these displayed that an evidence of how the scheme is viewed can be gained."

It is the intention of the Ontario Electric Railway Co. to run its own boats for carrying freight from Kingston to Montreal till such time as the road is extended to that point. By this means the shippers will have the privilege of sending their goods from Toronto right through to Montreal, at a uniform rate, about one half of the present one."

There is nothing equal to Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator for destroying worms. No article of its kind has given such satisfaction.

Only 900 people in 1,000,000 die of old age.

Some persons have periodical attacks of Canadian cholera, dysentery or diarrhoea and have to use great precautions to avoid the disease. Change of water, cooking and green fruit is sure to bring on the attacks. To such persons we would recommend Dr. J. D. Kellog's Dysentery Cordial as being the best medicine in the market for all summer complaints. If a few drops is taken in water when the symptoms are noticed no further trouble will be experienced.

Cut the trunk, the branches fall of themselves.

For coughs, colds, bronchitis and all lung and throat troubles there is no preparation of medicine can compare with Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It never fails to afford prompt and permanent relief. It removes all soreness and heals the diseased parts. It immediately soothes the most troublesome coughs, and by promoting expectoration, removes the mucous which stops up the air tubes which causes difficulty in breathing, thereby gives relief to that depressing tightness experienced in the chest. Public speakers and singers will find Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup of inestimable value, as it speedily and effectually allays all irritation and huskiness in the throat and bronchial tubes and gives power to the vocal cords, rendering the voice clear and sonorous. If parents wish to save the lives of their children and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness, give the Syrup according to directions.

A tailor made woman is one of the noblest works of man.

To Those of Sedentary Occupation—Men who follow sedentary occupations, which deprive them of fresh air and exercise, are more pone to disorders of the liver and kidneys than those who lead active, outdoor lives. The former will find in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills a restorative without question the most efficacious on the market. They are easily procurable, easily taken, act expeditiously, and they are surprisingly cheap considering their excellence.

A self made man has his private opinion as to what is the noblest work of God.

A Sure Cure for Headaches. — Bilious headaches, to which women are more subject than men, become so acute in some subjects that they are utterly prostrated. The stomach refuses food, and there is a constant and distressing effort to free the stomach from bile which has become unduly secreted there. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are a speedy alterative, and in neutralizing the effects of the intruding bile relieve the pressure on the nerves, which cause the headache. Try them.

Some men whose lives are blameless in other ways will whistle "Bedella."

The Well Known Strengthening Properties of IRON, combined with other tonics and a most perfect nervine, are found in Carter's Iron Pills, which strengthen the nerves and body, and improve the blood and complexion.

UNTOLD MISERY — WHAT A WELL-KNOWN COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER SUFFERED, AND HOW HE WAS CURED.—Gentlemen, about five years ago I began to be troubled with Dyspepsia, and for three years suffered untold misery from this terrible complaint. I was at that time travelling for Messrs. Walter Woods & Co., Hamilton, and was treated by some of the best physicians in the country, but to no purpose. I continued to grow worse, one day I was induced to try a bottle of Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, and to my great surprise and joy, I soon began to improve. I continued using this medicine and when the third bottle was finished I found I was entirely cured, and as a year has elapsed since then, I feel confident that the cure is complete and permanent. To all afflicted with this distressing complaint I heartily recommend Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, believing that the persistent use of it will cure any case of Dyspepsia. (Signed)

Some second thoughts occur several minutes later.

He Has Tried It.—Mr. John Anderson, Kinloss, writes: "I venture to say few, if any, have received greater benefit from the use of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil than I have. I have used it regularly for over ten years and have recommended it to all sufferers I know of, and they also found it of great virtue in cases of severe bronchitis and incipient consumption."

JEWELRY OF TODAY.

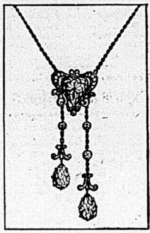
What Women Are Wearing—Some Chic Specialties For Men.

The necklace is the important item of the season. It has been brilliantly launched upon what promises to be a highly successful career. In close touch with this runs the string of pearls or other beads.

Large and costly corsage ornaments have been among favored pieces. The bracelet, that truly feminine and historic ornament, is reported as coming in again "with surprising rapidity."

Of the use of rings it would be impossible to say too much. A ring has this season been introduced which is especially designed for a lady's little finger. This is of heavy gold set with a line of fine diamonds.

Earrings, as far as positive assertion of the jewelers goes, remain in statu quo in this country, yet many small indications point to their greater use for the future. Earrings are worn abroad, and wherever women may procure them there are undoubtedly more to be seen in use here than was the case a year ago. It cannot be said that the rising generation is having its ears pierced to any noticeable extent, yet any woman who so fancies feels free to wear earrings as far as fashion goes.



LA VALLIERE OF DIAMONDS.
[Heart and pear shaped stones showing the new twentieth century cutting.]

The restrained and tasteful decoration of one stone with others is coming into the newer school of American jewelry. A solitaire ring—diamond, ruby, sapphire or pearl—will be enhanced with small diamonds imbedded in the shank on each side; the richly carved and pierced platinum mounting of a colored stone or stones will be incrusted with tiny diamonds; a duchesse ring will show forked shanks set with diamonds. There is more exercise of design than heretofore in the mounting of the gem, in the building up of an ornament.

Just now jewelry fashions, in common with others, revert strongly to the Louis XIV., XV. and XVI. periods. The fashionable La Valliere, of which an illustration is here given, is dedicated to the spirituelle charm of Louise de la Valliere, the lovely and unhappy favorite of Louis XV. The La Valliere as an innovation upon the broad collar of diamonds or pearls is followed but not displaced by the "festoon" or "draped" necklace that has proved the favorite of the year. Rich pendants worn on fine platinum chains and pendent effects in necklaces are also in vogue.

Oscillation of brilliant jewels promises to be one of the effective points of the coming season. Bows tied with all the nattiness of a Frenchwoman's fingers continue a favorite design. These, together with sprays and birds, are exquisite in the little diamond "handy pins" that cater so daintily to the minor wants of full dress toilet.

An elegant phase of men's sleeve buttons in the future is to be the chain link and a handsome natural cabochon stone. The open circle seems to be a coming favorite in men's scarfpins. It is of gold set with a line of small stones, diamond or colored.

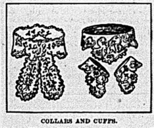
An increased number of shapes is used in fine stone cutting. In diamonds come the round, square, oval, pear, marquise and heart shapes. All these, as well as the cabochon, are found in emeralds, rubies and sapphires.

Women's "handy pins" that are models of good taste are of bar form enameled on gold in dainty and lustrous pink or blue and set with a narrow row of stones.

The new cutting of the diamond, "the twentieth century," should be noted; also the discovery of "kunzite," a stone of lilac or violet color, ranking probably with the tourmaline in value, which is being utilized in all kinds of jewelry.—Elsie Bee in Jewelers' Circular.

Delicate Neckwear.

Spring and summer neckwear promises to be very dainty and taking. Two pretty pieces are illustrated—a collar in lace, either white or ecru, and one of the favorite embroidered sets of collar and cuffs.



COLLARS AND CUFFS.

Never think needed rest a waste of time.

Torture In Colombia.

It is a common thing for a Colombian boy of twelve to fourteen to be thrashed to death with cowhide whips for "deserting" from the army—that is to say, running back home after he had been forcibly enlisted. It is generally common for a mere child to be hung up by the thumbs until he dies because he will not—or cannot—say where his father is hidden. Women have been crucified because they have refused to betray their husbands, and others have been treated infinitely worse.

Didn't Know How to Play.

"Charley, dear," said young Mrs. Tomkins, "I have done you a great injustice."

"In what way?"

"I suspected you without reason. I asked several of your friends that you go out with of evenings whether you knew how to play poker, and every one of them thought a minute and said you didn't."

The Envious One.

The envious person is in pain upon all occasions which ought to give him pleasure. The relish of his life is lost, and the objects which administer the highest satisfaction to those who are exempt from this passion give the quickest pangs to persons who are subject to it. All the perfections of their fellow creatures are odious.

MAKING WAX FORMS

SHOW FIGURES FOR SHOPKEEPERS ARE COSTLY AFFAIRS.

The Way the Heads Are Molded, Dressed and Finished—The Hands and Feet, as a Rule, Are Made of Papier Mache in Imitation of Wax.

"Wax forms, or dummies," said the dealer, "have iron feet. Why have they iron feet? To weight them down, so that they will stand erect."

He stood in his workshop, a room as big as a concert hall. All around him helpers were making legs, heads, hands, trunks, feet. Floods of clear light from the glazed roof fell upon heaps of limbs, upon rows of heads, upon mounds of bodies. The place had a ghastly look. It resembled the scene of a massacre.

"The art of making show figures," said the dealer, "has improved." He took up in his hand the head of a young girl. The red lips smiled, revealing white teeth; the brown hair curled gracefully; the eyes were bright; there was a dimple in the cheek.

"A head like this," he said, "is worth $15. Heads range in price from $7 to $50. They are made of wax; they are hollow; the eyes are of glass, and the hair is human hair. I'll tell you how they are made.

"Wax—a great quantity of it—is boiled in a big kettle until it has the consistency of water. It is then poured into a row of hollow molds, the molds of heads, that stand awaiting it. The molds are hung up and shaken about. This process causes the wax to cool and to adhere in a crust to the mold's inside. The agitation is kept up until the crust of wax has reached the thickness that the operator requires, whereupon the hot wax, the surplus, is poured back into the kettle. About the mold, which is made in two halves, a jacket is placed, and the contrivance is put away to dry.

"When the drying is complete the mold is taken off, and a man goes over the wax head with a sharp instrument, clearing out the nostrils and ears and smoothing away the lines created here and there by the junction of the mold's halves. He also inserts, with a deft movement, glass eyes in the empty eye sockets.

"Now the head passes to a girl, a girl with a strange sort of needle, the eye of which is open, or split, at the top. The girl first puts on the eyebrows. She threads the needle with a hair, runs it through the wax and, withdrawing it, leaves the hair behind, for the needle's eye, that is open at the top, makes it inevitable for the hair to stay where it is put. The girl works with great rapidity. In a few minutes she has the head adorned with a pair of long and shaggy eyebrows.

"Next she puts on the hair. For this work she uses the same sort of needle, the hair being in every case human. For the cheaper heads, however, it is Chinese hair, a human, but very lusterless, coarse variety. Beside her stands a tiny spirit lamp. This she applies to the wax when it becomes so hard that the needle won't penetrate it easily. As soon as she finishes one head she passes on to another, while the head she laid down is taken up by a man.

"This man cleans it first with kerosene. Then he paints it all over a pleasant and inviting flesh color. He tints the cheeks, the ears and the nostrils with carmine, and he paints the lips with rouge. A girl, a professional hairdresser, now takes the head in hand, curls the hair and dresses it fashionably and applies a coat of French powder to the face. The head is now finished.

"Hands and feet are made, as a rule, of papier mache, enameled and painted a flesh color, so that they look like the best wax. Hands, feet, bodies, legs and arms are made in hollow molds."

The dealer led the way to the back of the shop.

"Here," he said, "are some men making forms of papier mache now. Watch them."

The workmen had molds of various sizes and shapes before them—one the mold of a hand, another that of a foot, a third that of a whole figure from the neck down to the ankles.

These molds were in halves. The papier mache that was to fill them looked in its dry state like blotting paper. Wet it resembled gray pulp. With this gray pulp the workmen lined the molds' interiors well, seeing to it that every cranny and nook got its thick lining. When the molds were filled—some were in numerous pieces—they were joined together, covered with their jackets and put away to dry.

The artists cannot protect, cannot copyright, their work in any way. Hence they are constantly being preyed upon by imitators and thieves. A dealer, for instance, will order an original head of a woman from a noted maker of show figures. He will turn out a masterpiece. The dealer will make a mold of it and sell duplicates of the head broadcast.

There were in the past only three or four makers of show forms in America. Now there are over 200. The average workman at this business makes from $20 to $25 a week. The artist of great ability makes from $40 to $60. Show forms of the best sort are worth $100 and more apiece. They are rented by their owners to shopkeepers more often than they are sold outright, the advantage of this method being that the shopkeeper through it is able to change his show forms often.

A BIG UNDERTAKING.

How Lord Stanley Will Nationalise the Telephone System of Great Britain —History of the Past.

Negotiations are progressing for the purchase of the National Telephone Company's system by the British Postoffice Department. Of that fact Lord Stanley, the head of the department, informed the House of Commons one day recently. The announcement will excite some attention in this province, where the problem of regulating telephone service has taken fresh possession of many minds. Ottawa proposed to solve it by setting one company to compete with another, but has apparently abandoned that idea for an exclusive arrangement with a single company. Toronto is about to make its choice between the same two principles of settlement. Port Arthur has ventured into municipal telephony; there is a company exchange in the town as well. To the interest in the telephone question the judgment of the Board of Railway Commissioners in the case of Port Arthur against the Canadian Pacific Railway Company and the Bell Telephone Company has contributed not a little. Here, where there is all this telephone controversy going on, Lord Stanley's announcement will not pass unnoticed.

Monopoly.

The swallowing-up of the National Telephone Company's works and lines into the Postoffice Department's great system of communication seems a natural development. Before telephones were known the Postoffice had got control of the telegraph lines of the United Kingdom. That it did not annex the telephone service when that came into demand was due to unfavorable circumstances. The telegraph lines had cost two million pounds more than the amount estimated, and, in 1879, when the owners of the telephone patents appeared in Britain, the Chancellor of the Exchequer was too strongly committed to economy to spare the money to buy them out. At all events, instead of being taken over by the Postoffice, the telephone service was left to the United Telephone Company, which had to pay the Postoffice Department for the license a royalty of 10 per cent. on its gross receipts. This arrangement, entered upon in 1880, was to terminate in 1911. To prevent encroachment on the Postoffice telegraph system the transmission of written message over the telephone lines was forbidden, and the operation of each exchange was kept within strictly defined local bounds.

Competition.

There was a demand for a change. Objections were made to the United Telephone Company's monopoly. Other companies wanted licenses. Connection between the exchanges of neighboring towns was desired. In 1884 Postmaster-General Fawcett threw the field open in telephone enterprise. He removed the restrictions as to the distance messages should be sent, and the requirement that they should be oral. But all telephone companies would have to pay the Government toll of 10 per cent. of the gross receipts. Competition did not develop, and could not well develop, until 1891, when the master-patents controlled by the United Telephone Company ran out. This company and the various local companies which sprang up under contracts with it held the field. Before the patents expired the United Telephone Company had, by a series of amalgamations, absorbed these subsidiary companies, and the consolidated concern became known as the National Telephone Company. This corporation had now exchanges in all the important towns, and had many of them connected by trunk lines. It was so strongly established that it could bar out competitors even after it lost the protection of its patents. This increase the cry against monopoly.

Government Takes Trunk Wires.

In 1892 the Postmaster-General so far yielded to this cry as to take over the trunk lines, confining private companies to local exchange areas. No new licenses were to be granted to companies for the whole country, but only for particular localities. This did not suffice. The municipalities, headed by Glasgow, demanded the right to establish exchanges of their own, but had to wait some years longer. In 1896 the Government acted on the law of 1892 and bought the trunk lines of the National Telephone Company. It built additional trunk lines, and in 1898 it had the most extensive trunk system in Europe. In the latter year a select Committee of the House was appointed to consider the undertaking of a telephone service by municipalities. This committee recommended competition both by the Postoffice and by the municipalities. The recommendation were adopted.

Municipality and State.

Under the new law the company could not be dispossessed or deprived of the privilege of extending or burying its lines in a town which had secured a license to establish a service of its own. In the four years which have elapsed since the Act was passed only three or four municipal exchanges have actually got to work, Glasgow being the foremost of them. And the Postoffice, which the Act authorizes to establish exchanges, has not done more than the municipalities to make the National Company's business less. In the provinces it has less than 5,000 subscribers, and the exchanges by which these are served are nearly all in localities where the company has not thought it profitable to operate. In London the Postoffice showed more activity, but even there it carries on business by agreement with the company for intercommunication, and for the use of the underground lines of the Postoffice by the company. This agreement also provides for the purchase of the company's plant in London when the license terminates at the end of 1911. Under this arrangement the company has very greatly expanded and improved its business. Outside of London it is on the trunk lines that the Postoffice has shown its greatest activity. It has 358 trunk line centres, and for every eight telegrams it handles it now transmits one long distance telephone message. But the long distance conversations in Britain are only about three per cent. of the total telephone conversations, the local communications making 97 per cent. And the National Telephone Company still does at least 90 per cent. of the whole telephone business notwithstanding the provisions for private, municipal and State competition.

Government Ownership.

As has been said, the company's license runs out on the last day of 1911, but the Postoffice has the right, under the agreement, to buy it out at the end of 1904. Lord Stanley's statement shows that, as Postmaster-General, he deems it wise to exercise that option, and no doubt the company sees the advantage of closing out now. There is scarcely a doubt that if the company bides its full time its property will pass into the hands of the Government for next to nothing, because it can be neither used by the company itself nor sold without a franchise to operate it, and no franchise can be got from a Government that means to nationalize the telephone service as it has nationalized the telegraph system.

FOR ENERGY AND STRENGTH--

ANTI-PILL

Prevalent conditions that go to make people look old and fasten age marks before their time are described in the following letter from a woman who received immediate relief from a sample of ANTI-PILL.

"I would wake in the morning feeling tired. My feet and ankles would swell. I had a horrible dragged sensation. My head ached as though it would burst. My bowels were never regular. I had a disagreeable feeling of overfulness after eating. Food would not digest, and caused great distress. Was nervous. I was treated for dyspepsia and constipation with little or no relief. A sample of Dr. Leonhardt's ANTI-PILL did me so much good I followed up its use, and two boxes has entirely cured me."

ANTI-PILL is sold by druggists, 50 cents, or mailed by addressing WILSON-FYLE Co., Niagara Falls, Ont. Free sample mailed to any address.

DANCE OVER AN ABYSS.

Sudden and Startling Termination to a Scottish Choir's Jubilation.

A Scottish choir party chose a strange dancing-hall last week, and their frolic had a sudden and startling termination.

The Edinburgh Select Choir had been making a first appearance at Cowdenbeath, and after a successful concert the members made their way to the old station, from whence it had been arranged that their carriage should be attached to a miners' train, which was to take them to Dumferline.

It was a bitterly cold night, and the prospect of a wait of three-quarters of an hour in the windswept station was anything but cheering. A resourceful tenor suggested that the interval might be spent in an impromptu dance.

Soon the party were waltzing in an adjoining shed to the merry music of a whistling basso, who, besides providing the orchestral accompaniment, also acted as limelight man with the aid of a small pocket electric lamp.

Cold and darkness were alike forgotten when the frolic was suddenly interrupted by the appearance of the horror-stricken stationmaster. The music ceased, and the waltzers made a dead halt as the man in uniform grimly announced that beneath the floor was a disused mine shaft.

The concert party hastily retreated, and the startling discovery was made that while the dance was in progress the old shed had sunk fully two feet below the station platform level!—London Daily Mail.

Facing Death Calmly.

Some few years ago a Swansea vessel was caught in a terrible gale. The captain had his wife on board, and when the wind was still rising he told her to go down below and sleep, for all was well.

He remained on the bridge till the mate came up, and said, "We've done all we can. Hadn't you better tell the chaps to get out the boats?" "Yes, yes, my lad, if you think so," said the captain, who knew very well the only chance left was whether to go down with the ship or in a small boat, which couldn't live ten seconds in that sea.

The engineer came up with the news that the fires were all out. "Very well, my lads," said the captain, quietly; "save yourselves if you can." "Won't you fetch your wife on deck, sir?" asked one of the men. "No!" was the calm reply: "let her sleep, poor old girl. I am going down to have a smoke."

And smoking by the bedside of his sleeping wife, he went down with the ship.

THE MESSENGER FROM KHARTOOM

BY ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

Author of "Dr. Jack," "Dr. Jack's Wife," "Miss Caprice," Etc., Etc.

seems dissatisfied, save Mr. Grimes. That worthy shakes his head seriously a number of times and frowns, as though something weighs heavily on his mind. He can be heard to mutter, too, and the burden of his complaint is always in the same strain:

"A great mistake to only wound him. A scotched serpent is dangerous. We will hear from him again."

CHAPTER XVI.

Once more in Cairo they proceed to look after various duties that call for attention, Mr. Grimes going one way, Sandy to send his long-delayed telegram securing passage on the good steamer Alhambra, while Mynheer Joe goes at once to Shepherd's, where he has, later on, an appointment with several diplomatic representatives of the British Government, who desire the fullest particulars he can give concerning the sad event that recently happened at Khartoom.

From a window of the hotel a pair of anxious eyes note his coming. A fluttering white kerchief attracts his attention, and he sees the face of Molly. She waves again and he bows. A tremendous load is taken off her mind. She has suffered keenly in the suspense that has weighed upon her ever since she heard the voices below in the court and learned from her father that Mynheer Joe had gone to fight a duel with the Russian baron.

Joe does not see her until evening,and then her look of eager interest tells him that she is acquainted with all. He flushes with a feeling akin to shame.

"You seem to have come out of your little difficulty with credit, Mynheer Joe," she murmurs, as she walks at his side.

"Who told you about it, Miss Molly?"

"I heard you leaving, and my father told me there was about to be some sort of an affair of honor, he called it."

"I am sorry you heard of it," he says.

"You have the glory of being the victor."

There is a slight sting of bitterness in her voice which he feels keenly.

"It is a glory I never sought. I have not paraded it about Cairo. Being the challenged party I was compelled to fight, or let that man, whom I despise, believe I feared him."

"And what was it all about?"

"He insulted my flag to my face. I am an American and resented the insult by tossing a glass of wine in his face. Then came the challenge. We had it out with swords under the palms, and I hope it is done with."

"But I have always heard the baron had no equal as a swordsman," she says quickly.

Mynheer Joe smiles.

"Still, good fortune attended me, and that sometimes makes up for lack of skill, you know," he replies, but Molly believes he has not told the whole story, and privately makes up her mind to question Sandy at the very earliest opportunity that offers.

"I have not seen the baron to-day"—looking him steadily in the eyes. "You did not kill him, I hope," with a shudder.

"Oh, no! Merely a puncture through the shoulder of his sword-arm that will keep him quiet for a few days, perhaps. Mr. Grimes—"

"Well, what about Mr. Grimes?" seeing that he hesitates to go on.

"He declared it would have been better for the whole of us if the baron had gone down in the duel; but I assure you I have no desire to see his blood on my hand. Let us talk something more agreeable, Miss Molly."

"I understand he intends going to India on the same steamer with us."

"We will fervently hope and pray that something may occur to make him change his mind before we start," says the traveller, not thinking it good policy to say anything about Sandy's little scheme until they see whether it turns out to be a success or not.

So they drift upon other subjects, of which there are plenty to discuss. During the day, Mynheer Joe has met Molly's father and talked matters over, so that he knows much of their plans for the future and can shape his own accordingly.

It is their last night in the grand old city of Cairo. When darkness again descends over Egypt, they hope to be on the crack vessel of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company's fleet, heading for Port Said and the Suez Canal.

Whether Joe is conscious of the fact or not, Molly soon discovers that her companion is the observed of all. Women and men look at him secretly or openly stare. The news of the duel has permeated society in Cairo; it is a secret no longer. Nearly every one is glad the affair turned out as it did, for the baron has made few friends in Egypt. Besides, it is human nature to delight in seeing pride lowered and; ever since the Russian came to Cairo his reputation as a duelist has been noised abroad. The man who has downed him must naturally be a hero, outside of the fact of his connection with the fall of Khartoom.

Molly sees the admiring glances and she is proud of Joe; the very fact that he seems unconscious of his exalted position raises him still higher in her estimation. As for that worthy, he thinks of nothing beyond the fact that her smiles raise him to the seventh heaven of exaltion, and that he would gladly bask in them forever.

It may be readily imagined that with the evil genius locked up in his room, groaning and cursing with the pain of his wound inflicted by a rival, the two young people pass a delightful evening, which neither of them will be liable to forget in time to come.

Mr. Grimes is present and keeps a watchful eye upon them, for he has a grave suspicion that further mischief will be hatched out by the ingenious mind of the baron and, under such circumstances, it behooves him to be constantly on guard in order to thwart any diabolical plans.

At last the great caravansary becomes quiet, and the square in front loses its brilliant,bustling appearance. The howls of stray curs alone break the stillness of the night, as they gather here and there to hunt in packs, often rending each other.

Morning again!

It is the day when the Alhambra is due at Alexandria, and the train leaves Cairo for the city at the mouth of the Nile at eight. What is an early breakfast to sojourners in Egypt is despatched, and then the travellers are taken to the train that is in waiting.

As yet they have seen nothing of the baron. Mynheer Joe wonders if the Russian's absence is in any measure due to the machinations of Sandy. He endeavors to read the face of the little war correspondent, but it is no go. The great Napoleon could not have presented a more unruffled countenance. Sandy looks as innocent as a babe.

It lacks but five minutes to eight when a carriage drives up. The baron alights from it. All notice that his right arm is in a sling, but his face has a smile upon it as he bows.

He does not go alone. Colonel Taylor and the Hindoo servant are in his company, and look after the portmanteau and various packages.

Mynheer Joe realizes that Sandy has not yet had a chance, in all probability, to put his little game into operation. Perhaps he does not desire to do so until the last hour. He wonders what sort of a scheme it may be, and how the little correspondent will manage to manipulate the wires.

Then,as the baron and his companions enter a compartment, Joe loses them, and they drop from his mind at the same time.

Our five friends occupy one carriage, and have quite an enjoyable time during the seven hours it takes them to make the hundred and thirty miles between Cairo and Alexandria.

Lunch has thoughtfully been provided, and is enjoyed en route. Mynheer Joe sees more to admire in Molly Tanner with every hour of his acquaintance, and if the thought had not come to him before, he is now fully resolved to win her for his wife.

Why not, when fate seems to have made them for each other? He has saved her life; they meet again in a peculiar fashion and are mutually attracted; she is the one who would benefit by his uncle's will in case he never turns up—all these things can mean but one result. She must be his.

He revels in the thought that the worthy old pater may return to his beloved Chicago while the young people, filled with the desire to see more of the world, visit the strange places of earth, to add to the geographical knowledge of humanity. With such a companion, it will be happiness to isolate oneself for months, if need be, in the wilderness. He only longs for the chance to try it.

Mynheer Joe is no fool, if he has spent much of his later life away from society. He does not wish to be too abrupt. It is just as well that they get to know each other better before he attempts to assume the position of lover.

The journey becomes a trifle wearisome with such slow time, and all are really glad when Alexandria is reached, about three in the afternoon.

The tourists are taken to the Hotel de l'Europe, on the grand square. If the steamer arrives, they will have to make a speedy transfer, as she will not remain more than an hour or so.

Sandy becomes all business.

He asks none of them to join in his secrets, but disappears from view. Perhaps he means to get the first information concerning the coming of the steamer and has his own way of doing it.

At exactly five minutes to four he makes his appearance at the hotel.

"Steamer is in sight!" he says to Mr. Grimes.

"How do you know, Sandy?" asked that worthy.

"I had a good glass and the pasha's palace afforded me a fine situation for observation. She will be in at five and leave at six. See that you are ready."

"Look here: How about that little engagement you made t keep—"

"Silence, my dear fellow! Say nothing, but keep your eyes open." And Sandy marches to find the others and communicate his news.

Mr. Grimes looks after him and smiles.

"I really suspect the sharp little fellow has been up to something or other. He has good friends here in Alexandria among the officers, who would do a good deal for him. I wonder what his game is, and if he will succeed in giving the baron his second knock-out. Perhaps it will be my turn to have a hand in the game ofter a while."

Sandy cannot hope to keep the news of the approaching steamer from all others, nor does he desire to do so. All that he wants is to get his friends in readiness, so there may be no delay on their part.

He is off again as though very important business demands his attention; nor do the others see him until it is time to leave.

Amid the bustle of departure from the hotel Sandy again shows up and secures his baggage. They are soon landed at the quay. The steamer lies some little distance out and shows signals that demand haste on the part of those coming aboard.

Then begins a din that is only equaled by the shouts of the donkey-drivers in the public square. The boatmen of Alexandria can give even a New York hackman points about bulldozing a traveller into accepting their particular craft. The clamor is intense, and at times it actually looks as though some of the rascals might lay violent hands upon the travellers and attempt to toss them into their boats—a proceeding that would result disastrously to the boatmen.

At length, however,they hire a couple of boats to take themselves and luggage out to the steamer and when this point has been actually settled the mob quiets down like a hive of bees after an eruption, or else seeks fresh victims.

Mynheer Joe notices that another party is embarking near by—the baron. He has secured a boat, and with his two followers, heads for the steamer Then Sandy's plan has been a dead failure! Mr. Grimes turns a look that borders on the sarcastic upon the correspondent, and is immediately knocked all in a heap by the twinkle he sees in Sandy's eyes. It seems to say to him: "Wait, and you may yet see some fun, my fine fellow."

Surprised, Mr. Grimes notices that Sandy keeps one eye turned in the direction of the boat in which the baron is seated, as though he finds deep interest there. He, too, turns his eyes in that direction.

At first he sees nothing out of the way. The man rows along after the indolent fashion of these lazy Alexandria boatmen, paying no attention to the signals from the steamer that indicate a lack of time.

Looking beyond, Mr. Grimes picks up his ears, so to speak for a glimmer of the truth flashes into his brain when he sees a boat propelled by a couple of British soldiers, and containing three others, one of them an officer, following the baron's craft, and not far behind.

They come up rapidly.

The Russian turns in his seat in the stern and takes one look at the other boat, but does not seem to bother his head over it a bit. In the course of two minutes the boat containing the soldiers is alongside the other, and the officer lays his hand on the gunwale.

"What does this mean?" demanded the baron in a loud, offensive voice.

Our friends motion to the men to stop rowing, so that they may hear what passes near by.

MAN OF SILK AND STEEL

FASCINATING STUDY OF THE LEADING MAN OF JAPAN.

One of Sir Edwin Arnold's Latest Articles Just Before His Death, Dealing With Marquis Ito, the Bismarck of Japan—At Home at Odawara—His Devoted Wife—Story of No Man's Land.

It was lately permitted me to sketch, for this newspaper, in light and respectful outline, His Imperial Majesty the Emperor of Japan as I saw him amid his troops upon the hills clad with purple and gold blossoms which fringe the southern shore of the island Empire.

Next to that august figure the personage who will necessarily rise to the mind when thinking upon that interesting country and its present profoundly important position is her great statesman, the Marquis Ito.

I have ventured to call him in the title of this brief paper the "Bismarck of Japan," but the similitude between the two characters is only partial; and hardly covers more than the single fact that history will probably speak of both as the renovators and, in a sense, actual creators of their respective nationalities.

If the German Chancellor-Prince was of "blood and iron" his Japanese anti-type would rather be described as one of "silk and steel."

Justly to make up the human blend which would best present the chief statesman of Tokio to western imaginations one would have to add qualities taken from the subtlety of Cavour, the patriotism of William Pitt, the tenacity of George Washington, and the diplomatic resources of such keen ecclesiastical Ministers as France possessed in Richelieu and Mazarin.

I am not pretending that Marquis Ito unites in his genius and temperament all that belonged to these epoch-makers, but merely that in intercourse with him a student of character might be reminded of each and all the above-mentioned in their turn.

After that would remain that aspect of perfect simplicity and naturalness which every true-bred Japanese keeps for his inner and domestic life.

I have seen the famous politician who stands to-day across the path of Russia almost as grandly as Horatius upon the bridge, with not very many more than the two companions of the Roman hero to share his uttermost dangers and innermost hopes—as plain a country gentleman, as contented a rustic squire, as could be found in the shires.

At Home at Odawara.

He did me the honor of inviting me to pass some time with him at Odawara, one of those lovely hamlets which dot the Pacific coast of the southern kingdom.

The native house which he occupied there had no affectation of wealth or luxury. It was only a typical rural abode, two stories, with no large number of apartments, but some of these furnished in semi-European style, and the others frankly native, and such as any Tokio merchant or fairly prosperous seaside farmer of the Tokkaido might have tenanted.

No show of state was visible, although, then, too, my illustrious host was the most powerful man in Japan. The neat and demure little maids who opened to us the outer shoji were "nesans," such as would be waiting to take a visitor's foot-coverings and to announce his arrival in any well-ordered Japanese house, but no guards or police or waiting men.

At the inner entrance was the statesman himself, wearing English garments and holding in his hand an English book.

The glory of the dwelling was its surroundings, its happy setting in the midst of the loveliness of that landscape, where the perfect hills came down to the perfect seashore, and one seemed to exist in the centre of a perfect picture.

At the point where the bright sea sparkled and foamed against the embankment of the garden there stood a little enclosure shut in with bamboo poles, lightly lashed to posts with grass string.

In the centre of this there paced about three or four grave storks, in their smooth but sombre plumage of black and white, with dark purple and bottle-green reflections—birds of restrained demeanor, dear to all Japanese artists and indispensable as symbols alike to the poets, historians and fan-makers of Dai Nippon.

These were high favorites, although I think they would have been glad to get out along the yellow sands, where the sea-shells and little crabs lay so invitingly, or among the square patches of the rice fields, whence innumerable frogs were beginning their evening chorus.

He spoke about the storks as "totems" of Japan, but I pointed away from the Tsuru to a great, glittering, long-bodied dragon-fly, balancing upon the leaf of a lily his jointed body of black and blue, big round eyes, formidable jaws, and filmy, powerful wings.

That also is an accepted symbol of the land, the "Tombo," resembling in shape the long winding line of the Japanese archipelago, which numbers more than 2,000 islands.

I remarked that it reminded me better of Japan than did the solemn storks, for, I said, "After the fashion of that splendid creature your Empire has cracked the skin of 'O, Jishin' and emerged into 'Meiji.' "

To this day all Japanese speak of the great uprising which put an end to the Shogunate as the "Earthquake," while they term the new era, which has now lasted 36 years, as "Meiji" (Beginning of Order).

Yet none but the ignorant regard Japan as commencing civilized life six and thirty years ago. She was a cultured nation of a date when Britain was barbarous, and fought the armada of the Mongul conqueror Kubla Khan victoriously before Howard and Queen Elizabeth saved England from the Spaniard and the Inquisition.

His Devoted Wife.

At dinner time we left talking about rural matters, and I listened with deep interest to what fell from the lips of him who, among the foremost, had built so strong and well upon the foundations which the "Earthquake" had fiercely laid.

Everbody knows about the early years of Ito's venturous life; how he foresaw the mighty future and prepared himself for it, studying the west down to its deepest principles, working his way to Europe as a common sailor, landing on England's shores with half a dollar in his pocket, but with a heart in his breast, ardent, patriotic, full of an Empire to be.

And by his side was the amiable lady who in the time of her childhood had seen this hero husband hiding for his life under the "tatami," while his enemies, searching everywhere and thirsting for his blood, dragged her by her long black hair from her cushions and threatened to kill her also.

Now she did the honors of her house, placid, demure, debonair, the kind eyes which had witnessed such deeds and days guarded by blue spectacles from the over-brilliant gold of the setting sun, while her illustrious lord, with only a gray hair or two in his black locks went back to finish behind the nearest screen the rules of the new Parliament, or busied himself in making lists of peers, as we catalogue pictures or books or sacks of rice.

I saw the great Marquis on the first day of that new Parliament, when, while peers and commons, with foreheads upon the floor, knelt in two hemicycles before the Mikado, he stood proud, but reverent, beside His Imperial Majesty, handing to him the first speech from the throne.

I shall never forget the bow of acknowledgment which the Mikado vouchsafed to the two Houses of his Legislature, thus simultaneously prostrate before him.

How would he discharge this recognition, descendant from the Sun, heir of a dynasty which has 2,000 years of record? He simply dropped his chin two inches and a half, so as just to touch the broad scarlet and white ribbon which crossed his breast, and in that Imperial parsimony of salutation I saw the inborn traditions of his line.

I saw and heard it all like a mouse at a chink in the wainscoat, for the master of ceremonies had solemnly whispered to me:

"You must not be seen. You are here by chance placed above the Emperor, which would be treason. You will see everyone sits below him except Ito. You must be honorably invisible." And so I was.

A Story of No Man's Land.

That night again in Tokio I had the honor of listening to him upon whom so much still depended, and was glad to find his first and last thought was to render Japan powerful enough to save herself, whatever might befall.

I should not, of course, dream of repeating here any of the weighty things he uttered, since they were all heard in private conversation; yet I may be allowed to mention an instance of his alert habit of mind and swiftness of action.

I had spoken of a group of islands eligible to possess, and, as I had gathered, not by any means out of reach of Japan's ownership if she wanted them.

Without directly replying he took a swift note in Japanese, despatched a messenger to the telephone, and returned quietly to the little pipe. I saw the message afterwards, the sense of it was:

"Send immediately full particulars, with map and latest commercial particulars, report of—" well, No Man's Land.

Not long afterwards I had occasion to find that he knew more about the spot in question than anybody, and the white and red flag of Japan floats over it now.

The last time I met the great Marquis was in Moscow, at the coronation of the reigning Czar.

Japanese Racial Distinction.

The first snow which follows maturity had sprinkled his temples and neck like the summer drift which lies upon the head of Fuji, but the firm face seemed more resolute than ever; the dark brows were even more sternly knit, the strong mouth had grown almost harder than before with use of words masterly and commanding.

He was not Ambassador for Japan at that time, but only, if I rightly remember, a representative Minister, who, so far as I could see, did not by any means waste his time while in the city of the green and golden domes.

It appeared to me that I was viewing history through an inverted telescope, seeing him and Count Lobanoff standing together, far off, in the miniature of events, but coming and certain to come into the large foreground.

The Russian statesman, who has not survived to carry out the anti-British plans he cherished, was tall, spare and punctilious; Marquis Ito is of average Japanese stature, which is lower than that of the west; and you could read difference of race in the Muscovite countenance, where the Slav blood mingled with the Teutonic, and that other countenance, which only the ignorant called Mongolian, and foolishly confuse with the yellow peoples.

It will be well when continental statesmen learn that a score of natural facts discriminate the Japanese people from the Chinese and the Tartars. There is more of Malay blood, there is even more of Kanaka and of Polynesian blood, in that fearless, self-reliant visage of the famous Marquis than of Gengis or Kulia Kean.—Edwin Arnold.

The Man and His Hat.

How often they disagree! Here comes a round-faced, fat man with a small Derby; here is a tall slender man with a thin face, and he is wearing a big cowboy hat! They don't go to the right store to buy Hats—not enough variety; can't find a hat to suit them, and rather than hunt around, take anything. You're bound to find the right hat here, because the variety is here—and fashion says: Wear the style that looks well. Bring your head here for satisfaction,

From Mr. W. H. Biggar, objecting to the payment to him of $100 for his account against the city of $186. Referred to the Executive Committee.

From the Board of Education, stating that $15,270 was required by the Board for this year. Laid on the table.

The accounts presented were:

Reports.

Reports from the various Committees as already published were read. Ald. Marsh was Chairman in Committee of the Whole.

The Executive Committee's report was first taken up and the various items of expenditure were passed without discussion.

Those Lots Again.

The Executive Committee's recommendation that the task of dealing with the Phillips injunction be referred to the same Committee which had dealt with the sale of the lots caused some discussion.

Ald. Panter thought that it should be referred to some other Committee, outside of the Special Committee appointed. There might possibly be some friction.

Ald. Magrath was of the opinion that this matter should be dealt with by the Committee which had been appointed. The Council should be a unit in the matter. The sale had been made and the Council should abide by that sale, although at first he was not in favor of the sale.

Ald. Panter had no idea of shirking in the matter, but he wanted to have an unanimous committee.

The recommendation was unanimously adopted.

The Water Question.

The Water Works Committee recommended that an extension of the main be made just east of the city's limits, near Herchimer Ave.

Ald. Magrath was of the opinion that people residing outside of the city should pay more for water and gas, as they have less taxes to pay.

Ald. Sulman said the city was already getting a good revenue for services outside of the city, such as the Deaf and Dumb Institute, Albert College, and Messrs. Scantlebury and Leslie. In the present case the city would not bear the expense of extension.

The recommendation was adopted.

The Gas Committee recommended that Mr. Baxter, of Detroit, prepare plans for the installing of coal retorts in the gas works here.

Mayor Chown—"Should we not ask some one else to prepare plans other than Mr. Baxter, who is engaged in the business of putting in gas plants?"

Ald. Sinclair—"Mr. Baxter is at the head of a firm which is installing coal plants in other places." The committee believed that Mr. Baxter was a good man to prepare plans and they could then ask for tenders for the work.

Mayor Chown—"Will not Mr. Baxter ask for pay to prepare the plans?"

Ald. Sinclair—"Mr. Thompson has written Mr. Baxter in reference to the matter and has not yet received an answer." Nothing definite had yet been done.

Ald. Gordon thought they could not wait too long in this matter. Mr. Baxter was a competent man.

Ald. Sinclair said the committee or Council would be called together as soon as Mr. Baxter was heard from.

This explanation was satisfactory, and the matter was allowed to drop.

A communication from Mr. Slater was considered.

Mr. Slater was heard in reference to the matter. Mr. Latta he said, owns some property on the north side of North Front St. and Ridney St. and he (the speaker) owns the south corner. Mr. Latta had given Mr. Slater orders to close up the opening which goes on to his property. Mr. Latta's barn is partly on the road. He asked the Council to take action to have the street opened.

In answer to a question Mr. Slater said it was a public street, but it had not been open continuously.

Ald. Magrath moved that the matter be left in the hands of the Chairman of Public Works, Street Surveyor and the City Solicitor.

Mayor Chown suggested that the City Solicitor write Mr. Latta in reference to the matter.

Ald. McFee was of the opinion that a surveyor would have to be engaged and a survey made.

Ald. Magrath's name was added to the committee, which was instructed to investigate and report.

The requisition from the Board of Education was endorsed.

Inquiries.

Ald. Magrath asked what rate of interest the city was paying the Bank, where the city's account was.

Mayor Chown—"5 per cent."

Ald. Magrath—"Can we not transfer the account?"

The Mayor—"Yes, if it is desired."

Ald. Panter—"Has anything been done about the footbridge yet?"

Ald. McFee—"Not as yet, but it will be attended to."

Mayor Chown—"Has a special account been opened up in the Bank for the granolithic walks?"

Ald. Panter—"Not as yet, but this will be done."

Introduction of By-laws.

Ald. Panter introduced four by-laws, namely, to amend by-laws Nos. 1043, 1157, 1158 and 1159. The by-laws were read a first time by title. They were in reference to the width of certain granolithic walks which will be built this year.

Council went into committee of the whole on by-laws, Ald. Sulman in the chair.

The by-laws were passed through their various stages and numbered respectively, 1160, 1161, 1162 and 1163.

Motions.

Ald. Ketcheson moved, seconded by Ald. Panter, that the Chairman of Railways and Parks be authorized to make an arrangement with B. A. Sanford to look after the disposal of dead fish and other carrion which float near the park, and to pay him $10 for the balance of the season.—Carried.

Ald. Magrath moved, seconded by Ald. Sinclair, that sealed tenders be asked from the various banks of the city as to the lowest rate of interest for handling the city's account.

Considerable discussion took place upon the motion, during which the majority of the members spoke. The prevailing opinion was that the best bargain possible should be secured for the city, but it was questionable if a change was desirable. At present the interest account was not large. As the Mayor pointed out, one account, namely, the rolling mills bonus, could not be transferred from the present bank, it having been voted upon by the ratepayers.

The motion was defeated, only three, namely, the mover and seconder and Ald. McFee, voting for it.

The motion was allowed to stand as a notice of motion, and the Mayor and Ald. Panter agreed to see the Manager of the Bank of Montreal in reference to securing a lower rate of interest if possible.

The 1901 Tax Roll.

Mr. Starling, who has in hand the tax roll for 1901, was present and was heard in reference to the same. He stated that he was endeavoring to have the roll closed up and returned. During the last few days he had collected $225.

Mayor Chown—"How soon do you think you can return the rolls?"

Mr. Starling—"Within a week or two."

It was decided to allow Mr. Starling to have the rolls for two weeks more, he promising to have his work completed by that time.

The Street Rails.

Just before the Council adjourned Ald. Sinclair asked if something could not be done about the street rails, to have them either taken up or covered up.

The Clerk said there was nothing new in the matter yet. The city could take up the rails, but the ties, fish plates, etc., could not be removed. The city no doubt owns the rails.

Ald. Panter—"Cannot we sell the rails?"

The Solicitor—"Yes, but nothing else." The matter might soon be decided by the court.

Council adjourned.

WHEN YOU NEED PHYSIC

The possibilities of trick bicycle riding has been pushed to the uttermost limit by the accomplishments of the Kaufman family of eight and the Jackson family of seven, both featured in the big programme of Ringling Brothers' circus this season. These performers have made wheel riding an art. They have conceived movements the carrying out of which calls for the highest daring and skill, as well as the keenest susceptibility to artistic grace and picture effect. They go through all the dainty figures of old-fashioned dances, as well as those of the present day vogue, with eccentricities thrown in to make the changes more thrilling or amusing. They work singly, in groups and all together, spinning around on the rear wheel, balancing upright on the handle-bar, turning somersaults across a wide table, with the wheel high in the air, and landing safely in the saddle, the entire family forming athletic poses on one wheel, and in a lot of other amazing ways are the laws of gravitation and physical limitations set at naught. This performance has been praised and honored in European capitals beyond any athletic feature seen in recent years.

DR. CLEAVER'S "LECTURE."

INTERESTING ENTERTAINMENT GIVEN IN BRIDGE ST. CHURCH LAST NIGHT.

A good-sized audience was present in Bridge St. Church last night to hear Rev. Dr. Cleaver, of Toronto, give what was advertised as a "lecture on Jean Valjean." Prof. Hunt played an opening voluntary in his customary finished way, and then Miss Mabel Vermilyea, charming in appearance and voice, sang "God's Slumberland" and "Clouds Will be Sunshine To-morrow." Miss Vermilyea seems to improve with each successive appearance. Mr. O'Flynn introduced Rev. Dr. Cleaver, who said he was not going to lecture, but would simply attempt to tell the story of Jean Valjean. And then for two hours the reverend gentleman held the audience spellbound as he recounted, in his own words, and with appropriate gestures, the story of the immortal character in Victor Hugo's masterpiece. The misfortunes, joys and sorrows of poor Jean were dwelt on tenderly; the gentle benevolence of the good Bishop and his spoons was told of in a way which caused many an eye to become moist, and the whole wonderful creation, as it was unfolded by the magnetic speaker, impressed the audience deeply, and one hardly felt the flight of time. It was admirable. One could not help thinking, as he heard Rev. Dr. Cleaver last night, that the stage missed a great actor when that gentleman decided to become a "sky pilot." At the conclusion of Rev. Dr. Cleaver's effort the audience was dismissed with the benediction, pronounced by Rev. Mr. Martin.

WEDDING BELLS.

MISS SADIE CROWE AND MR. LOUIS DAYMOND UNITED.

The Peterboro Times gives the following account of the wedding of a young lady formerly a resident of Belleville:

"A very pretty wedding was solemnized at St. John's Church last evening, about 8 o-clock, when Miss Crowe, of this city, and Mr. Louis Daymond, of Fenelon Falls, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. Rev. J. C. Davidson officiated, and the bride was assisted by Miss N. Riley, while Mr. D. Raymond supported the groom. The bride looked charming in a beautiful attire of grey ladies' cloth with white silk trimmings and black picture hat, and carried a bouquet of white roses. The bridesmaid was similarly attired and carried white carnations. Many useful and costly presents were received.

"The happy couple left on the 9 o'clock train last night for Buffalo, N.Y., and on their return will take up their residence at 398 Aylmer street."

In the Justice Shop.

Drunk.

John McConnell, an old man over 80 years of age, was arrested for this offence. This morning the Magistrate allowed him to go.

Kill the Dog.

Kitty Babcock was charged with being the owner of a dog which bit a young son of Mr. John C. Weir. The defendant was willing to have the canine destroyed and the Magistrate accordingly issued the animal's death warrant.

A Double Charge.

H. Lewis was charged with appropriating some pictures, the property of H. Findlay, and W. P. Lewis was charged with assaulting and using insulting language toward N. Winters. The complainants were guests at the defendants' place, and it is alleged that on Saturday evening the trouble complained of took place.

Considerable evidence was taken in the case. The charge of fraudulent appropriation against H. Lewis was dismissed, but W. P. Lewis was convicted of assault and using insulting language. Judgment reserved until Friday. Mr. Anderson for Crown, Mr. McMahon for defendants.

A Legal Question.

The following appears in the legal questions and answers column of the Mail and Empire:

C.L., Belleville.—Qu.—A left his team unprotected and untied on the main street of this city. The team ran away and collided with a horse and cutter owned by B. B's horse took fright and bolted, knocking down and injuring C, an old gentleman, who was walking on the sidewalk. Against whom must C bring his action for damages?

Ans.—The general rule of law is that the immediate cause of the damage, and not the remote cause, is to be looked at. But whoever does any illegal or wrongful act is answerable for all the consequences that ensue in the ordinary or natural course of events, provided the intervening agents were set in motion by the primary wrongdoer, and provided the injury was the natural consequence of the original wrongful act. In Scott v. Sheppard, the defence was held liable for the injury caused by a lighted squib, which was tossed by one person to another, until it reached the plaintiff, and put his eye out. In the present case it was A's negligence that caused the damage. A will therefore be liable to C.

Fell Three Storeys.

Kingston, May 17.—J. O'Gorman, head clerk in Gibson's Red Cross drug store, on King street, had a remarkable escape from death on Saturday night. He was carrying a box up in the third storey of the building and fell through the elevator opening. In his descent he struck against the floor of the second storey, the contact against which straightened him out, and he came down on his hands and knees instead of his head, and escaped with a dislocated wrist and a few bruises.

FOR CLOSER RELATIONS

Sir Charles Hardinge Reaches His Post at St. Petersburg.

New British Ambassador to Russia Received With Punctilious Ceremonies—In Russian Diplomatic Circles It Is Believed He Goes With Personal Mission From the King—specified Purpose, However Is still Veiled.

St. Petersburg, May 17.—Sir Charles Hardinge, the new British Ambassador to Russia, arrived in St. Petersburg at 2 o'clock yesterday. Because of the part the Ambassador is expected to play in carrying out King Edward's desire for closer relations between Great Britain and Russia, more than usual interest in his arrival was displayed in official and unofficial circles. The Government was extremely punctilious in the ceremonies imposed by international etiquette on the arrival of an Ambassador.

So soon as the Emperor returns to St. Petersburg Sir Charles Hardingo will present his credentials, and at the same time deliver a speech, which, it is expected, will reveal, guardedly, of course, the object of his mission. The authorities here attach considerable importance to the Ambassador's relations with King Edward. It will be regarded as being as much an expression of the views of His Majesty as one of the British Government.

In official and diplomatic circles it is generally known that the establishment of better relations between Russia and Great Britain is the object of Sir Charles Hardinge's mission. The specific purpose, however, are still veiled, despite the discreet enquiries made by foreign diplomats of their British colleagues here.

Mr. Maclean Warns Parliament re Transcontinental Railway.

Advises Government to Buy G.T.R. Stock on the Street and So Control the Grand Trunk Pacific—Mr. Borden on Government Ownership—Halifax Fisheries Award of 1871 to Be Referred to Privy Council.

Ottawa, May 17.—In the House yesterday, Sir Richard Cartwright introduced a bill to amend the act respecting the inspection of grain. The object of the bill is to consolidate a number of amendments, and to assimilate laws on the east and the west, which at present differ in some respects. The bill will be referred to a special sub-committee.

Mr. Borden asked if it had been decided to refer the Halifax fisheries award of 1871 to the Privy Council. Mr. Fitzpatrick replied that representatives of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island had asked for the reference and the Government had decided to grant their request. The form of the reference has not yet been decided upon.

The Minister of Militia stated in reply to E. F. Clarke that the municipality of Valleyfield has not paid over to the Government the sum fixed in settlement of its liability for the pay and maintenance of the troops called out on the occasion of the labor troubles in that municipality in October, 1900. Steps have been taken by the Government to collect the amount of the settlement.

A Five-Cent Difference.

In reply to Mr. Lefurgey, Sir William Mulock stated that tenders were called for the carrying of mails between Alberton and Kildare, P. E. I. Two tenders were received, one for $95 and the other for $94.95. The tender of $94.95 was accepted.

Mr. Ross of Ontario was informed that 36,666 emigrants arrived in Canada between Jan. 1 and May 1, 1904. During the fiscal year up to May 1, 19,527 homestead entries have been made or applied for.

Sir Richard Cartwright stated in reply to Mr. Clancy that sixteen seizures of binder twine have been made under the provisions of the General Inspection Act since Jan 1, 1902. In each case fines were imposed and collected.

Mr. Smith of Vancouver was informed that the Government has no information as to the proposed Imperial labor bureau to be established by the Salvation Army for the purpose of placing homeless and helpless children where they are needed in the colonies. There has been no communication between the Salvation Army and the Government with reference to the scheme. W. T. R. Preston had no authority for endorsing the scheme.

The 25 Millions of Stock.

When the bill to amend the National Transcontinental Railway Act was called, Mr. Bell of Pictou, moved an amendment providing that of the $25,000,000 common stock issued, the Government should hold three-fourths and the Grand Trunk Railway Company one-fourth. He explained that the country was assuming three-fourths of the cost of the road and should, therefore, hold stock in proportion to that obligation.

Mr. Sifton said that the common stock was to recompense the Grand Trunk for seeing the scheme through. Great expenditures would have to be undertaken as soon as the work commenced. The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company would have no credit in the money markets of the world. The Grand Trunk would have to furnish working capital and betterment. If the Grand Trunk hoped to make anything out of the common stock it would have to make the thing a success. The company could only make money out of the common stock by putting the Transcontinental on a sound and paying basis. If the country chose to take three-fourths of the common stock of the company, the company might reasonably ask the country to own and operate the road.

State Should Control.

Mr. Borden argued that the proposed amendment simply meant that the country should control the policy of the Grand Trunk Railway. How would the country suffer from such control? Would the ports of the Maritime Provinces be likely to suffer, or would freight rates be higher? Mr. Borden would not agree with the Minister of the Interior in the latter's plea that an injustice would be done to the Grand Trunk Railway Company, if the country held three-fourths of the common stock. He denied also that the Grand Trunk Railway under the contract is required to furnish working capital and betterment. The country was financing the scheme, not the Grand Trunk Railway Company. Mr. Borden declared that the Grand Trunk Pacific bargain would put back public ownership for fifty years.

Yankees Would Get It.

W. F. Maclean made the prediction that the upshot of the present improvident bargain would be the acquisition of the whole scheme by the railway monopolists of the United States. He said that with Grand Trunk stock on sale in Wall street and London there was nothing to prevent the American railroad interests from controlling both the Grand Trunk and the C.P.R., and that notwithstanding all the people's money which was being put into this project. It was the people of Canada who should control these roads by keeping the stock in their own hands. We are now but adding one folly to another.

Let State Own Roads.

"I believe," said Mr. Maclean in conclusion, "in the nationalization of our railways and the way to accomplish it is by the acquisition of stock in these railways. This bargain, therefore, I consider to be improvident, unpatriotic, unnational, and wholly against the public interests and, most of all, against the project which the people of Canada have most at heart, namely, the nationalization of our railways."

Col. Hughes declared that the Grand Trunk Pacific would divert traffic at Winnipeg to their American connections and thus ignore Canadian ports.

No Time Extension.

Dr. Roche of Marquette moved an amendment to the effect that no extension of time should have been allowed for the construction of the western section. There was no reason, he said, why the work should not be completed by 1908, the limit fixed by the original contract.

Mr. Haggart wanted to know if the Government would give anything in the way of assistance to the company before the completion of the road—that is, during the eight years allowed for construction.

Mr. Fitzpatrick made a lengthy statement, in which he carefully dodged the direct question. He would only say that there was no obligatian on the Government to give an advance on interim bonds, though the Government had power to do so.

Dr. Sproule urged that there was no reason why the prairie section should not be completed in the time provided under the original contract. The amendment would impose no onerous condition on the company.

Mr. Maclean said that what the West needed was immediate relief, not only in increased railway facilities, but in reduced freight rates. This the Grand Trunk Pacific scheme would not do. The way to give the West immediate relief in the way of increased railway facilities was to extend the I. C. R. to Georgian Bay, nationalize the Canadian Northern or the C. P. R. from Port Arthur to Winnipeg, and in this way put the Grand Trunk into the West forthwith. There was no hurry about the Winnipeg and Moncton section. It was useless, Mr. Maclean argued, to hasten the construction of a railway through a wilderness.

"Do you advocate the postponement of the construction of the eastern section?" asked Mr. Roche of Halifax.

"I certainly do," replied Mr. Maclean.

"There is no call in the east for increased railway facilities, and the construction of the eastern section will do nothing to reduce rates."

Mr. Maclean went on to say that he would give the Maritime Provinces all they are entitled to.

Oliver in Opposition.

Mr. Oliver accused the Conservatives of obstructing the measure to please the C.P.R.

Mr. Henderson rallied the member for Alberta upon at least his broken silence upon this question so vitally affecting the west.

Mr. Maclean put in another strong plea for Government ownership as conducive to reduction of rates.

"Would the honorable gentleman tell me how do rates on the State-owned railways in Europe compare with rates in this country?" asked Mr. Johnston of Cape Breton.

"They are vastly lower," Mr. Maclean replied. "The experience in France, in Australia, even in Japan, is that both passenger and freight rates are lower on State-owned railways." Even on the Intercolonial the rates were lower than on the Grand Trunk; although until the management of that railway was depoliticalized, it would never be a success.

Minister Is Absent.

Mr. Borden alluded to the absence of the Minister of Railways, whose opinion upon this subject the House had been in possession of.

Dr. Sproule also referred to the policy of the Government in muzzling Mr. Emmerson as indicating that they were ashamed of their new colleague.

The Finance Minister ventured the joke that the Opposition only valued the opinion of a Minister of Railways after he had resigned.

Dr. Roche's amendment was then declared lost, and the third section of the contract carried.

The fourth section was allowed to stand, and the 5th and 6th section were passed.

On the section stating that the Government will not be bound by the contract until the Grand Trunk has guaranteed the second series bonds of the G.T.P., and take $25,000,000 of the common stock, Mr. Alcorn moved an amendment binding the Grand Trunk to abide by the terms of the contract as to route and rates, and to encourage traffic through Canadian channels and to Canadian ports. The amendment was voted down.

Mr. Clancy moved the next amendment, which declared that the Government shall at all times have the right to inspect the books and documents of the Grand Trunk in reference to matters arising under the contract. This was also rejected.

Mr. Rosamond got leave to introduce a bill to decrease the capital stock of the Ottawa Insurance Company, a move rendered necessary, he explained, by losses sustained in the Toronto fire. The House adjourned at 11.30 p.m.

Drowned at Huntsville.

Huntsville, May 17.—Robert Swan, a young man employed as lumberman for the Muskoka Wood Manufacturing Company here, was drowned yesterday about 1 p.m., while going over logs to take up the slack in the boom. Ross Mantle, one of his fellow-workmen, got him out on a log, but the log rolling, they both fell in. Mantle had hard work to save himself, but Swan went to the bottom, and when taken out about ten minutes later, he was dead.

Found Dead.

Novar, May 17.—Daniel Stewart, an old resident of the district of Parry Sound, was found dead on the street here last night. Mr. Stewart had been engaged splitting wood for a resident of the town during the day, and was seen by several persons at work a short time before being found dead. Heart failure, no doubt, was the cause of his death, brought on by over-exertion.

JAPANESE ARE MASTERS; CLOSING IN ON HAICHENG.

Hold Liaotung Peninsula With Exception of Port Arthur.

Russians Admit the Situation—Japs Almost Within Striking Distance of Mukden—What the Russians Propose to Do—Will Make a Stand at Haicheng—Meanwhile Main Body of Jap Army is Advancing on that Place.

St. Petersburg, May 18.—Advices received by the general staff show that the Japanese are practically masters of all the southern and of the Liaotung Peninsula, save Port Arthur and the territory commanded by its guns. This result, so promptly brought about is due to the failure of the Russians to make opposition of any consequence to the Japanese advance.

A member of the general staff said to the Associated Press that the removal of the guns from the fortifications erected at Kinchau and the destruction of Port Dalny were primarily for the purpose of concentrating the entire Russian force at Port Arthur. The destruction of Dalny is complete, the breakwater and the buildings as well as the piers and docks have been blown up.

Advancing on Haicheng.

Mukden, May 18.—It was announced here yesterday that the main body of the Japanese force is advancing on Haicheng, about ten miles southeast of Newchwang and Kaipingkiachow, about thirty miles south of Newchwang, and that a smaller force is marching in the direction of Liaoyang. Important developments are probable.

JAPS NEARING MUKDEN.

Mikado's Soldiers Now Almost Within Striking Distance of the Russians.

Mukden, May 18.—The fighting line is steadily nearing Mukden, where Viceroy Alexieff's headquarters still remain. Little reliable information can be obtained by the newspaper correspondents, who are forbidden to proceed to the scene of operations and official information is withheld until advices are sent to St. Petersburg. It is now known, however, that the Japanese are almost within striking distance of the Russians, and that the forces protecting the Liaoyang are stretching eastward from the railroad along the Maotien mountain range.

Advancing in Three Columns.

The Japanese are advancing in three columns and were north of Siuyen and Fengwangcheng Monday evening. Two columns are reported to be working further to the northward, with the object of turning the Russian position and advancing upon Mukden. Numerous small engagements have been fought, but no decisive action has taken place. Port Arthur is now completely isolated by the Japanese expedition at Polandien. The Japanese are now operating in a rugged country, well suited to the Russian defence, but north of the Liaoyang to Mukden the country is a flat plain intersected by rivers.

NEWCHWANG EVACUATED.

Nine Transports of Jap Soldiers Surprised Russians Into Sudden Action.

Newchwang, May 18.—The Russians were totally surprised Monday morning by the announcement that nine transports convoyed by a squadron of Japanese ships, had suddenly appeared off Kaichau, twenty miles south of Yinkaw, and that 20,000 Japanese troops had already been landed. The disembarkation was completed Tuesday, and the Japanese force is expected here to-day.

Russians Will Stand at Haicheng.

This information accelerated the Russian evacuation, which was carried out in perfect order, and early Monday morning the gunboat Sivoutch was destroyed. The Associated Press correspondent professes to have received from the highest Russian authority information that the Russian forces will make a stand at Haicheng, and if defeated there will fall back on Liaoyang, where a determined resistance will be offered. Should they be again worsted, no stop will be made at Mukden, which the Japanese will be permitted to occupy. It is not believed the latter will advance into the interior until they have thoroughly established and secured their base of operations here.

Why Newchang Was Left.

St. Petersburg, May 18.—The complete withdrawal of the Russians from Newchwang is believed to have followed the strategic command of the port by the columns sent westward by Gen. Kuroki. The exact conditions under which the evacuation was brought about are not known here, as all the official despatches have been forwarded to the Emperor. The Foreign Office is not advised as to whom the administration of Newchwang will be handed over, but the authorities express confidence that the Russian commander arranged for the safety of the foreigners before his departure.

KUROPATKIN REPORTS.

Reports That Japs Landed and Began Marching at Kaiping.

St. Petersburg, May 18.—Gen. Kuropatkin telegraphs to the Emperor, under date of May 16, as follows:

"On May 16 our Cossacks encountered a force of the enemy composed of one battalion of infantry and two squadrons of cavalry belonging, apparently, to the Japanese guards' division near Kuandiansian and the fusilade lasted for an hour and a half. The fire of the Japanese infantry and cavalry was poor. We had one Cossack wounded, one horse killed and another wounded and two Cossacks missing.

"On May 15 the Japanese vanguard occupied Haibamentsa in the valley of the Platao River, Tsinngtao in the valley of the left branch of the same river, Shiftsiafutsu and Hitvouchen, in the valley of the Ai River and Kiandiansian.

"There were no Japanese at Siuyen on May 15.

"On May 14 and 15 the Japanese reconnaissances had not pushed beyond four and a half miles from the Station of Wafandian.

"On May 15 there was no advance of any considerable force of the enemy to the north of Polandien.

"No fresh report has been received regarding the Japanese raid on Kaichau."

"Towards noon 17 steamers approached Siungyuecheng and opened fire upon the town, while five vessels approached the shore.

"At 1.30 p.m. three large steamers appeared off the Cape, and at 3.20 p.m. the enemy landed at Huangtsiatung and commenced a march in the direction of Kaiping."

Continued Feints.

St. Petersburg, May 18.—General Sakharoff reports to the general staff, under yesterday's date, as follows:

"Gen. Samsonoff reports at 11.30 last night that the Japanese confined their efforts to feints at landing in the neighborhood of Siungyuecheng and Kaichau. Their vessels opened fire on the town of Siungyuecheng, on our scouts and on the coast.

"The Japanese squadron left after 5.30 o'clock, proceeding southwest, and several of its vessels remained visible on the horizon until dusk."

One General Is Retired.

St. Petersburg, May 18.—It was announced last night that Lieut.-Gen. Zassalitch has been relieved of the command of the second Siberian army division and that Lieut.-Gen. Count Keller, former Governor of Ekaterinoslav, has been appointed to succeed him.

Since the battle of the Yalu it has been predicted that Gen. Zassalitch would not long retain his command, but it is emphatically stated that there is no intention to disgrace him, and that if he returns from the Far East it will be on sick leave and at his own request.

Strike Over at Falls.

Niagara Falls, May 18.—The striking rock drillers and engineers of the Power Development Works have won a complete victory over Dawson & Riley, one of the principal contracting firms. Monday night an agreement was signed, whereby the firm agrees to an increase of pay amounting to five cents per hour to the rock drillers, drillers' helpers and steam engineers, and of two and a half cents per hour to the channel drillers. The agreement went into force yesterday, and continues for a year. The firm has also agreed to take back all the strikers, and that the works shall hereafter be strictly union.

Fell Out of Hotel Window.

Rochester, N.Y., May 18.—J. W. Maynard, traveling for a Chicago firm, was found outside a Brockport hotel yesterday with his neck broken. Every indication points to his falling a distance of 10 feet from the roof of the hotel shed.

GOOD NURSERY FOODS.

How to Make Graham Porridge, Barley Water and Rice Jelly.

Graham Porridge.—Half a cup of fine crumbs from a stale loaf of graham bread, one cupful of scalding milk. Do not boil the milk. Bring it to the scalding point and take from the fire. Stir in the crumbs and when cool enough to be eaten give it to the child with cream and a little sugar. It is slightly laxative.

Barley Water.—Two tablespoonfuls of pearl barley washed well and picked over, then soaked for an hour in enough tepid water to cover it, two cupfuls of boiling water, a very little salt, one teaspoonful of sugar. Stir the soaked barley without draining into the boiling water, salt slightly and simmer for two hours in a farina kettle, never letting it boil hard and stirring up from the bottom now and then. Strain through coarse muslin, squeezing well, and sweeten. Give quite cold or lukewarm, adding milk if the baby can digest stronger food than simple barley water. This last often agrees with children whose stomachs reject milk and artificial "foods."

Rice Jelly.—One-half cup of raw rice, one quart of cold water, a pinch of salt in the water, a very little sugar. Soak the rice for half an hour in cold water. Drain, add to the salted water, set over the fire in a double boiler and simmer for three hours. Strain through cheesecloth, squeezing hard, sweeten and add a little milk of the proper temperature for feeding. This is good for a baby who is suffering with disorder of the bowels. In this case omit the milk.—Philadelphia North American.

WOMAN AT HOME.

The Necessity of Exercising the Virtue of Toleration.

Tolerance is one of the finest virtues that ever graced a human being and one of the rarest to grace a woman. It is the mother of patience and of charity, twin virtues without which the noblest woman is bankrupt alike of happiness and of usefulness. Yet so fierce a flame of rectitude springs in us—especially so fierce a flame for those we love, whom we cannot bear to see going astray, whom we would violently yank into the right way if they yield not to gentler methods—that we find ourselves fairly tortured when we are called upon to make friends, even to the extent of endurance, with the Mammon of unrighteousness. Yet bear with evil, with crudities and obliquities we must—bear with them, not glaze them over. To be tolerant in the highest sense is not to be blind, but merely to bear one another's burdens of sin and ignorance and mistake. The wedding bells toll the knell of our girlish revolts. Then we could lay down the law. Now we must patiently put ourselves in its way and wait, perhaps only to be crushed under it in the end. At any rate, we must wait, and perhaps—perhaps—the right moment may dawn before the onrush of the car of judgment, and we may save those we love best.—Harper's Bazar.

KITCHEN HELPS.

Don't allow grease to burn on the outside of your frying pan.

Don't allow the dishcloth to remain wet from day to day. It will sour and become musty.

When washing greasy dishes add a few drops of ammonia to the water, which makes the work quicker and more thorough.

Keep a high stool in the kitchen, on which you may sit to prepare vegetables, wash dishes or iron. It can often be used in place of a stepladder.

Don't throw or drain vegetables into the sink. Small particles will go through the sieve and lodge in the trap and necessitate the calling in of a plumber.

Fine coal ashes are most useful for cleaning the bright spots of a kitchen range and the fender. Dip a piece of slightly damp flannel in the ashes, scour the steel, and a brilliant polish will result.

Daily Intelligencer.

THE BREAD QUESTION.

To the general public there is certainly no more important thing than bread, and yet there is no commodity, perhaps, to which the public, as the public, seems to pay less heed. In this city we used to have a by-law regulating the size of loaves sold. That by-law, we believe, was rendered inoperative by the Police Magistrate, who decided that, so long as the bakers labelled each loaf sold with its actual weight, they could sell any sized loaf they pleased, and the public seem to be expected to pay just what is asked, take what it can got and be grateful. The very different manner from this in which the authorities of London regard the manufacture, sale and delivery of bread is thus pointed out by the Montreal Witness:

"London just now is exercising its mind on the subject of bread. It is charged against London bread that it is short in weight, sometimes adulterated, and often contaminated. For a long time past the Public Control Committee of the London County Council has been in communication with the bakers of London, and the negotiations have resulted in a proposal to repeal the Bread Act of 1822. This statute still controls the sale of bread, and it is suggested that a measure more in keeping with modern conditions should be drafted. This new measure would provide that all bread, except fancy bread, should be sold in loaves of one, two, four or six pounds, and that the weight should be impressed upon the loaf in large figures. It would also impose a penalty for selling short-weight loaves unless it were proved that the deficiency came from the fact that they had been kept for forty-eight hours. It is also proposed that the inspector of weights and measures shall have power to test the weight of loaves either when on sale in the shop or in the course of delivery. The medical officer to the Battersea Borough Council points out that a considerable quantity of bread is retailed in small general shops, many of which sell articles of an objectionable nature, such as paraffin oil, disinfectants and vermin killers. Three thousand quarterns of bread are sold daily in shops of this description in Battersea alone, and there is no saying how many thousands of quarterns are sold in similar shops in Montreal. We have seen bread in shop windows in Montreal in the midst of all sorts of heterogenous goods, and the boy or woman who serves the oil, the rat poison, or the candles does not consider it necessary to wash the hands before serving the bacon, the butter, the cheese or the bread. In Battersea, too, the Council would like, if possible, to regulate the delivery of bread, to enforce the personal cleanliness of the individual who delivers it, and to prevent it being exposed to dust and dirt in the course of delivery. Truly, that is a desideratum. We have seen bread being delivered in Montreal from an open vehicle, and taken from the vehicle by a man with dirty hands and pressed against his fusty coat until handed over to his customer. How can people deal with such bakers? For if they are careless and dirty in things that are seen by everybody, what must their bake-houses be like? The least a master baker could do would be to provide a covered van and a basket for his assistant and to insist upon as little handling or exposure as possible. Why not put a wrap of tissue paper round each loaf?"

We do not by any means think the arrangements for the delivery of bread in Belleville are so careless and unsanitary as those described for Montreal, but there are a few suggestions in the foregoing article which might, perhaps, well be taken note of by the public of this city, including the authorities. Bread is the staff of life; people want their staff to be sound and absolutely reliable.

A wireless special from Mr. William Johnson shows that he is now in his dear native Ireland, and is singing "The Harp That Once," at the top of his voice. Yesterday he paid a visit to the tomb of one of Mr. O'Flynn's ancestors, who was the Crown Prince of Connemara and cup bearer to Brian Boru. Mr. Johnson sends his heartfelt regards to everybody in Belleville, and closes with the following beautiful poetic gem, expressed in the vernacular of his native country:

My foot is on my native turf
I'm happy as a lark
But proud I'd be to clap my eyes
On swate Victoria Park
I'm glad to see my dear ould friends
In Ireland, o'er the foam
But my heart's there in dear Belleville
And home, sweet home.

I've travelled many miles, bedad
Since I left the dear ould place,
But of sweeter girls and finer boys
I've never seen a trace.
Oh, I'm thinking now of Bridge
Street Church
Which bates St. Pete's in Rome
In all the world I found no spot
Like home, sweet home.

Some people in this city are wondering if the school authorities are justified in spending the public money to have a few children taught "Domestic Science." One outspoken party said the thing was a fad, and people who desired to have their children taught it should pay for it themselves. One of the things taught the children, we are told, is how to wash dishes. Great Scott! Couldn't little Mary Ann learn that from Mommer?

The Montreal Gazette makes the following pertinent remarks, which surely contain more truth than poetry: "There is a report that the Liberals in Ontario are willing to drop the protest against North Renfrew if the Conservatives will drop two or three protests now pending against Liberals. If the Conservatives make any bargain of this kind they need not be surprised if the people of the province come to the conclusion that Ross is still good enough for them. It is not a compounder of election crookedness that the people seek."

Our esteemed contemporary the Montreal Herald hands the following warm bunch of truth to those poor sportsmen who compose the New York Yacht Club: "It is evident from an Irish cable this morning that Sir Thomas Lipton has no intention of building a fourth challenger for the America's cup. Even on the purse of a millionaire the cost is a severe drain, but from the correspondence which has passed lately between those concerned in the retention or capture of the trophy, this does not appear to be the reason. Apparently the task has been considered hopeless. This is a pity. Sir Thomas has been patted constantly on the back by New York yachtsmen, and told he was a fine fellow, but that palls. There is not much encouragement to a sportsman to find that the prize he seeks to gain is so hedged round by conditions that it is impossible to win it. Would it not be better for the sake of sport to place competing yachts on level terms? When the America took away the cup from England, the race was gifted her. She only happened to be on the other side, and though bigger than any of the other competitors was allowed to enter without any debarring conditions. During the race a storm arose and the best of the smaller English yachts were either blown ashore or dismantled. The America won. Having secured the trophy the Americans proceeded to impose conditions which made it practically impossible that the cup could ever be taken away from them. Would it not be more sportsmanlike to reciprocate the treatment accorded to the America, and make a fair and reasonable competition possible? It would help to destroy much of the disapproval in which sportsmen generally hold the United States. The Palma Trophy business has brought them into great disfavor generally, and in Canada particularly, while the way in which Canadian lacrosse teams were barred from the World's Fair will not soon be forgotten."

Their Golden Wedding.

A large number of invited friends and relatives assembled yesterday after noon at the residence of Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson, Grier St., who celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding day. The guests began to arrive at 3 o'clock, and from then until late in the evening there was a continuous stream of well-wishers, who called to congratulate the aged couple and to wish them many happy years of happy life. In the evening there was music on the lawn, and the occasion, altogether, was a joyous and memorable one.

Women Blacksmiths.

A blacksmith's shop managed entirely by three women is one of the interesting sights to be seen in Kansas. The mother took entire charge of the business about fourteen years ago upon the death of her husband and had her daughters brought up not only to shoe a horse, but to understand every branch of the trade as well. The mother died, and now the three daughters, one of whom is married, have five men in their employ and carry on a very prosperous business. They personally superintend the shoeing of every horse.

Lace Collars and Cuffs.

Lace collars, cuffs and turnovers, which do so much toward brightening up a costume, particularly on a gloomy day, may be cleaned by washing them in warm soapsuds to which a little borax has been added, rinsing them in clear, warm water and pinning them out on a flat surface to dry, or by sprinkling them thoroughly with powdered chalk or magnesia, placing them between sheets of white tissue paper under a heavy weight for twenty-four hours and then shaking them entirely free from the powder. If it be desired to give them a yellow tinge they may be dipped in clear coffee and afterward pinned down on a flat surface until dry. Black lace trimmings may be dipped in one basin after another of cold tea until they seem clean, then pinned out flat on a piece of black silk until dry. These economical practices amply repay one the trying besides the freshening effect they impart.

THE INTELLIGENCER is printed and published for The Intelligencer Printing and Publishing House (Limited) by CHARLES JAMES BOWELL, of the City of Belleville, in the County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, at their Office, No. 403, Front Street, Belleville, Ont.

There is nothing equal to Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator for destroying worms. No article of its kind has given such satisfaction.

Only 900 people in 1,000,000 die of old age.

Some persons have periodical attacks of Canadian cholera, dysentery or diarrhoea and have to use great precautions to avoid the disease. Change of water, cooking and green fruit is sure to bring on the attacks. To such persons we would recommend Dr. J. D. Kellog's Dysentery Cordial as being the best medicine in the market for all summer complaints. If a few drops is taken in water when the symptoms are noticed no further trouble will be experienced.

Cut the trunk, the branches fall of themselves.

For coughs, colds, bronchitis and all lung and throat troubles there is no preparation of medicine can compare with Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It never fails to afford prompt and permanent relief. It removes all soreness and heals the diseased parts. It immediately soothes the most troublesome coughs, and by promoting expectoration, removes the mucous which stops up the air tubes which causes difficulty in breathing, thereby gives relief to that depressing tightness experienced in the chest. Public speakers and singers will find Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup of inestimable value, as it speedily and effectually allays all irritation and huskiness in the throat and bronchial tubes and gives power to the vocal cords, rendering the voice clear and sonorous. If parents wish to save the lives of their children and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness, give the Syrup according to directions.

They are easily procurable, easily taken, act expeditiously, and they are surprisingly cheap considering their excellence.

A Sure Cure for Headaches. — Billous headaches, to which women are more subject than men, become so acute in some subjects that they are utterly prostrated. The stomach refuses food, and there is a constant and distressing effort to free the stomach from bile which has become unduly secreted there. UNTOLD MISERY — WHAT A WELL-KNOWN COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER SUFFERED, AND HOW HE WAS CURED.—Gentlemen, about five years ago I began to be troubled with Dyspepsia, and for three years suffered untold misery from this terrible complaint. I was at that time travelling for Messrs. Walter Woods & Co., Hamilton, and was treated by some of the best physicians in the country, but to no purpose. I continued to grow worse, one day I was induced to try a bottle of Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, and to my great surprise and joy, I soon began to improve. I continued using this medicine and when the third bottle was finished I found I was entirely cured, and as a year has elapsed since then, I feel confident that the cure is complete and permanent. To all afflicted with this distressing complaint I heartily recommend Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, believing that the persistent use of it will cure any case of Dyspepsia. (Signed)

He Has Tried It.—Mr. John Anderson, Kinloss, writes: "I venture to say few, if any, have received greater benefit from the use of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil than I have. I have used it regularly for over ten years and have recommended it to all sufferers I know of, and they also found it of great virtue in cases of severe bronchitis and incipient consumption."

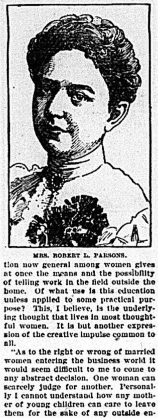
WOMAN'S WORLD

MRS. ROBERT L. PARSONS.

A Business Woman Who Believes In the Broad Field For Women.

Mrs. Robert L. Parsons, head of the Chicago School of Physical Education and Expression, regards the indisputable fact that more and more married women are becoming prominently identified with business and professional life yearly as the natural culmination of many slow growing causes. It would be almost impossible, she believes, for other conditions to prevail.

"Ambition, the sense of pleasurable power in successful accomplishment, these spur on the business or professional woman just as they do her husband or brother. The broader education now general among women gives at once the means and the possibility of telling work in the field outside the home. Of what use is this education unless applied to some practical purpose? This, I believe, is the underlying thought that lives in most thoughtful women. It is but another expression of the creative impulse common to all.



MRS. ROBERT L. PARSONS.

"As to the right or wrong of married women entering the business world it would seem difficult to me to come to any abstract decision. One woman can scarcely judge for another. Personally I cannot understand how any mother of young children can care to leave them for the sake of any outside endeavor, but there are plenty of women with no ties of this kind. And, as to the theory that the married woman in business is unjustly occupying the place of the unmarried worker who must earn her own bread and butter, the moment work becomes in the slightest degree individual or distinctive this theory is disproved. And I cannot think that the repression or elimination of the creative impulse that sends the otherwise unoccupied married woman out into the larger field could be productive of any good."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Be Independent.

The idea of the propriety of housekeeping as the work for women owes its origin to a very natural feeling that woman as well as man should do her part of the world's labor. It is only just. But man chooses his field; why not the woman? For what reason is she bound to confine herself to one kind of work if she can do another kind better, more profitably to her family and more in accordance with her nature and abilities?

Wherever a woman can best employ her powers, there is her sphere. As she lives best for herself, so she lives best for all those associated with her. The idea has obtained too long that woman's duty is to some one else. If it were in truth a thing so noble and excellent she would not so long have had a monopoly of it, says the Business Woman's Magazine.

"Woman's cause is man's cause; they must rise or fall together."

Are not women the mothers of men?

There are many things women should know and practice.

Banish fear, worry and doubt.

Think your own thoughts. Live your own life. Others may advise, but they cannot see life from your point of view.

Saving Steps.

"Never go empty handed." This is what mother used to say to me so many times when I was a child. If I was going upstairs I must look about me and see if there wasn't something downstairs that belonged upstairs that I could carry up and put into its place, and so on from one part of the house to another. She always said it would be a great help in one's housekeeping and save lots of unnecessary steps if they would just remember that little rule, and, although I fail in many ways to practice all the good things she taught me, I very often find myself saying to the children as they help about the work, "Never go empty handed." Children have such a wonderfully unconscious way of walking right over things instead of picking them up and restoring them to their proper places. So I shall often repeat the little rule to them, partly to help them and partly to relieve my own feelings at their carelessness, and if they do not always obey the injunction now while they are young they may in after years remember it as one of mother's little helpful rules.—Boston Brown Book.

For a Ribbon Box.

A rather large cigar box makes a most useful and dainty looking receptacle for gloves or ribbons. If it happens to retain an odor of tobacco put it in the sunshine for a little time before proceeding to decorate it. Then cover the outside of the box with pretty colored linen. The inside is glued firmly and the outside stretched tightly and held in place with little brass nails. The lining of the box will be all the better for a little padding of cotton wool sprinkled with sachet powder. The softness of the padding is attractive looking, and the perfume imparts a pleasant fragrance to the contents of the box. Smaller cigar boxes, covered with chamois leather or the wrist parts of long tan or gray evening gloves and prettily lined with satin, padded with cotton wool, make charming little jewel cases. These boxes should contain in one corner a small wash leather pincushion for brooches and lace pins and in another corner a tiny bag for rings.

Tinted Spectacles For Beauty.

"Tinted spectacles," said a New York optician who makes a specialty of them, "are mainly for women who demand that their beauty as well as their sight shall be considered. A light gray or a pale blue eye looks very weak and unattractive through ordinary eyeglasses. By slightly tinting the lens we can add very much to the color of the pupil of the eye and to the general attractiveness of the face. The tinting does not at all interfere with the magnifying properties of the glass. In fact, some oculists send us prescriptions for tinted glasses, maintaining that for blue or gray eyes they are far superior to the ordinary crystal glasses. Blue eyes absorb more light than brown eyes, so that any tempering of the sun's rays is sure to be beneficial."

The Boy's Room.

When a boy's room is not furnished with a couch the boy is extremely apt to lie on the bed to read, the chances of his removing his shoes or protecting the white spread before lying down being extremely slender. Rather than indulge in vain remonstrances banish the white spread altogether and substitute denim, blue, if it can be made to fit into the color scheme of the room. Have the center of the spread plain, with a border twelve to eighteen inches deep of figured denim, fleur-de-lis or something similar. The denim takes on a better color, as repeated washings dull its first brightness. It does not easily wrinkle, and the comfort of the boy is insured.

Hurts the Hair.

Hair experts say that if women keep on wearing pompadours it is only a question of time before they become bald. To be sure, it will not be quite so far reaching as a man's, but bad enough to destroy their good looks. As a forehead reaching to the middle of the crown is not considered a mark of beauty, it behooves women to "watch a leetle out" for the receding hair line. One way of preventing its becoming noticeable is when arranging the hair for the night to brush it in the opposite direction from which it has been worn all day. This rests the hair and keeps it from becoming warped in one direction.

The Dainty Desk.

Old brocade, or, rather, brocade in old time colorings and patterns, as well as tapestry, is being utilized with marked success for women's desk fittings. Blotters, paper and envelope racks, letters, books, calendar frames, notebook racks, stamp and pen boxes, etc., show coverings of these soft hued fabrics, dull gilt braid being employed for the finishing touch. Chintz is likewise used for desk sets, but the more delicate tinting of the other materials, tapestry particularly, has won for them a greater measure of popularity.

Cold Cream.

No toilet table is complete without a jar of cold cream made of oil of white poppy, four ounces; oil of almonds, two ounces; white wax, one-half ounce; balsam of Peru, two drams. Melt the wax, add the oils and beat together until they form a cream, then add the balsam and lastly a little rosewater. This is an emollient which may be used with good effect once or twice a week, after the bath, to whiten and soften the hands, neck and arms.

A Medical View of Whipping.

Against this subordinate sway of savagery, this proposition to rule little children by terror and by pain, the Medical Record most emphatically protests. The whip inspires terror of itself and not of the crime. Its physical effects, quite aside from the pain engendered, are bad and may be deplorable. Its moral influence is shameful and degrading.—Medical Record.

TABLE DECORATION.

An Oriental Scheme From Which Ideas May Be Gleaned.

An oriental notion for an elaborate scheme of table decoration is a dainty canopy of flowers and greenery stretched over the table, with, hanging from it, tiny Japanese lanterns, each of a different shape, but none larger than from two to four inches. In apple blossom or the almond flower this canopy is said to be exceedingly effective. It is supported at the four corners by slender pedestals, from which the roots of the tree are supposed to spring. The pedestals are arranged not quite at the table corners, but something like ten inches away. A dwarf Japanese cedar stands in the middle, and a few tiny bamboos and cocoa palms dot the table, with here and there a spray thrown down of apple blossom. The menus are written on wee Japanese unbrellas, leaning open, and both doilies and table napkins are Japanese, the latter made of the familiar embossed paper, the former painted with little characteristic figures. Each finger bowl has a few Japanese expanding flowers dropped into it, an amusement for all the guests, who can watch the pretty marvel of their growth.

Japanese paper flowers make an excellent substitute for the natural blossom, or the canopy looks very well decked with mimosa. In this case chrysanthemums are arranged at the corner pedestals and in the center of the table.—Brooklyn Eagle.

INDIVIDUAL STYLE.

Study Yourself and Do Not Be a Slave to Fashion.

Study yourself. Decide whether you require lace ruffles or Quaker gray. If you have a bad point conceal it by the art of your dress. If you have a good one let your gowns reveal it. If your skin is of that order which is improved by rose shaded candles wear a white veil.

Learn the magic of that contrast which is harmony, and never, for the sake of your gown, slight yourself. Do not permit the fashion to have more than a passing and general say in your choice of what to wear. The well dressed women are those whose discrimination and good taste adapt and create their own styles and who smile at the cry, "But it is worn!"

If you have narrow shoulders pull your evening gown down from them and tie a fichu around them, with flying ruffles and a great knot in front. If your neck is short and fat do not try to make it bigger with jewels or tulle bows. Trust to the touches that stand for beauty, the line, here and there, which makes or mars the picture.

Study the fashions for that which suits you best. There behold the true mission of periodical and of costumer alike. When you have found it, seize it and make of it a little idol to control your daily toilet, a little bright, beneficent idol called "individual style."—Vogue.

GIRLS WHO STAY AT HOME.

Some Questions Which They Should Ask and Answer Themselves.

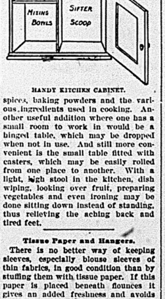
A wise woman has recently published an article about girls who are failures at home. She says that when a girl goes into the business world to earn a living everybody wonders whether she will be a success or a failure. But when a girl gets through with her school days and settles down at home nobody ever stops to wonder whether or not she will be a success. She goes to teas for the benefit of the girls who are failures in the business world, and she attends parties and receptions in honor of the girls who are successes, and meanwhile she never stops to think that she is herself either a success or a failure. She asks all sorts of questions about the girl who stays at home. Does she take the best of everything for herself without a protest?

From the family friends, the family relatives, the members of the family down to the servants, do they all know in their hearts, though they may not say it, that she is selfish? Does she have new things for her room each spring while the other rooms are left to look out for themselves? Does she go to the table without making herself as attractive for her own family as she would for a guest? Does she talk the same sort of polite conversation before her family that she would talk before guests? A lot of similar questions are asked of the girl who is in danger of getting into a rut from simply living at home and having no pressing duties outside, and it might be worth while for the girls who stay at home to study whether or not they are successes.—Exchange.

KITCHEN CONVENIENCES.

A Compact Cabinet That Saves Many Steps When Cooking.

The simple homemade kitchen cabinet devised by a reader of the Tribune Farmer and here illustrated has compartments for flour, flour sifter, mixing bowl and baking tins, with a sliding pie or bread board at convenient height, and above this shelves for spices, baking powders and the various ingredients used in cooking. Another useful addition where one has a small room to work in would be a hinged table, which may be dropped when not in use. And still more convenient is the small table fitted with casters, which may be easily rolled from one place to another. With a light, high stool in the kitchen, dish wiping, looking over fruit, preparing vegetables and even ironing may be done sitting down instead of standing, thus relieving the aching back and tired feet.



HANDY KITCHEN CABINET.

Tissue Paper and Hangers.

There is no better way of keeping sleeves, especially blouse sleeves of thin fabrics, in good condition than by stuffing them with tissue paper. If this paper is placed beneath flounces it gives an added freshness and avoids the drooping that so often follows a day's wearing. A good way of keeping a walking skirt in shape is to see that it is always carefully hung by two loops. The contour will be much better kept if the hangers can be arranged for a skirt that has either wide or narrow width in the front. Care is taken by the well groomed woman that her coats, especially her walking coats, are placed on hangers. Silk petticoats keep their crispness much longer if they are hung upside down. When hung in this way the loops are placed among the flounces and made so small as to be invisible when the skirt is worn.

Cleaning Hints.

The Cooking Club gives some good cleaning methods. A tablespoonful of vinegar mixed with three of pure linseed oil will freshen and polish mahogany. Alcohol cleans piano keys; kerosene, oilcloth table and shelf covers. For sponging out bureau drawers or sideboards use tepid water containing a small quantity of thymolin. To clean a clock lay in the bottom a rag saturated with kerosene. The fumes loosen the dirt and cause it to drop out. In a few days place another cloth saturated in kerosene in the clock. The fumes lubricate the works.

A Woman Press Agent.

Miss Ida McGlone Gibson is a very successful theatrical press agent, whose home is in New York. Her services are retained by a well known company, and, besides securing newspaper notices, she is called upon to arrange matters of transportation, the billing of towns, etc. Miss Gibson says that she would advise any woman to take up the work who possesses good health, executive ability and newspaper training.

THE MONEY QUESTION.

A Hard Problem With Which Many Wives Have to Wrestle.

Perhaps the first difficulty young wives have to encounter, as well as the last that old wives have still to wrestle with, is the question of money. Most women are by nature economical. They watch outgo more carefully than men do and plan expenditures more closely. The extravagant women are usually those whose lives have not been allowed to develop naturally, who have been forced into an economic dependence and taught the joys of spending, with none of the counterbalancing difficulties of earning. But even such women have economical streaks in the midst of their lavishness—a sort of spasmodic reversion to type. In spite of this there is in most masculine minds a deep seated distrust of woman's financial ability, and the consequence is that the world is full of careful, industrious wives nagged and hindered by careless, impulsive husbands, who take to themselves the credit of the wife's savings and throw upon her the blame of their own loose methods. Few of these women like to assert themselves baldly as their husbands' financial superiors—some of them even aid him in his joyful career of self deception—and when in desperation they are driven to take the reins into their own hands it hurts them worse than it does the husbands.—Harper's Bazar.

TOILET TIPS.

It is said the towel is an enemy to a beautiful face, for it breaks the tissues.

It is said that the Romans used skeins of silk after the bath instead of towels to keep the skin nice.

Don't despise the humble lemon. With the juice of a lemon and the beaten white of an egg milady, brush in hand, may touch up her freckles in the seclusion of her boudoir and no one be the wiser.

If your hair is thin and oily an excellent hair tonic is made of bay rum and jaborandi, one pint of the former to a quarter of an ounce of the latter. Massage it into the scalp every night. The hair should be fluffy next day.

The Way to Walk.

A friend who leads a very active life has a theory that the preservation of a good figure depends to some extent on the manner of walking. Many people, she says, as they advance in years allow themselves to walk heavily and without elasticity, so that the whole weight rests on the lower part of the limbs at every step, the only effect of exercise being weariness of the legs and feet. Instead of this the body should be held erect and poised so as to have a perfect balance. In this way the muscles are braced and strengthened throughout, the lungs must of necessity be well expanded, and it seems quite reasonable to suppose that the tendency to increase of weight may be checked. At all events, a lighter step and a brisker and more enjoyable manner of walking can be kept up, and that in itself is a very great gain.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

NEWFOUNDLAND.

French Shore Dispute Settled and Bar to Entrance of Ancient Colony Into the Dominion Removed.

Cable despatches recently informed us that Great Britain and France have come to terms over the French Shore question in Newfoundland, and that this three-cornered dispute is consequently at an end. No more interesting piece of news could be wired across the ocean. The quarrel has been prolific of trouble between Great Britain and the Ancient Colony, and between France. It will be a great triumph for diplomacy if the terms are satisfactory. Friction in the British family will have been removed, and good feeling, so much to be desired, will have been established with France. What is more, an obstacle to the entrance of Newfoundland into the Dominion will have passed away.

What the Trouble Was.

Broadly speaking, the difficulty has arisen over fishery and territorial claims which France asserted in and around the west and north shores of Newfoundland. The colony, growing in strength, has been embarrassed and angered by these pretensions. Great Britain has been unable, owing to treaty provisions, to dispose of them; and France has continued, under the rights which it has insisted upon, to share what the Newfoundlanders have regarded as their exclusive possessions. The dispute, for such it has been, finds its origin as far back as 1713, when under the Treaty of Utrecht France gave up Newfoundland, and Britain in return agreed that subjects of France could catch fish on the Newfoundland coast and dry them on land. The Treaty of Paris in 1763 confirmed this agreement, and that of Versailles in 1783 was accompanied by a voluntary offer on the part of Britain "to take most positive measures to prevent His Majesty's subjects from interrupting in any manner by their competition the fishery of the French during their temporary exercise of it."

A Sweeping Interpretation.

The clause just cited has been subject to a sweeping interpretation by France. It was supposed at the outset that the British and French were to have concurrent fishery rights. But it was soon maintained that when the King undertook to see to it that the British fishermen—those of Newfoundland—should not interrupt the French in any manner by their competition, it was agreed that the rights of the French should be exclusive, and that the British were not to be permitted to fish in the waters referred to. Unfortunately, another treaty, that of Paris, in 1814, lent strength to the French position, or, at all events, was regarded as so doing. Under it the French held that they had exclusive fishery rights, and, in addition, exclusive rights in the rivers of the West and North shores—a very extensive area, as will be seen by the map—and exclusive territorial rights for half a mile inland all along what was termed the treaty coast. The Newfoundlanders, under the claims advanced by France, could not fish in their own waters or even exercise authority over a portion of their own island. They protested and brought all the influence they could to bear upon both the Imperial Government and upon France with a view to removing the disability. Many arrangements were drafted in order to afford relief. But these were defective from the Newfoundland point of view, and therefore failed.

The Quarrel Waxes Hot.

One of the circumstances which especially annoyed the Newfoundlanders was the fact that the French fishermen who operated on the Banks and along the treaty coast were in receipt of a bounty from France upon the fish they caught and sold in the European markets. There was no such bounty for the Newfoundlander. He was therefore at a disadvantage. In addition to being excluded from his own fishing grounds he was practically excluded from the markets his foreign rivals could resort to. In 1886 the Newfoundland Legislature retaliated by passing a law forbidding the sale of bait to the French fishermen. This struck the French in a vital spot, for they relied upon the colony for their herring, capellin, squid and other bait fishes. Then the Imperial Government disallowed the law, but in the succeeding year permitted it to pass into operation. Then the French responded by contesting the right of the Newfoundlanders to erect lobster-packing factories on the treaty coast. A French warship was actually sent to remove the buildings the Newfoundlanders put up. A British admiral, Sir Baldwin Walker, under the impression that the French were right, assisted them, and ordered a Newfoundland factory to be taken down. The Newfoundlander went to the courts and proved that the Admiral had no law behind him, and recovered $5,000 damages. The Imperial Government then proposed to enact the necessary legislation. But Sir William Whiteway at once left for England and appeared at the bar of the House of Lords and succeeded in persuading their Lordships that the law would be a wrong to the colony.

Mr. Chamberlain Interposes.

A modus vivendi was shortly afterwards reached with France, and more recently Mr. Chamberlain, as Colonial Secretary, took up the case. He, in 1898, appointed a Royal Commission, the report of which was favorable to the position of the Ancient Colony, in that it maintained that relief should be given. There can be little doubt that this step has had much to do with the settlement with France.

CANADA'S EARTHQUAKE

MODIFIED AND KEPT IN CHECK BY OLD LAURENTIAN MOUNTAINS.

Earthquake Shock Felt in This Country Creates More Curiosity Than Alarm—The Birth of Seismic Science—Instruments Old and New—Few Earthquakes Harmful—Extent of Present Time Knowledge of the Subject.

No country in the world has been more mercifully exempt from earthquakes, volcanic eruptions, and other terrible natural phenomena than Canada, and it is therefore with more curiosity than alarm that we note an earthquake shock felt in different parts of the Dominion. History records only one severe shock in this part of the North American Continent. This occurred in the Old Regime, as it is called by Parkman, and may, after all, have been a landslide, for in those early days scientific exactness was unknown. This disturbance, however, was one we would not willingly have done without, so we shall call it an earthquake out of gratitude. It was far more effective than a thousand whiskey detectives in putting an end to the liquor traffic among the Indians. The aborigines, whose consciences reproached them for their indulgence in fire water, were prompt to see in this portent the anger of God. They took it as a literal sign from heaven, and the priests wisely encouraged them in this interpretation. It was long before the memory of this visitation faded from the minds of the red men, and for many years the illicit trade in whiskey died out almost completely.

Our Grey Hairs Protect Us.

Since then there have been thousands of shocks recorded in Canada, but few, indeed, have originated here. Our old Laurentain Mountains are largely responsible for this happy immunity, for they are the most ancient hills in the world. Compared with these grey mountains the Alps and the Himalayas are mere striplings, beardless boys, who have yet aeons of existence before them ere they approach an age long since passed by the hoary veterans of Quebec. It is in the geologically new portions of the globe that earthquakes originate; in those portions where the subterranean fires burn more fiercely and nearer the surface. Thus we know that Japan and Borneo and South America are upstart and parvenu districts, despite the records of human antiquity preserved in Japan, for example. The shocks which these less favored lands experience are inevitable. In a few million years they will get shaken down; the ship will "find herself," and we shall not be able to scornfully condemn their inhabitants for the heinous crime of extreme youth.

The Birth of Seismic Science.

Slurs on Japan are peculiarly out of place in the discussion of earthquakes, for it was in the Chrysanthemum Kingdom that our science of the subject really began. When Japan threw open her doors to the world (how many important events date from that wonderful time) she was quick to appreciate the value of European science, as applied to her pest of earthquakes, and equally prompt to invite foreign scientists to investigate the subject, in the hopes of discovering some alleviation. Scientists were just as eager to revel in the mysteries in which this unknown land afforded, and soon they were swarming over the country. Much they had discovered, and much remained to be found out when the terrible earthquake of 1880 descended on Japan, destroying towns, obliterating valleys, leveling hills and forests, and causing the death of hundreds of persons. Before the ruins of some of the villages had been cleared away the Japanese Seismological Society had been formed. Most of our modern scientific knowledge of earthquakes has been acquired since then.

Instruments Old and New.

Before this time there had been numerous mechanical devices for the study of earthquakes. As instruments of precision they ranked with the cork on the floating line. These instruments would record the shock, just as the cork will dip when the fish bites, and that is about all they did. All these cumbrous contrivances were rendered obsolete by the modern seismograph, to which we owe any definite information we may have on the subject of earthquakes. Many old ideas have been swept away since this wonderful machine has come into existence—swept away so far as the scientist is concerned, although they linger in the minds of a majority of people. One might mention the lateral extent of an oscillation as an example. The popular idea of a quake is that the earth slides suddenly in one direction for a few feet, and then darts back to its starting point. It is a fact that the average extent of one of these quivers is from 1-5 to 1-10 of an inch. Windows may rattle, slates fall, and even buildings totter when the earth's movement is less than the height of one of these lines. Sometimes the extent of the oscillation is much greater. When it is half an inch, the shock is sure to be attended by much loss. The movement of an inch will be destructive. In the great Japanese earthquake the shaking was quite visible, the extent of the oscillation in this case being nearly a foot.

Few Earthquakes Harmful.

Ninety per cent. of earthquakes consist of elastic or semi-elastic oscillations. The others are accompanied by surface undulations, and are much the more dangerous. Fortunately, of the dangerous minority only an insignificant percentage is destructive to life and property. The average duration of a shock is a fraction of a second, and but for the seismograph we should not be aware that the large majority of them had actually occurred. The seismograph informs us that over large portions of the earth's surface there is a shock every half hour. In England the instruments record 100 disturbances every year, nearly all of them originating thousands of miles away, although in the year 1844 the crude instruments then in use detected twelve in one month in Perthshire. The rule is for one large earthquake to be attended by hundreds of smaller vibrations, mere echoes; as, for example, there were 3,364 minor shocks following the Japanese cataclysm. Earthquakes have no connection with volcanic eruptions, nor with the moon, nor with the tides, nor, indeed, with anything else. That they occur more frequently in winter than in summer is a fact, the significance of which we do not appreciate. This, popularly speaking, is about the extent of our knowledge on the subject at the present time. May Canada's personal acquaintance with it never increase!

Proposed New Diocese.

It is proposed by some, says The Canadian Churchman, to divide the Diocese of Nova Scotia, and now that the See is about to be vacated it would seem to be a favorable opportunity to consider the matter, and to take action, if it be deemed advisable. Nova Scotia is the oldest colonial diocese. And its first Bishop was consecrated in 1787 and exercised jurisdiction from Newfoundland to Niagara, at that time the limit of western settlement. In 1793 Dr. Mountain was appointed to the See of Quebec, and the Diocese of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland. In 1839 and 1845 its easterly and western provinces were separated from it, leaving it as it is to-day, composed of the two civil provinces of Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island. Its area is, in Nova Scotia, 29,900 square miles and Prince Edward Island 2,133 miles in extent. The population is 450,574 in the larger and 103,259 in the smaller province, making a total of 553,833. The church population is 72,083, viz., 66,107 in Nova Scotia and 5,976 in Prince Edward Island, being about one-eighth of the total number of souls. It is proposed to form a new diocese, consisting of the islands of Cape Breton and Prince Edward, and some of the eastern counties on the mainland in the Province of Nova Scotia. In population in the last twenty years there has been little or no increase though, now, owing to industrial and mining developments in Cape Breton, there promises to be in that section considerable growth in wealth and population. In the same territory the Roman Catholic Church has three dioceses and a church membership of 175,374. It would seem that there is much to be said for more Episcopal oversight, and the good that would result from the presence and influence of a bishop in the eastern part of this ancient diocese. There are one hundred clergy at present in the diocese; and this would leave each with a staff of fifty priests to start with and with a new centre of church influence created, a growth might be anticipated in both sections. The subject is well worthy of consideration and experience proves that the best results are attained when dioceses are not too large, either in territory or in population. The proposal to divide will be watched with interest, and we trust the Synod of Nova Scotia, will be guided from above in the consideration of this important subject.

Apples to Stand Western Winters.

According to a statement made by Dr. William Saunders, Director of Experimental Farms, Ottawa, to the Committee on Agriculture the other day, it seems that an apple tree has been found which will withstand the rigors of the Manitoba and Northwest Winters. It is brought about by crossing the Duchess, of Wealthy, with a crab, and although the fruit will not be large, it will, nevertheless, be admirably adapted for domestic use. In the course of a couple of years Dr. Saunders hopes to have sufficient produced to place them in the hands of nurserymen for distribution to the Manitoba farmers.

Dr. Saunders gave some interesting statistics of the comparative yield of cereals per acre in Canada and the United States. Last year Canada produced 80,000,000 bushels of grain, as against 601,821,000 bushels in the United States. The average yield per acre in the United States was 13.53 bushels; in Ontario, 31; in Manitoba, 20 bushels.

On representation from the National Millers' Association of the United Kingdom that the English wheats were becoming weak, a consignment from the Experimental Farms, consisting of Red Fife, Preston and Percy, the two latter being hybrids of Dr. Saunders', was shipped to England. This seed was planted, and at the last meeting of the Millers' Association it was announced that good crops had been secured, and that the flour graded on an average 80 per cent. for baking, as against only 60 per cent. for the English product.

Not Much Difference.

Michael Davitt, during his recent visit to America, talked one day to a reporter about the cheerfulness of the Irish character.

"The very poorest among us don't despond," he said. "No man's condition is so wretched but he can crack a joke about it.

"There was a poor, old peat-cutter one day whom the parish priest invited to his house to dinner.

"'Come in, Pat,' he said. 'It isn't much of a dinner—only beef, and beer, and potatoes—but, indeed, your'e very welcome to it.'

"'Sure, your reverence,' said the old fellow, his eyes twinkling. 'I'd have you make no apologies about the dinner. It's the same as I'd be gettin' at home, barrin' the beef and beer.'"

Not So Gleeful.

"So you belong to a glee club?"

"Well," answered the youth with longish hair, "that's what we call it, but no one seems very joyous when we sing."

THE MESSENGER FROM KHARTOOM

BY ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

Author of "Dr. Jack," "Dr. Jack's Wife," "Miss Caprice," Etc., Etc.

"I beg your pardon, sir, but I am looking for Baron Popoff," says the officer.

"That is my name, sir," replies the other.

He does not look alarmed, only annoyed, as though some impecunious creditor is about to make a descent upon him at the last moment.

"I have just found you in time, baron," with a significant glance toward the waiting steamer, from whose funnel the smoke pours—she resembles some impatient animal eager to start in the race.

"Indeed, sir; what do you wish with me? I have not kept my light hidden under a bushel while in Alexandria," returns the Russian.

"Pardon me, baron, I know nothing of the matter beyond the fact that I have instructions to bring you before the general."

"What?" and with a weird Russian curse bubbling form his lips, the baron springs to his feet.

"My language was plain, baron. I am sorry to break into any of your plans, but my orders allow no latitude."

"But, sir," thunders the baron, excited, "I am booked to leave on that steamer!"

"I am sorry for that, baron."

"You will not stop me now. Whatever this may be, it could easily be explained, but if I return with you to the citadel I lose the steamer!"

The officer looks his regret, but he is as firm as adamant.

"I only know my orders, baron," he says.

"You will not allow me to proceed, sir?"

"I am an English officer; I have been sent to find you and convey you before the general. There my duty ceases. Not if there were a dozen steamers to sail and a thousand barons to take passage on them, would I fail to obey the orders I have received."

The baron grinds his teeth in rage.

"What if I refuse to accompany you?" he says, in a quiet tone that contrasts strangely with his excited manner.

"Much to my regret I shall be obliged to use force," replies the officer.

"Suppose I should still resist?"

"I would take you, baron, if I had to call upon yonder iron-clads for help," pointing to the great British war-vessels Vesuvius and Thunderer, which lie about where the fleet opened the awful bombardment on Alexandria some half a dozen years before.

The baron seems to be weighing the chances. He hates everything English and is peculiarly fitted for the mission to India in the interests of the White Czar. It grates upon his nerves to be thus ignominiously brought back by a British officer and compelled to give up his contemplated embarkation; but he can see no other possible outlet. The gates seem closed around him.

He looks like a baffled tiger, with its prey in full sight at the time the trap closes. Even Molly sees his face, and never forgets the look there is stamped upon it. Men glare at a fellow-human that way just before they do murder.

"There is no way out of this mess then?"

"Only one—by accompanying me to headquarters, where you may explain matters and be back before the steamer leaves," replies the Briton.

"You know that is a false hope, sir. The Alhambra will steam away in ten minutes or so," replies the Russian, savagely.

"Well, as a dernier ressort, try Suez."

"Eh?"

"Take the railroad to Suez and there await the coming of the steamer down the canal."

"Confusion!" It is Sandy who mutters this, as he smites his head with his hand. "Great brain that of yours, old fellow, never once to think of that. Grimes, kick me, will you?"

"Wait. Danger of upsetting the boat, and I reckon there are sharks here. When we get on board the steamer, I'll accommodate you with the greatest pleasure in the world," returns the practical Grimes.

"You try it when there are others around, and the worm will turn, sir, turn and rend you; but I am in the dumps. Think of the grand scheme I've thought to shake that fellow, and never once thought of what that dandy officer just now so coldly informed him—that he could even if delayed a couple of days, take the train run to Cairo, and from there to Suez, waylaying us there. Hang the luck! I see I'll have to murder him in cold blood yet."

"That was a convincing argument and he gives in. See how sullenly he resumes his seat and orders his boatman to pull for the shore. There! He looks this way. I wonder if he suspects. Keep a straight face, Sandy, for Heaven's sake. Mynheer Joe, forward once more."

That traveller gives a short, sharp order in the Arabic tongue; oars again fall into the water, brawny arms exercise their muscle, and the boats shoot toward the steamer.

The last they see of the baron and his followers, he is landing and moving away with the officer, to whom he talks with many a gesture, while Colonel Taylor and the Hindoo watch the luggage.

Our friends board the steamer. Some little delay is brought about, during which Sandy becomes nervous, walking the deck with a quick stride, watching the quay and pulling at his diminutive mustache.

Then comes the whistle, they move away, and Alexandria is left behind.

"Look!" says Sandy to Mr. Grimes, nodding in their wake. "The baron has returned—he is in his boat—the men row madly, but no one on board notices! Ta, ta, old fellow! Wait here for the Malwa, or meet us at Suez. Adieu! Adieu!"

The steamer insreases her speed, and the city of Alexandria is soon lost to sight in the gathering dusk, although her many lights remain in view for some time. Gradually these fade away, and night reigns over the great sea whose waves wash the shores of three continents, and on board the Alhambra all seems well.

CHAPTER XVII.

Some two weeks or so later, the steamer lies safe in the harbor of Bombay. They have experienced some rough weather en route, and all are glad to be safe on shore once more. The voyage has been otherwise uneventful, although when at Suez the baron and his two followers came on board.

Whatever suspicions the Russian may entertain, he has no positive knowledge of the truth. Sandy sees him looking hard in his direction quite often, but appears to be supremely indifferent to the fact. A child or a heathen Chinee could not look more innocent than Sandy when he chooses to.

As for Mynheer Joe he makes up his mind to pay no attention to the other. It is easy to say this but more difficult to carry out the idea.

When a man is conscious of the fact that there is an enemy on board a vessel with him, watching his love-making with eyes that dart out deadly lightnings, it is not reasonable to suppose that he can forget all about him so easily.

Besides, Mr. Grimes warns Joe to be careful lest the baron attempt some such trick as was tried the first night at Shepherd's. Consequently Joe keeps his enemy well in mind and avoids hanging over the rail after dark, since it would not be a very difficult thing to be dropped into the Indian Ocean, where sharks of a prodigious size abound.

Nor is his caution in vain, for they lose one of their passengers one night. It is never known how he goes, but a sailor is found who believes he heard a muffled cry and a splash, but for fear of being laughed at, said nothing.

Mynheer Joe will never forget the look of surprise and disgust that flashes over the face of the baron when he comes upon him the next morning. After the absence of the passenger is noted, he begins to suspect the truth that perhaps the Hindoo servant of the baron, mistaking the other for him, pushed him overboard, and then reporting the accident to his master, made sure Joe was a gone case. The fact that the missing passenger resembles Mynheer Joe very much, causes the latter to feel more and more that there may be truth in the story. Even Sandy jumps at this theory, and from that hour Joe's caution increases, since he has no desire to make food for the sharks.

One happy event has occurred.

At Suez there comes aboard a Hindoo. Meeting Sandy he makes inquiries, and the correspondent gladly leads him to Mynheer Joe. When that worthy sights him he gives a cry of delight, for it is Kassee whom he seizes by the hand, the faithful Kassee whom he lost upon the Nile, and who accompanied him from Khartoom.

It seems that the servant lost his master in the darkness, and feared he was drowned. He himself passed through a variety of adventures and finally reached Cairo only to find that his beloved master had sailed a day before.

Here some friends among the officers who knew his history made up a purse and sent Kassee to Suez to intercept the steamer, so that good and evil came aboard the Alhambra at her stop there.

As Mynheer Joe has really given the other up for dead, his delight is all the deeper on that account. Kassee acts as his guardian angel during the remainder of the trip, and the explorer feels safer on account of his coming.

Another things occurs during the voyage. Molly makes a discovery. It is entirely an accident and puts Joe to no end of confusion but he finds himself in for it, and makes the best of a dilemma.

This event is nothing more or less than a complete explosion of his secret, which is shattered one bright morning. All of them are seated upon deck, when the conversation turns upon the old pipes of nations, and Molly, who is making a collection of these things, declares that she has never yet run across a Persian kalian, or water pipe; whereupon Joe, without reflection, declares that he has one in his luggage to which she is welcome, beckons the ever-hovering Kassee and gives him an order.

When the Hindoo, a few minutes later, lays in the hand of the fair American girl the object mentioned, she returns her thanks in no stinted tones, for the smoking apparatus is a beauty, jeweled and fit for the use of a king.

They are talking of the Persians, and Joe is narrating some queer scenes he has witnessed in that country, when an exclamation breaks upon their hearing.

It comes from Molly, and, as they turn toward her, they find her gazing with distended eyes at the article she holds.

Mynheer Joe suddenly realizes the truth. A tide of crimson flushes his face, and he hastily moves away from the party, to the side of the vessel.

"What is it?" asks Demosthenes Tanner, who sees that something unusual has occurred.

"Listen!"

Then Molly, still holding the odd water pipe, set with precious stones, reads:

"'A present from the Shah of Persia to his friend, Joseph Miner Carringford, 1884.'"

Demosthenes is not blind or dumb. He can see a pretty good-sized rat now.

"What! Mynheer Joe the very party we have been scouring the earth after? Bless my soul, now, this is an odd occurrence! I can hardly believe my senses. Are you sure, child?"

"Read for yourself, governor. And if that isn't enough, what do you think of his actions? It is quite evident he forgets there was an inscription on this pipe."

With that, the young lady leaves her chair, and in another moment gains the side of the traveller, who leans over the rail looking at the flashing green water; her hand falls lightly on his arm and sends a mighty thrill, like a shock of electricity, to his heart.

"Give an account of yourself, Mynheer Joe," she says, gravely; and, turning, he looks into her clear eyes, smiles and finally laughs.

"Really, I do owe you an explanation, Miss Molly. Since the cat is out of the bag now, I am willing to confess all."

So he tells her what is necessary, and Molly drinks it all in with eagerness. It sets her heart to beating wildly at the thought that this hero, the man who has saved her life and been with the devoted Gordon at Khartoom, should of all persons prove to be the Joseph Carringford whom she seeks, the missing heir, whose inheritance will fall to her in case he fails to materialize within a limited time.

It is both singular and romantic, and how can she help weaving delightful theories and plans out of the woof thus begun.

After that, her manner toward Joe changes.

He marks it himself, and at first marvels at the fact, for although a campaigner who has seen much of the world, Mynheer Joe is really a novice in all that pertains to love.

Molly has taken upon herself a new reserve. She treats him, not rudely, but with the manner of a lady on her dignity. hTe poor fellow is on nettles, so to speak. Has he done anything to offend this girl, for whose love he stands ready to peril his life if need be?

It is only the day before they reach Bombay that he gains an inkling of the truth. It comes from Mr. Grimes, who has been keeping his eyes open all this while, and is able to gauge the state of affairs.

To him Joe goes for advice; he has learned to respect the other greatly, and this matter is of so much importance to him that he can afford to take no risks.

Consolation is given to him. When, through various questions, he learns all that has happened, Mr. Grimes smiles serenely.

"Easy as falling off a log, my boy. Don't believe Miss Molly cares the less for you since learning your identity. The truth is she thinks even more of Joe Carringford than she did of Mynheer Joe, and the consciousness of that fact has alarmed her. I know the symptoms well, my boy. She fears lest she may show her love—that it may look as though she were trying to win the heir. Depend upon it, my dear fellow, all you have to do is to boldly storm the citadel, and the prize is yours."

This kind of talk cheers Joe up. He gulps down the lump in his throat and looks relieved.

"I really feared I had lost her through some blunder on my part," he admits, shaking the hand of his good friend and adviser.

"Nonsense! You were never so near victory in your life. The trouble is your battles have never been fought upon the field of love, and you don't understand the signs of distress. I'm an older man than you, Joe; take my advice, strike at the first favorable opportunity, and the blessing of Heaven attend you and yours."

Thus matters stand when the Alhambra comes to anchor before the great and wonderful city of Bombay, with its three-quarters of a million inhabitants

THE WOMAN MINISTER.

She Has Come to Stay In the Congregational Church.

The woman minister has come to stay in Congregationalism. While other denominations, like the Methodists and Episcopalians, refuse to ordain women, the Congregational denomination, in most sections of the country at least, seems willing to approve well qualified women or to extend to them the same opportunities in the Congregational ministry that are offered to worthy and well educated men. The divinity schools of the denomination admit women to their courses, and some of them, like Hartford Theological seminary, make a specialty of the opportunities offered women.

And yet it is not likely that there will be such a pressure from the feminine side of the house into the ranks of the ministry as to crowd the men to the wall. Here and there a man of moderate ability may be set one side for a brilliant, attractive woman, but that would be his fate when he came into competition with a man possessing the same qualifications.

And at any rate, as in the case of the law and medicine, it will probably only be the occasional woman in coming years who will choose the ministry for her profession. But it seems certain that, provided they possess the desirable natural and acquired qualifications, women will be welcome in the Congregational ministry at least and find an importnt work to do for their fellow men and women.—Boston Transcript.

Mrs. Rorer's Potato Salad.

I take three good sized potatoes, which will make a quart of salad, says Mrs. Rorer. Into a bowl I put half a teaspoonful of salt, a quarter of a teaspoonful of pepper and four tablespoonfuls of olive oil. I rub the pepper, salt and oil together and add two tablespoonfuls of vinegar. I add to this a small onion sliced as thin as I can slice it; then add the hot potatoes sliced. This French dressing is much more valuable from a food standpoint than the mayonnaise, as it is more easily digested. Mayonnaise is not so wholesome. In fruit salads I nearly always use lemon juice at the last, especially with French dressing, where I use bananas.

Kitchen Conveniences.

A towel rack made of bamboo rods is suspended from my kitchen ceiling by ropes and pulleys, so that it may be raised and lowered at will. It economizes space besides providing a place where towels, etc., may dry quickly, as the air is hotter near the ceiling.

Another convenience is a small shelf, waist high, near the dining room door, on which I place dishes when I want to open the door.

Beside my kitchen table, but considerably higher, is a slanting shelf about twelve to eighteen inches, with a narrow strip nailed across the bottom edge, to hold my recipe book, which is held open by a rubber band.—Woman's Home Companion.

CULINARY RHYMES.

Read These Over Many Times and Skip Gastronomic Crimes.

Always have lobster sauce with salmon
And put mint sauce your roasted lamb on.

In dressing salad mind this law—
With two hard yolks use one that's raw.

Roast veal with rich stock gravy serve
And pickled mushrooms, too, observe.

Roast pork, sans apple sauce, past doubt

Your mutton chops with paper cover
And make them amber brown all over.

Broil lightly your beefsteak. To fry it
Argues contempt of Christian diet.

To roast spring chickens is to spoil 'em—
Just split 'em down the back and broil 'em.

It gives true epicures the vapors
To see boiled mutton minus capers.

The cook deserves a hearty cuffing
Who serves roast fowl with tasteless stuffing.

Smelts require egg and biscuit powder.
Don't put fat pork in your clam chowder.

Egg sauce—few make it right, alas—
Is good with bluefish or with bass.

Nice oyster sauce gives zest to cod,
A fish, when fresh, to feast a god.

But one might rhyme for weeks this way
And still have lots of things to say.

And so I'll close, for, reader mine,
This is about the hour I dine.

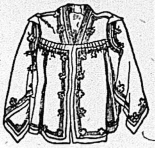
A KIMONO SACK.

How to Make One With Half a Dozen Large Handkerchiefs.

Kimono jackets and sacks made of handkerchiefs are as popular as they are pretty. The one in the illustration has a design of rose color on white, and there are six handkerchiefs where the back is comparatively plain and seven where looseness is desired in the back. Two handkerchiefs are gathered to the front and two to the back yoke, and the sleeves have part of one side sewed up and the remainder sewed into the armhole, with the point turned back to form a little ornament. By a little ingenuity the border of the handkerchief from which the yoke is cut may be made to outline the shoulder seam and the neck, as in the one illustrated. Ribbons are tied where the neck fastens.—New York Mail.



HANDKERCHIEF KIMONO SACK.

When Home Is Sweet Home.

Dissension in families often arises from a lack of mutual consideration among the members of the family. The "soft answer that turneth away wrath" is forgotten for the hasty reply, the unkind retort, that kindles the ire of ill feeling.

Love does not linger in the home where rudeness shows its unlovely qualities. It chooses to dwell in the home where the spirit of unselfishness, of self control, of thoughtfulness and of charitableness makes the atmosphere sweet. The woman who is quick to take offense is not like her of whom the Holy Scripture says, "Her ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace." Happy homes depend on happy hearts. Home is distinctively a woman's sphere, and she who sweetens it most makes earth nearer heaven.

Age Told by Figure.

The woman who follows an outdoor sport is usually a very graceful woman. The woman who takes to the rocking chair at 9 o'clock in the morning and who sits all day, getting out for only a few minutes, is not the woman who will preserve her figure. At forty this woman will look her age, and at fifty she will look a great deal older. Don't forget that age is told not by the lines on the face, but by the figure. The middle aged figure is well known. The hips and abdomen are prominent, and there is fat on the shoulder blades. Then there is the figure of old age. There is a withered figure, thin above the waist line and heavy on the hips. This is the stage when a woman begins to look as though she were seventy long before she has lived out her sixties.

Small Towels.

The housekeeper who has not discovered the value of the small towel in her household economics has something yet to learn. It is only recently that they have been used to any extent in private families, but their usefulness is making them increasingly popular. This is the towel that has heretofore been known as the hotel size. It is the small hand towel that is used in large quantities in public places, where many people use a towel only once. A large towel would be inconvenient, and the ordinary towel would make at least twice the bulk to send to the laundry.

Are Women Too Active?

The women of this generation are undoubtedly suffering from too much occupation. The listless, bored, discontented, unsettled girl of twenty years ago has given place to the restless, energetic and positively business woman thirsting for fresh outlets for enterprise. We are caught up in the whirlwind of modern unrest, and we imagine we are happy because we have no time to think anything to the contrary.—Ladies' Field.

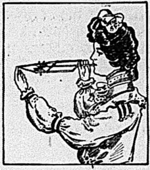
FOR YOUNG FOLKS

WINDMILL OF STRAW.

A Pretty Toy That Requires a Good Deal of Care In Making.

This is a pretty though fragile toy, and the making of it will be both interesting and easy unless you have clumsy fingers. If you have it will be a good exercise for the purpose of making them less clumsy.

The whole machine is made entirely of straw. There isn't even a drop of glue or wax to hold it together. You must have good, sound rye straw, unthrashed, or at least unbroken. If you live in the city the straws which come in bundles for use at soda water fountains will furnish your material, but some of them must be larger than others so that they can be slipped over them.



THE STRAW WINDMILL.

The wheel is made of two three-inch pieces of coarse straw. Slit each piece for rather more than half its length into either three or four strips and bend these strips out until they are nearly perpendicular to the rest of the straw, thus making a three or four spoked wheel attached to a short tube.

If these tubes are then slipped over a smaller straw, with the spokes facing each other and interlocking, they will hold together well enough and form a windmill with six or eight vanes, turning easily on its straw axle. The ends of this axle are inserted into slits made very carefully in the middle of two long coarse straws, which are fastened together by two short and smaller straws inserted near their ends in the same way.

This makes an oblong frame, or the frame may be made of a single very long straw bent into a narrow triangle, with the small end stuck into a slit near the big end. It either case another crosspiece must be put in near the windmill and a long straw passed through slits in the crosspiece and the end of the frame. This long straw is to blow through. It must be in line with the windmill, and its top must be bent upward slightly and very carefully.

Now, if you hold the apparatus by the blowing tube and the opposite end of the frame and blow through the tube the windmill will turn merrily, to your great delight.

Of course you may fasten the straws together with wax instead of slitting them, but anybody can do that.—New York Mail.

Birdie's Eye Shade.

Jenny's canary was as yellow as gold. Every fluffy feather was the color of the sun, and Dick's disposition was as bright as the sunshine itself. Every morning after his bath Jenny opened the door of his cage, and out he would hop, first to her hand and then to her shoulder. He seemed so proud of himself there, and Jenny was so pleased with him. Jenny's little brother Phil was just getting over the measles, and you know how the light hurt his eyes. He thought if it hurt his eyes like that surely it must hurt the bird's as well, and he believed it would be an excellent plan to have a shade for Dick's eyes too. When the little boy's sister came from school you may imagine her surprise to see her pet with a paper shade, all painted green, over his little round head. There he sat, like a little old gentleman, and he did not sing another song that day. He must have thought it was night under the shade that kept the light out. Do you not think that Phil should have known that birds love the light?—Exchange.

He Was Willing to Judge.

Robby was visiting at his Aunt Martha's, and when he was asked at the dinner table which kind of pie he liked best—apple, mince or pumpkin—he replied after thinking it over a few moments:

"I don't know exactly, auntie. I guess you had better give me a piece of each so that I can find out."

Fred Was Squeezed.

Fred, a four-year-old, was riding one day seated between his aunt and a friend.

"Fred, I don't believe you have room enough," his aunt said to him.

"Yes, aunty, I've got lots of room, but I'm all squeezed up in it."

But to guard your tongue from tripping—

You may feel inclined to quarrel
With the doctrine that I preach,
But the soundness of the moral
Sad experience will teach.
Be it said or be it sung

A NOTED HORSEMAN'S EXPERIENCE.

Mr. Antoine Wendling, owner of Deveras, 2.11 1-4, and proprietor of the Clifton House, Brockville, says no liniment compares with Nerviline for general use around the stable. For strains, sprains, swellings, internal pains and especially for affections of the whirl bone Nerviline is unequalled. Mr. Wendling believes Nerviline is indispensable as a horse liniment; it has strength, penetrating power and works thoroughly. Every horse and stock owner should use Nerviline. DANGERS IN CHURCH UNION

IT MEANS RETURN TO A LOWER TYPE.

Speaking of the movement towards church union, the Canadian Baptist says it means return to a less perfect type. This is liable to happen when congregations unite. It has happened already in Canada. The present Methodist denomination is an illustration in point. Before the union of the several Methodist bodies in this country there was one section of the Methodist denomination that held strongly to the principle of the total separation of church and state. But, unfortunately, a stronger Methodist body was not clear on this matter hence we find that the Methodist denomination in Canada to-day — made up of several parts —in this respect has reverted to the lower type.

If the Methodists, Presbyterians, and Anglicans of Ontario, the Baptist organ goes on to say, were all included in one religious denomination, with a central church court, and a connexional system by which all the members could be swung into line in support of any denominational purpose, "would there not be a danger that the people at large might be compelled to contribute money to forward certain schemes of this great union denomination? If any shall reply that such a suggestion is absurd we would remind him of the attempt in St. Thomas to compel the taxpayers to contribute $15,000 to a Methodist college of that town; and that the taxpayers of Kingston not long ago were compelled by the majority of the voters to contribute a large sum to Queen's University, a Presbyterian institution; and that the act by which Trinity University recently was federated with the provincial university secured for that Anglican institution special services from professors whose salaries are wholly paid from funds belonging to the province."

METHODIST VS. BAPTIST.

CHRISTIAN GUARDIAN REPLIES TO THE CANADIAN BAPTIST ARTICLE.

In this week's issue of the Christian Guardian the editor has the following with regard to the "Reversal to Type" article which appeared in last week's issue of the Canadian Baptist:

"The new editor of the Canadian Baptist probably knows his constituency, and is catering for it. By the general public, however, his leading article of last week against Church Union has been taken, we incline to think, as evidence of indiscretion and bad taste. In these days of journalistic amenity, it is not considered good form to begin work, in Donnybrook fashion, by thwacking peaceable bystanders over the head with your shillelagh, and daring them to tread on the tail of your coat. Our friend is apparently 'spoiling for a fight,' but we very much doubt if he will find anyone disposed to gratify him. We certainly are not. So far as Methodists are concerned, the Canadian Baptist ought to know that there never was a day when that section of the denomination which held strongly to the separation of Church and State was not in favor of a co-operation of the Church and the Government in the work of education on some general scheme, equally fair to all denominations—a scheme under Act of Parliament, like University Federation, and not under party control, like that of special annual grants. By separation of Church and State, we do not understand that the Church is never to help the State or the State the Church."

Regimental Notes.

BRIDGE ST. CHURCH'S INCOMING PASTOR.

AN APPRECIATIVE RESOLUTION PASSED BY QUARTERLY BOARD OF HIS PRESENT CHURCH IN PETERBORO.

Peterboro Examiner: Last night the official Board of the George Street Methodist Church, held its last meeting for the church year, and a resolution, expressive of the Board's appreciation of the ministrations of Rev. J. P. Wilson, who in June completes his four years pastorate of the church, was passed. The discipline of the Methodist church allows ministers to remain only four years in one charge, and were it not for this fact the congregation of the George Street Church would not be content to allow Rev. Dr. Wilson to leave. During the four years in which he has been pastor, the church has been most successful, both materially and spiritually. The membership has largely increased, and every department of the church is in an exceedingly flourishing condition. The church debt has been very materially reduced, and a few years more of the present successful ministration, would place the church free from all incumbrance.

Rev. Mr. Wilson leaves about July 1st for Belleville, where he will take the pastorate of the Bridge Street Church, provided the change is sanctioned by the Stationing Committee of the Conference, which meets here in June. Mr. Wilson's successor will probably be Rev. Dr. Crothers, who is at present in Belleville. The resolution passed at last night's meeting of the Quarterly Board, is as follows:

The Quarterly Board of the George Street Methodist Church, Peterboro, at this, the last quarterly meeting in the four years' pastorate of the Rev. J. P. Wilson, B.A., feel it a duty to give expression to their appreciation of their beloved pastor and his pastoral services.

The Board regrets that, under the law of the church the pastorate of Mr. Wilson cannot continue indefinitely. He has made himself respected and beloved. Eminently judicious, he stands the same to all; he has visited and comforted our sick and afflicted; all ministerial duties have been promptly and efficiently performed; his pulpit services have been most acceptable, instructive and heart reaching, so that at no time has there been a higher spiritual life than under his pastorate. We part in love and with regret and sincere wishes for his continued successful ministry, and for Mrs. Wilson and her family all prosperity and happiness.

PRETTY CANTATA AT THE CITY HALL LAST NIGHT.

"RED RIDING HOOD'S RESCUE" WAS VERY PLEASING TO A LARGE AUDIENCE.

A large audience gathered in the City Hall last night to witness the production of a cantata, "Red Riding Hood's Rescue," performed by the Children's Church Missionary Guild of St. Thomas' Church. Preceding the cantata there was a miscellaneous programme, consisting of a splendidly executed cutlass drill by eight members of the Boys' Brigade, Masters Arthur Bird, Cecil Roberts, Wilfrid Allen, Morley Stork, Donald McCargar, Leon Spangenberg, Walter Alford and Ned Farrow. Dressed in white sailor suits the boys looked "out of sight." Master Reggie Geen played the march and accompaniment for the drill. The next number was a solo by Miss Eva La Voie, "O Master, Take Me Through the Gate," which was well received. Next came a single stick drill by the eight boys above named. Miss Stork sang the "Slumber Song" with her well-known ability. Next came the cantata, which was splendidly put on and performed. Miss Kathleen Hungerford was a sedate and pleasing "Red Riding Hood's Mother," the choruses by the children being excellent, and the dances between verses charming to behold. The solos for the roses were sung by Miss Maysel Stork and Miss Bessie Spangenberg. All the children did well, but an extra word of praise is deserved by little Miss Gwendolin Ross, who, as "Buttercup," was admirably petite and pretty in her costume, made to represent a buttercup. The other parts were:

The Wolf	Arthur Northrup
Robin	Miss Winnie Harham
Woodman	Byron Hudson
Grandmother	Miss Mary Ackerill

The characters were all well taken, especially that of Miss Ackerill, whose solo was warmly encored. Little Miss Gertrude Alford was the admiration of all by her clever memory work and acting as "Red Riding Hood." A tableau, "The Temptation of Red Riding Hood" brought the entertainment to a close. The children offered baskets of flowers to "Red Riding Hood," who reached for them all unconscious of the "Wolf" behind her, both overshadowed by "The Woodman." Great credit is due the untiring ladies who trained the children, and the accompanist, Miss La Voie. The C.C. M.G. return their warm thanks to some kind and unknown friend who defrayed the expenses of the hall.

Legislature Upheld.

Ottawa, May 18.—In the Railway Commission yesterday a judgment possessing general interest, as indicating the policy which the commission may be expected to follow, was that upon the application of the municipality of Ste. Cunegonde, Que., for the opening of Dominion street over the tracks of the G.T.R. The application was dismissed with costs, the principal reason being that the Provincial Legislature had passed certain limitations and restrictions on such crossings at that point, and out of deference to the Legislature, which the commissioners assumed had the support of the people in that legislation, permission was refused.

THOUGHT OF AN EMPIRE

Proposal to Link It By Co-operation in Education.

British and Colonial Schools to Study Kindred History to the End That Pupils Would Be Trained in Sentiments and Convictions in Sympathy, Kinship and Common Loyalty— Historical Scholarships Proposed.

London, May 18.—(C. A. P.)—Sir Richard Jebb, M.P. for Cambridge University (Conservative), speaking at a conference of the Head Masters' League of the Empire, at Canada House, Lord Strathcona presiding, moved a resolution in favor of co-operation in education and the interchange of ideas between institutions at home and beyond the seas. As ties of Empire some 150 schools were already linked for the purpose by the League of Empire, and would be trained in sentiments and convictions in sympathy, kinship and common loyalty to the great Empire of which their several homes formed part.

Dr. Mahaffy argued for some kind of common study of history—some syllabus that would guide all teachers within the British Empire. Historical museums in the different schools of the Empire should be encouraged to enter into mutual exchange. He advocated the foundation of historical scholarships, which should be awarded to each colony in succession, and be held by all the recognized universities of the Empire and he appealed to the educated public of the Empire to carry out the scheme.

English Boomerang Thrower Dead.

London, May 18.—(C. A. P.)—The Hon. Harved Finch Hatton is dead of heart failure. He was one of the founders of the Imperial Federation League. He was the fourth son of the tenth Earl of Winchilsea, and was born in 1856. From 1895 to 1898 he sat in the Imperial Parliament as Conservative member for Newark, Notts. Perhaps his most notable title to fame was the fact that he was the only white man who ever could throw a boomerang like the black aborignies of Australia, where he was a squatter for a number of years.

Aberdeen's Daughter to Wed.

London, May 18.—(C.A.P.)—A marriage has been arranged and will shortly take place between Lady Marjorie Adeline Gordon, only surviving daughter of the Earl and Countess of Aberdeen., and Capt. John Sinclair, member of Parliament for Forfarshire since 1897, and one of the Liberal whips. Lord Aberdeen was Governor-General of Canada from 1893 to 1898. Lady Marjorie was born in 1880.

To the Privy Council.

London, May 18.—(C.A.P.)—The London Gazette contains the appointment of Sir Henri Elzear Taschereau as a member of the Imperial Privy Council. Sir Louis was born in 1836, was appointed a judge of the Quebec Superior Court in 1871 and made a judge of the Supreme Court of Canada in 1878. He has been chief justice since 1902.

CHARGED WITH MURDER.

Whitby Man Held Without Bail For Grand Jury at Boston.

Boston, May 18.—The two men, charged with the murder of Sergeant Jas. Wilson of the Watertown arsenal, in a south end saloon, Monday night, were held without bail for the grand jury in the Municipal Court yesterday. One of the men called himself Harry Ralph Willagl of Whitby, Ont. The second defendant is William Mooray, 28, having no home. Both men deny all knowledge of the crime.

Expenditure For British Navy.

London, May 18.—The Chancellor of the Exchequer, Austen Chamberlain, defending in the House of Commons yesterday the expenditure for the navy, said the necessity for the maintenance of a two power standard had not changed. He trusted the country would not be involved in another great war, but if it occurred he hoped the House would not be unwilling to pay what was necessary to defend its honor. The Chancellor pointed out that Great Britain was now building fifty-three warships against the same number for France and Russia. Mr. Chamberlain added that he entirely differed from those who thought the result of the Russo-Japanese war had been to wipe out one of the great navies of the world.

No Friend of the Irish.

London, May 18.—The House of Commons yesterday voted an address to King Edward praying His Majesty to order the erection of a monument to the late Lord Salisbury in Westminster Abbey, and at public expense. The only dissentient voice came from the Irish benches, whence John Redmond, the Irish leader, opposed the motion though he did not go so far as to divide the House upon it. Mr. Redmond said the Nationalists could not associate themselves with the movement because Lord Salisbury had never been a friend of Ireland, had opposed all remedial legislation, and had characterized the Irish as "Hottentots," an expression which still rankled.

Body Found After 18 Months.

Ottawa, May 18.—On Nov. 13, 1902, just 18 months ago, Archibald Campbell, an employe of the Canada Atlantic Railway, disappeared. Monday a badly decomposed body was found floating in the Ottawa River; yesterday his wife identified it as the body of Archibald Campbell. The wife thinks he was murdered.

WILL ADJOURN FRIDAY

House Will Then Not Sit Until the Wednesday Following.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier Gives Members Notice of Intention—Grand Trunk Pacific Bill Under Discussion—Opposition Kept Up a Lively Fusilade of Amendments, But They Were Voted Down With An Exception or Two Held Over.

Ottawa, May 18.—By unanimous consent of the House yesterday the bills respecting the British Assurance Company and the Western Assurance were read a first and a second time. The bills provide for the issue of new stock made necessary by the recent Toronto fire.

Mr. Rosamond introduced a bill respecting certain patents held by the General Electric Company.

Mr. Walter Scott introduced a bill extending the time for the commencement of business by the Central Light Insurance Company.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier moved that when the House adjourned on Friday next it stand adjourned till the following Wednesday.

Mr. Monk called attention to the delay in completing the construction of the bridge over the Lachine Canal at Cote, St. Paul. The delay, he said, was causing great inconvenience to the traveling public.

Mr. Emmerson replied that an official of the department would leave for Montreal in the morning to bring pressure to bear on the defaulting company to complete the bridge.

G.T.P. Under Discussion.

The bill amending the National Transcontinental Railway Act was then considered. Mr. Blain moved an amendment limiting the interest payable by the Government on the guarantee of bonds on the western section to the amount provided under the original contract. The amendment was, after discussion, lost.

Mr. Northrup moved an amendment providing that all the capital stock of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Co. be transferred to the Government of Canada as security for the performance of the covenants entered into by the company until the discharge of the bonds. The amendment was lost.

Mr. W. H. Bennett moved an amendment providing that no lease of any portion of the eastern section to the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway shall be concluded till such lease has been approved by the Governor-in-Council.

Mr. Fielding suggested that the amendment be allowed to stand. The clause stood over.

An amendment moved by Dr. Sproule provided that the Railway Commission as a board of arbitration should apportion the leasing of the Grand Trunk Railway and the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. The amendment was lost.

Rent Equal to Interest.

Mr. Kemp moved an amendment providing that the rent paid by the G. T. P. for lease of the eastern section shall be equal to the amount which the Government pays as interest for the money used in the construction of the road. The amendment was lost.

Mr. Earle of Vancouver, moved an amendment declaring that no contractor or sub-contractor engaged on the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway should employ Chinese labor.

After much pro and con Chinese debate, the amendment was voted down.

The next amendment was moved by E. Gus Porter of West Hastings. It sought to bind the Grand Trunk Company to see that the Grand Trunk Pacific carried out the contract. This amendment was also voted down.

Mr. Pringle moved to amend the contract by providing that during the term of the lease or while any of the Government guaranteed bonds are outstanding, the Grand Trunk shall not transfer any of the common stock of the Grand Trunk Pacific, except for cash at par value.

The amendment after some discussion was rejected.

Another One Dropped.

A similar fate befel an amendment offered by Mr. Borden, providing for an immediate investigation by the commissioners of any complaint of the traffic not being to Canadian ports, the result of that investigation to be at once laid before Parliament, if sitting, or, if not, then within ten days of the opening of the following session.

Mr. Haggart offered an amendment to make clear the right of the Government to foreclose in the event of the Grand Trunk Pacific being in default in the interest or the bonds guaranteed by the Grand Trunk. This amendment also was defeated.

Mr. Casgrain moved an amendment providing that the majority of the directors shall be British subjects.

Mr. Fitzpatrick promised to consider the amendment, although he preferred, he said, that such a clause should be put in the general railway act and made applicable to all railways.

Progress was then reported on the bill, and the Prime Minister moved his resolution to increase the number of commissioners from three to four. He explained that it had been decided to make the increase in order that there should be one commissioner representing Ontario, one representing Quebec, one from the Maritime Provinces and one from the West.

The resolution was reported, and the House rose at 10.45 p.m.

British Loss in Nigeria.

Cologne, May 18.—The Berlin correspondent of The Cologne Gazette telegraphs that private despatches from the Cameroons say the Cross River rebels have been completely crushed, after an obstinate fight by a British force in the territory of Southern Nigeria. The British losses were heavy. Thirteen officers and non-commissioned officers were killed.

THE FRUIT CROP.

Correspondents in Fruit Belt Report That Many Will Yield Only Half the Usual Crop.

Toronto, May 18.—Correspondents in the fruit belt report on the prospects for the year's crops. The reports received indicate that there has been considerable damage wrought by the hard winter and the late opening of spring.

Throughout the western section of the province, in the Counties of Essex and Kent, as well as in the Niagara district, there will probably be not more than half a crop of some fruits, while other buds are almost entirely destroyed. The reports agree that about 50 per cent. of the peach trees were killed, and many growers are cutting the dead wood down and burning it. Plum buds suffered by the continued cold weather, and in some localities the high percentage of 75 of the European varieties has been destroyed. Pears promise a good crop and apples will be a fair yield, although probably not as good as last year, when there was an unprecedented crop.

As to the grapes there will be a decrease in the production. Fruit growers have not in the past found grape growing very profitable, owing to the low prices realized, and many of them are cutting out whatever vines they have left and putting in more productive crops. In the western section of the province especially is this the case. There will hardly be enough grapes there for home consumption. The earliest crop, that is strawberries, will not be profitable, judging from reports received from the Oakville and other strawberry growing districts. The plants were pretty well ruined by the great depth of snow. However, many of the other small late fruits will yield a fair average crop.

The frost played havoc with the young orchard trees, and Essex County reports that fully one-third of the trees under four years old have been killed by mice. When the winter is very hard the mice are driven to attack the bark of trees, especially apple and cherry, for food. They bore under the snow on the ground and make their nests close to a particularly luscious tree, which they destroy by gnawing a strip of the bark all the way around the tree. This is sure death to the tree. These little pests have been particularly active during the past winter, owing to the snow covering the ground.

SIR H. M. STANLEY BURIED.

Remains of Explorer Interred in Churchyard of Pirbright.

London, May 18.—The remains of Sir Henry M. Stanley (who died May 10), were buried yesterday in the church yard of the old Surrey village of Pirbright.

Prior to the burial the British nation and the United States, in the persons of Ambassador Choate and Consul-General Evans, paid honor to the departed African explorer with an impressive funeral service held in Westminster Abbey.

"Bula matari" meaning "the rock breaker," as the coffin plate, testified, Stanley was known by the African natives, was taken in an open hearse to the Abbey. The route was lined by crowds of people. The pallbearers included a grandson of Livingstone, Arthur Mountenay Jephson, Stanley's former lieutenant, and the Duke of Abercorn.

Lady Stanley headed the procession of mourners that passed through the cloisters. With her was young Denzil Stanley, the deceased's adopted son, and Livingstone's daughter. As the coffin was borne past the tomb of Livingstone within the Abbey the little band stopped and for a few minutes there was a pathetic pause.

The service was fully choral. Both King Edward and the King of the Belgians were represented.

New Crown Attorney.

Hamilton, May 18.—S. F. Washington, K.C., was officially notified yesterday afternoon of his appointment as County Crown-Attorney.

Oppose Reciprocity.

Concord, N. H., May 18.—The Republican State convention here yesterday adopted a platform opposing reciprocal trade relations, which involves the exchange of competing commodities.

There are two kinds of emulsions of cod liver oil—Scott's and all the others. Not one of the latter is as valuable as Scott's Emulsion and there's a reason for it. Only the purest ingredients enter our Emulsion and its quality never varies. That is why it helps when all others fail.

There's not much oil in the market now; it's scarce and high in price. But seal oil and other inferior oils are cheap and plentiful. That's why you can buy so many substitutes for Scott's Emulsion at a lower price.

We guarantee our Emulsion to be the best remedy for weak lungs, low vitality and wasting conditions. Who guarantees the others?

We'll send you a sample free upon request.

THE BIG SHOW COMING.

RINGLING BROTHERS EXHIBIT THE RAREST COLLECTION OF ANIMALS IN THE WORLD.

The announcement that Ringling Brothers' World's Greatest Shows will exhibit in Belleville, June 4, is one that will be hailed with delight by every man, woman and child in our city and the surrounding country. "All the world loves a circus," and this is especially true of the one owned by Ringling Brothers, which is transported from city to city in five splendidly equipped trains—85 double length cars in all—which are equal in size and carrying capacity to 170 ordinary cars. The Ringling Brothers, scrupulously honest in their various systems of advertising have long made the unchallenged claim of possessing the biggest, best and most entertaining collection of high class novelty features and rare wild animals in all the world. This is especially true of the mammoth menagerie, which contains 108 cages, lairs, dens and tanks of beast, fowl and aquatic species from every jungle, plain and ocean on the face of the earth. Prominent among the hundreds of perfect zoological specimens in this unrivaled department are two beautiful giraffes, the last of an almost extinct race. These animals were secured at an enormous cost and to the Ringling Brothers they are priceless. Scientists and students of natural history say they are the lone living members of their kind. In order to keep them alive in the trying climate of the United States they are given even more attention than a baby secures from it proud and loving parents. The giraffes are transported in specially constructed cages, the tops of which can be raised and lowered at will. Cages of this kind are indispensable on account of the great height of the animals. The walls of the cages are thickly padded with curled hair and fine wire springs to prevent possible injury to the occupants. Their food is prepared according to scientific rules laid down by famous veterinarians. Another feature of this colossal menagerie, one that is in keeping with the progressiveness that is a part of the Ringling Brothers' success as amusement projectors, is "Baby Boo" the only baby elephant bred, born and successfully reared in captivity in North America. "Baby Boo" was born at Baraboo, Wis., is just 30 inches high, weighs but 119 pounds and is as cute and full of life as a fox terrier puppy. She is the pride of the menagerie attaches and with her fond mother is the pampered pet of the herd of forty big and little elephants carried by Ringling Brothers this year. The forty brutes, the largest in all animal creation, are more than half of all the elephants in America. The infant member of this big herd is as fat and as round as a butter ball fresh from the churn, and greatly enjoys the attention showered upon her by the thousands of children who daily visit the big tent. The rhinoceros is another rare animal in his interesting menagerie. It has been many years since an animal of this kind has been exhibited in either a circus or a zoological collection, and the one in Ringling Brothers' circus is said to be the sole survivor of his kind. The gnu or horned horse, the eland, the yack from the highlands of Thibet, the monster hippopotamus, the black aarch from South Africa, the cassowary seals, and sea lions, the pure white Chinese pea fowls, and the sacred cattle of India are to be found only in this menagerie, which also contains magnificent specimens of the lion, tiger, puma, hyena, buffalo and panther, herds of camels, fifty species of deer, and other animals and birds from every quarter of the globe. This collection of the flower of the animal kingdom is worth a fortune alone and stands alone in its magnitude and diversity of subject. Ringling Brothers present also 375 aerial, menage, equestrian and acrobatic artists in their circus performance, 50 famous clowns and the most lavish spectacular production ever attempted, a superb presentation of Jerusalem and the Crusades, in which 1,200 characters are shown. Two complete performances and a magnificent free street pageant are given daily. Admission tickets and numbered reserved seats may be purchased on show day at the same prices as charged on the show grounds at Riggs' music store.

LABOR CABINET'S POLICY.

Premier Watson's Statement in the Commonwealth House.

Melbourne, Victoria, May 19.—In the Commonwealth House of Representatives yesterday Mr. Watson, Premier of the new Labor Cabinet, outlined its general policy. The Government proposed to re-introduce the Arbitration Bill, making State employes amenable thereto, this being the point on which the late Government was wrecked. It was proposed, the Premier continued, to appoint a single High Commissioner in London, representing all Australia, who would gradually remove the necessity for representatives of the different States of the Commonwealth. The other proposed legislation included old-age pensions, State control of the tobacco trade and a banking bill providing for all Australia the Canadian provision to compel banks to hold 40 per cent. of their reserve in Government notes.

Hon. Chas. Hyman to Act.

Ottawa, May 19.—Hon. James Sutherland is going away for a vacation in a day or two. Hon. Charles Hyman will act as Minister of Public Works in his absence.

MIKADO'S SOLDIERS HAVE OCCUPIED TOWN OF NEWCHWANG.

Drove Out 1,500 Russians and Destroyed the Railway.

Then They Re-embarked From Kaichau, When the Russians Re-entered Newchwang With 1,000 Infantry and Two Batteries of Artillery—They Have Prepared, However, For Another Hasty Evacuation—A Jap Disaster Reported.

Paris, May 19.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of The Matin says that official advices have been received to the effect that the Japanese have occupied Newchwang.

Back in Newchwang.

London, May 19.—The Daily Telegraph's Newchwang correspondent, under date of May 18, says:

"After driving out 1,500 Russians and destroying the railways, the Japanese re-embarked from Kaichau, the combined fleet heading southward.

"The Russians re-entered Newchwang with 1,000 infantry and two batteries of artillery, but all preparations are made for another hasty evacuation."

Report Jap Disaster.

Che Foo, May 19.—Russian refugees who arrived here to-day on a junk from Port Dalny say that the Japanese bombarded Port Arthur last Monday. Russian officers who were on Golden Hill declared, according to the refugees, that during the bombardment a Japanese battleship and a cruiser struck mines and sank.

The warships reported to have been sunk off Port Arthur are the battleships Shikishima and the armored cruiser Asama. The story is not believed here, but the Russians who brought the news insist that it is true.

JAPS MOVING ON.

Terrific Bombardment Against Shore Defences at Kaichau.

London, May 19.—The Daily Telegraph's Newchwang correspondent, cabling under date of May 17, says.

"The Japanese with a large fleet of transports and warships appeared at Kaichau yesterday morning and opened a terrific bombardment against the shore defences, which were silenced by four o'clock in the afternoon, the Russians retreating to Tashichao. The Japanese troops landed and are to-day advancing rapidly, outflanking Tashichao and Newchwang."

Japs Used Submarines.

Paris, May 19.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of The Echo de Paris has been shown a letter from Lieut.-Gen. Stoessel (now in command of the military forces at Port Arthur) to a relative, recounting the loss of the battleship Petropavlovsk, in which is the following: "As the squadron approached the entrance to Port Arthur the battleship Pobioda was struck by a Whitehead torpedo discharged by a submarine boat. We saw the submarine for a few seconds, and I ordered that it be fired at, but the boat was not hit."

Another letter from Gen. Stoessel says he saw two submarine vessels in the roadstead on April 15.

Blowing Up Ships.

Chicago, May 19.—A special to The Daily News from Che Foo says: "The Daily News despatch boat Fawan, while passing Port Arthur about 10 a.m. yesterday, heard six heavy explosions. They appeared to proceed from the inner harbor and suggested the idea that the Russians were blowing up their ships and docks."

Near Newchwang.

Liaoyang, May 19.—The northern wing of the Japanese army, moving from Fengwangcheng, has occupied Kuandyasyan, 45 miles northeast of Fengwangcheng. A division of guards which was moving towards Siuyen has retired, temporarily at least, with the object, it is supposed, of covering and of co-operating with the southern troops against Newchwang and Haicheng.

Canadian Chaplain to Japan.

Toronto, May 19.—Six missionaries, one of whom is a Canadian, will go to the front with the Japanese troops in the capacity of chaplains. The news was received by the Methodist Mission Board of Toronto, and the committee, which met yesterday morning, decided in favor of Rev. Daniel Norman, B.A., B.D., an Aurora boy and a graduate of Victoria in the class of '96. He was born near Aurora and in 1894 he was ordained and volunteered for work in Japan.

Three Canadians in Tragedy.

Utica, May 19.—A terrible accident occurred at Herkimer, N. Y., at 10.30 last night, in which three members of the same family were instantly killed. Lizzie Forpaw, aged 24; Lavinia Forpaw, aged 26, and John Forpaw, aged 18, were standing on a passenger track of the New York Central Railroad waiting for a freight to pass west. Suddenly train No. 32, eastbound, rushed upon them and the unfortunates were hurled in every direction. When picked up life was extinct in each case. The body of Miss Lizzie was severed. The sisters and brother came to Herkimer from Canada a few years ago, and had since been employed in a knitting mill.

At War With Thibetans.

London, May 19.—Lord Hardwicke, Under Secretary for War, replying to Lord Spencer, the Liberal leader in the House of Lords yesterday, said Great Britain was now at war with Thibet, and until she had by force of arms vindicated her position he did not think the Government ought to be called on to give a definite pledge as to what form of settlement would follow the conclusion of hostilities.

MAN ACCUSED OF MURDER.

Gave Whitby, Ont., As His Home, But Whitby Repudiates Him.

Boston, May 19.—In the preliminary examination before Judge Wentworth yesterday William Forey, residence unknown, and Harold Ralph Williard of Whitby, Ont., who shot Sergeant James Wilson, an attache of the Watertown arsenal, were charged with murder in the first degree.

Willard is about 20 years of age, and when first arrested gave his name as Harry R. Holbrook, and said that he lived in Brocton, Mass., but Tuesday gave his name as Harold Ralph Willard of Whitby, Ont., Canada.

Formerly of Whitby.

Whitby, May 19.—Twenty-five or thirty years ago a carpenter named Holbrook lived in Whitby. He had two boys. The family moved to the States after a few months' residence here, and no one now remembers the boy's names nor where they went to. No Harold Ralph Willard is known here.

General Pearson Arrested.

New York, May 19.—General E. Pearson of Scranton, Pa., who served under Gen. Louis Botha in the Boer war, and Cornelius W. Vanderhoodt, a foreign correspondent of Baltimore, Md., and Washington, D. C., have been arrested on the complaint of Webster Davis, who was Assistant Secretary of the Interior under President McKinley, and was held in $1,500 bail each, charged with "suspicion of blackmail." Pearson claims he asked Davis to give an accounting of £40,000 of gold bullion entrusted to him by the Boer Government.

Galt Grows Progressive.

Galt, May 19.—Galt's progressive element felt jubilant last night over the fact that two very important bylaws were passed yesterday. The sewerage bylaw was carried by a majority of 248, and the bylaw to erect a new Collegiate Institute got through by a majority of 12.

Did Not Stop British Ship.

Rio Janeiro, May 19.—There is no truth in the report that Brazilian officials stopped a British ship at Manaos, on the Amazon River, May 13, on the ground that she had on board 260 cases of ammunition destined for the Peruvian forces.

SPLENDID PARADE.

RINGLING BROTHERS' SUPERB STREET DISPLAY DIFFERENT FROM ALL OTHERS.

The circus parade has at last, thanks to Ringling Brothers, reached the dignity of good taste, instructive feature and discriminating approval. This street display, peculiar to all circuses, until Ringling Brothers came into the field with fresh ideas, was a rather stale parade, in which the tawdry and unkempt laid heavy and gloomy hold of everybody and everything. With the advent of this famously successful circus firm came the well groomed man and horse, the splendid chariot and cage of distinguished style and tasteful coloring, the numerous open dens of the rarest wild animals, the inventive and never vulgar clown, squadrons of symmetrical equines of aristocratic breeding riders modishly dressed, and erect with the hall mark of culture, allegorical waggons picturing historic persons and scenes, lilliputian cages and tableau flotas for children's eyes and hearts, army types in companies and correctly uniformed and equipped, elephants strung out for a wide city block, and numbering forty or more, herds of sleepy eyed camels, trained domestic animals, musical vehicles of different kinds, the only cathedral pipe organ—the largest portable one ever made, and used in a street pageant, a mounted band, and many other unique and exclusive features, which separated the Ringling Brothers free circus pageant from all others, and made it the most fascinating event of each year. This season Ringling Brothers street parade is longer than ever, and more radiantly beautiful in costuming, decorative cages, and chariots, and splendid exhibit of handsome wild animals and shapely, highbred equines. All of the 1,280 men, women and children employed with the enormous shows take some part in the pageant. This procession leaves the show grounds at 10 o'clock sharp, and follow the usual route over the principal streets.

Wash Your Eyes.

They need it and will repay you by looking brighter. Immerse the eyes in clear water, and open the lids widely. It is better to do this before than after washing the face, as any trace of soap carried to the eye surface will cause pain. In commencing treatment let the water be very slightly tepid. Later cold water will be found quite easy to bear and more satisfactory. This neglect of eye washing is responsible for the deadly dull appearance presented by many of these "windows of the soul."

Children's Medicine.

It would we well if all who have the management of children would remember that the "great art of medicine is the proper application of the proper medicine in the proper dose at the proper time." One of the greatest errors of the nursery is the too frequent and indiscriminate manner in which medicine is given whenever the child appears the least unwell.

Ringling Brothers, whose big circus is to exhibit in this city shortly, have forty big and little elephants. All the other circuses and zoological gardens in the world combined have hardly half that number.

CONSUMPTION BEGINS WITH A COUGH.

The cough racks and tears the tender tissues of the throat. Inflammation supervenes, and then serious bronchial or lung trouble is established. The important time is at the beginning. Catarrhozone destroys disease germs, stops the cough, heals sore spots, clears the nose and throat of discharge. Catarrhozone soothes, never irritates. Guaranteed for every form of catarrh. For lasting cure use Catarrhozone. Two months' treatment $1.00; trial size 25c.

Miss Lena Rogers, of Stirling, has returned home, after spending a few weeks with her sister, Mrs. A. Gordanier.

Mr. F. Davis has purchased a fine span of horses.

A NOTED HORSEMAN'S EXPERIENCE.

Mr. Antoine Wendling, owner of Deveras, 2.11 1-4, and proprietor of the Clifton House, Brockville, says no liniment compares with Nerviline for general use around the stable. For strains, sprains, swellings, internal pains and especially for affections of the whirl bone Nerviline is unequalled. Mr. Wendling believes Nerviline is indispensable as a horse liniment; it has strength, penetrating power and works thoroughly. Every horse and stock owner should use Nerviline. Sold in large 25c bottles.

THE PRICE OF COAL.

There are few people in Canada who have not, in recent years, deplored the high price of anthracite coal, and those who complain have not always placed the blame in the right quarter. As a general thing, of course, people are justified, when prices are far apart in close-by towns, in censuring the high priced dealers and calling them extortioners. And sometimes there are cases of this kind, if we can believe the remarks made by papers of other towns which come to us in exchange. But the chief cause for the great increase in the price of coal from what it used to be years ago is, at seems, found in the natural monopoly which exists in the coal mining sections of the United States, the said reprehensible state of affairs being thus ably and clearly set forth by one of the chief financial papers of New York, the Wall Street Journal:

"The anthracite coal industry is as good an example of natural monopoly as can be found in the United States. The deposits of commercial anthracite are practically all contained in a space of about 250 square miles, within easy reach of the Atlantic seaboard. The companies controlling the output and shipment of anthracite coal are for the most part, very closely inter-related, and are managed under a working agreement of the most efficient character. At no time since the industry assumed important proportions has it been so completely under control as at present. The average price of anthracite coal at tide-water is at present $1.25 per ton higher than it was two years ago. Retail prices in New York are as high as at any time, save during periods of strike. The profits shown by companies such as Lackawanna and Delaware & Hudson amount to between 20 per cent. and 40 per cent. on the capital stock of these companies, while even Reading, grotesquely overcapitalized as it is, can show a respectable earning capacity on its present capitalization. Does any one suppose that this could be done if the monopoly element did not enter into the matter of prices?

"Anthracite coal is at present higher than it ought to be if a fair price, meaning a fair profit of the producer and shipper, were fixed. Prices and profits are at present beyond doubt, excessive, and there is some truth in the claim that the public has to put into the treasuries of the coal companies $1 per ton, on the 50,000,000 tons of coal mined per annum, more than it did in 1902, when the price was not considered low. The companies ought to be able, and undoubtedly would be able, to make a fair profit on anthracite at prices which would mean not more than $5 to $5.25 per ton to the consumer in New York City. Whether the investigation into the so-called coal trust will prove illegality or not, we do not know, but whatever it does, the result of the taxation of an unfair price for anthracite will, in time, bring its own undoing."

Efforts, we are told, are being made to induce the Government to give the contract for mason work on the new drill shed to a local contractor, it being rumored that the job might go to a Peterboro firm which stands high in the favor of the Government, and which would, it is said, bring a staff of workmen from Peterboro here to do the work. It certainly does appear that the contract, all things being equal, should go to a local man, taking into consideration the fact that the city bought the site and paid for it with public money.

Many people in this city are of the opinion that it is high time something was done towards placing the affairs of the local Fire Brigade on a better basis. At present the men are paid a salary of $67 per year—not a large sum when one takes into consideration the fact that they are sometimes compelled to lose work and are liable at any moment, on any day or night, to respond to a call and battle to save the property and perhaps lives of our citizens.

And no one will deny that in Belleville we have a sturdy and skilful band of fire fighters, whose work has been many times commended by experts, and who have never, when called upon, been found wanting. We are told of the case of a fireman who, last winter, became severely ill through exposure at a fire, and who ran up a robust doctor's bill during his illness, besides almost losing his life. Now just put this query to yourself: Is it right to ask our fire fighters, who receive about $1.33 a week for their services, to risk injuring their health and then pay doctors' bills incurred in saving the property of others?

What is to be done in the matter? Well, in our opinion, the least that could be done would be for the city to make some provision for medical attendance to the fireman. The city should insist on a strict medical examination of all applicants for a position on the Fire Brigade, and then pay a medical man to attend the firemen and look after their health. And some action looking to the bringing about of this state of affairs should be taken by the Council without delay.

• • •

The present wretched condition of Front street is again causing many people to ask the question, would it not, in the long run, pay the city to import granite from down Kingston way and put a roadway on Front street which would last for years, rather than build it with our soft limestone, which in no time, almost, works up into mud? It is a timely question, and has been for some time.

A professional gentleman writes:

"Mr. Editor,—I wish you would keep up your agitation re vicious dogs. My wife has been frightened almost into hysterics twice lately in daylight by large dogs springing suddenly upon her and biting her, she only being saved by the thickness of her clothing. If our Council do not soon move in the matter we will be compelled to take the law in our own hands and rid the community of the nuisance."

• • •

It is certainly high time something was done in this matter. People who own dogs should look after them, and the vagrant curs, whom nobody pays taxes for, should be destroyed.

The Union Jack undesigned is adorned the most. Canada's flag is the Union Jack undisfigured by the dingy circle that is supposed to represent the arms of the Provinces, that looks more like the north end of a beer keg just after its head has been knocked in. Each British nation in the empire can assert its individuality without despoiling the Union Jack of its beauty.

Teams from the Separate School and Queen Victoria School played association football on the Hospital lot yesterday afternoon, the Separates being victors by 2-0.

The West Belleville Bounders are anxiously awaiting a reply to their challenge for a game on Victoria day. Are there no more ball players on the east side of the river?

Mr. H. Parker Thomas, of this city, is superintending the judging at the Montreal Dog Show, and the Gazette says of him: Mr. H. Parker Thomas, the superintendent of the show, who is recognized as the best judge of cocker spaniels in America, has been asked to officiate at the St. Louis Fair, as a judge of cockers."

Marshall, the former Belleville boy, is now leading in the big chess tournament, and bids fair to win first prize. He is 1 1-2 points ahead of Janowski, the next man, and 2 1-2 points ahead of Lasker, the champion.

Flower Thieves.

A citizen who resides on Bridge street, in conversation this morning with a representative of The Intelligencer, stated that flower thieves were at work. The gentleman in question yesterday had a beautiful bed of tulips, but this morning he was surprised and angered to see the bed depleted. Some time during the night nearly every plant had been taken up.

LIPTON'S TEA

An Anniversary.

(Toronto News.)

Three hundred years ago, in June, 1604, the Sieur de Monts, lieutenant-general of the King of France for the country of Acadia, established his colony. He hovered round the Acadian coast, landed at Port Royal, now Annapolis, and apparently was not satisfied. Towards the end of the month he came to Dochet Island, in the St. Croix River, 8 miles below the towns of St. Stephen and Calais. There at the exact spot where the boundaries of New Brunswick and Maine march to-day he founded a small settlement. The winter was disastrous, and in 1605 the island was abandoned in favor of Port Royal. Dochet Island, however, remains the scene of the beginning of European colonization in our Maritime Provinces and in Maine. Its ter-centenary comes next month, and preparations are on foot for a commemoration. The historical society of Maine, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick are arranging a series of celebrations. On June 21 and 22 the Nova Scotia Historical Society will gather at Port Royal; on the two ensuing days the New Brunswick Society will meet at St. John; and on the 25th the Maine Historical Society, with the people of Calais and St. Stephen, will observe the anniversary at Docket Island and Calais. The three societies will unite for all three celebrations, so that the event will be thoroughly international, French colonization being commemorated by British and Americans. The modest monument which is to be dedicated will be unveiled with honors from the British and American navies.

THE INTELLIGENCER is printed and published for The Intelligencer Printing and Publishing House (Limited) by CHARLES JAMES BOWELL of the City of Belleville, in the County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, at their Office, No. 403, Front Street, Belleville, Ont.

There is nothing equal to Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator for destroying worms. No article of its kind has given such satisfaction.

Only 900 people in 1,000,000 die of old age.

Some persons have periodical attacks of Canadian cholera, dysentery or diarrhoea and have to use great precautions to avoid the disease. Change of water, cooking and green fruit is sure to bring on the attacks. To such persons we would recommend Dr. J. D. Kellog's Dysentery Cordial as being the best medicine in the market for all summer complaints. If a few drops is taken in water when the symptoms are noticed no further trouble will be experienced.

Cut the trunk, the branches fall of themselves.

For coughs, colds, bronchitis and all lung and throat troubles there is no preparation of medicine can compare with Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It never fails to afford prompt and permanent relief. It removes all soreness and heals the diseased parts. It immediately soothes the most troublesome coughs, and by promoting expectoration, removes the mucous which stops up the air tubes which causes difficulty in breathing, thereby gives relief to that depressing tightness experienced in the chest. Public speakers and singers will find Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup of inestimable value, as it speedily and effectually allays all irritation and huskiness in the throat and bronchial tubes and gives power to the vocal cords, rendering the voice clear and sonorous. If parents wish to save the lives of their children and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness, give the Syrup according to directions.

A tailor made woman is one of the noblest works of man.

To Those of Sedentary Occupation—Men who follow sedentary occupations, which deprive them of fresh air and exercise, are more pone to disorders of the liver and kidneys than those who lead active, outdoor lives. The former will find in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills a restorative without question the most efficacious on the market. They are easily procurable, easily taken, act expeditiously, and they are surprisingly cheap considering their excellence.

A self made man has his private opinion as to what is the noblest work of God.

A Sure Cure for Headaches. — Billious headaches, to which women are more subject than men, become so acute in some subjects that they are utterly prostrated. The stomach refuses food, and there is a constant and distressing effort to free the stomach from bile which has become unduly secreted there. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are a speedy alterative, and in neutralising the effects of the intruding bile relieve the pressure on the nerves, which cause the headache. Try them.

Some men whose lives are blameless in other ways will whistle "Bedella."

The Well Known Strengthening Properties of IRON, combined with other tonics and a most perfect nervine, are found in Carter's Iron Pills, which strengthen the nerves and body, and improve the blood and complexion.

Look out for the man with an imagination strong enough to draw a dollar out of your pocket.

UNTOLD MISERY — WHAT A WELL-KNOWN COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER SUFFERED, AND HOW HE WAS CURED.—Gentlemen, about five years ago I began to be troubled with Dyspepsia, and for three years suffered untold misery from this terrible complaint. I was at that time travelling for Messrs. Walter Woods & Co., Hamilton, and was treated by some of the best physicians in the country, but to no purpose. I continued to grow worse, one day I was induced to try a bottle of Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, and to my great surprise and joy, I soon began to improve. I continued using this medicine and when the third bottle was finished I found I was entirely cured, and as a year has elapsed since then, I feel confident that the cure is complete and permanent. To all afflicted with this distressing complaint I heartily recommend Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, believing that the persistent use of it will cure any case of Dyspepsia. (Signed)

T. S. McINTEE.

Some second thoughts occur several minutes later.

He Has Tried It.—Mr. John Anderson, Kimloss, writes: "I venture to say few, if any, have received greater benefit from the use of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil than I have. I have used it regularly for over ten years, and have recommended it to all sufferers I know of, and they also found it of great virtue in cases of severe bronchitis and incipient consumption."

The legislative council at Pretoria has voted in favor of the introduction of Asiatic labor in South Africa.

Holloway's Corn Cure is the medicine to remove all kinds of corns and warts, and only costs the small sum of twenty-five cents.

THE USE OF POWDER.

It Will Not Harm the Skin if You Also Use Cold Cream.

A word about using powder. It's all right if you clean the face thoroughly every night with hot water and olive oil soap and every afternoon with cold cream and if always the powder is the very purest. With these precautions you can use any amount of it without injury and possibly, as the French beauty doctors insist, with benefit.

Actresses, who use not only powder, but rouge, grease paint and many other materials in their various "makeups," are yet famous for retaining the bloom of youth into middle life and beyond it. May Irwin, who is the mother of grown children and yet has a smooth, pink skin which a girl of sixteen might envy, attributes her exceptional complexion to the continual use of cold cream. It is the foundation of every "makeup," and it is used with unfailing regularity night after night. For three or four hours the actress is sure to have a dressing of cold cream nourishing her complexion and keeping it fresh and elastic.

The average woman, on the contrary, is apt to dab on her cream one night and forget it for two, with the result that her half starved complexion fades by forty and is parchment at fifty. Probably she attributes the loss of her freshness to the powder puff. But the real trouble was neglect of the cold cream. Use it plentifully and regularly, and powder will do no harm.—New York News.

HOLLOW CHEEKS.

What to Do to Make Them Become Full and Plump.

Hollow cheeks are something no woman wants, and it is not hard to remedy them. To impart firmness facial gymnastics and massage, accompanied by a good prepared skin food or cocoa butter, will prove beneficial. The skin food is to be applied just before retiring and the exercise to be indulged in both night and morning fo. about ten minutes. To exercise the muscles first compress the lips, fill the cheeks with air and work the jaws in a chewing movement, puffing the cheeks outward as much as possible and keeping the mouth closed.

Before applying the skin food prepare the face to receive it by a thorough washing in warm soapy water, followed by a cold rinse. Dry and with the tips of the fingers stroke the muscles of the cheeks upward and backward with gentle pressure after placing the thumbs at the base of the ears. Anoint the hollows with the cocoa butter and execute a rotary movement, beginning by placing the finger tips at the corner of the mouth and following the jawbone to the temple.

Start again at the corner of the mouth and work upward through the middle of the cheek to the outer corner of the eye. Repeat each movement ten times, keeping the pressure firm but gentle.

CULINARY CONCEITS.

Boiled cabbage is much sweeter when the water is changed in boiling.

Don't throw away pieces of bread. Put them aside and dry or roll and save for scalloping or crumbling.

Add one-quarter of a cup of boiling water to any rule for sponge cake to make it roll easily for jelly cake.

To stir the yolks of eggs into soup or hot custard so that they will be smooth first beat them and then add a teaspoonful of cold water.

In making gingerbread, if the molasses and butter are heated together before the other ingredients are added the cake will be nicer.

Milk toast is improved by the addition of a little grated cheese just before serving. Grated cheese is also a pleasant addition to a dish of mashed potatoes.

Cooking a Fowl.

The only way in which a fowl is usually made tender enough to eat is to cut it up and cook as fricassee, roast chicken being considered possible only when one wishes to pay the extra price for young birds. It must, however, be the toughest of hens or roosters which does not succumb to the "pot roasting" process if carefully done. Prepare as for roasting and place in a pot deep enough to hold the fowl without crowding one-half pound of suet for three pounds of chicken. Cut up an onion and let it cook till brown, when add the chicken, covering tightly. It should simmer for six hours. Roast quickly for half an hour.

Thimbles.

A soreness in what is called the thimble finger and even serious inflammation are sometimes caused by the use of cheap thimbles. These thimbles, which are composed of lead or something equally injurious, may be tempting by reason of their low price, but they are not safe. Silver thimbles are the best, but for those to whom they prove too expensive nothing is better than thimbles of highly burnished steel. By a person who gains her living with her needle a steel thimble is always liked, for it will outlast two or three of the more expensive silver ones.

Agate Ware.

To clean agate ware put the ware on the stove filled with water, and into the water put a tablespoonful of salsoda (washing soda), and then after awhile use a scouring soap, and you will be pleased with the result; also put your bean pot on the stove and a good generous tablespoonful of soda, and it will wash as easily as a cup. A little soda put in your greasy baking pans and keeping them warm while washing your other dishes will help along that most disagreeable task.

INGRAIN CARPET RUGS.

Made at Home, Very Pretty, Soft and Almost Everlasting.

Rugs are most useful things in the scheme of summer furnishing. Beautiful ones may be made from strips of old ingrain carpet. Nothing could feel softer under the foot, and if the carpet has pretty colors in it the rug becomes "a thing of beauty" and almost "a joy forever," so durable is it. A writer in the New Idea Magazine has the following to say about this kind of rug:

For a foundation take a piece of strong material the size of the rug wanted. Denim or duck is preferable, and if a dark shade is used the rug will look neat underneath without lining. Since large ones become too heavy to handle as a whole, especially if the sewing is done upon a machine, it is better to cut the foundation into two or three pieces and sew the pieces together when finished.

Make bias a strip of the carpet and then cut it into strips about one and one-third inches wide. Sew one of these across the foundation directly through the center of the strip. Turn up one edge and sew another strip through the center also, as close to the first as you can, continuing this process until the foundation is covered. The stitching when viewed upon the underside should be from one-third to one-half of an inch apart. Of course the closer and more evenly the strips are put on the firmer and more durable the rug. After a number have been sewed on each should be partially frayed. As these are bias they fray easily and stand up, a soft, furry pile that feels comfortable underfoot. If the fraying is done unevenly the top of the rug should be sheared smooth and swept free of the lint. Short ends of the strips may be pieced in and never be noticed when all are frayed and clipped, so that every scrap of the carpet can be used.

We have a rug made out of old carpet to start with that has been a door mat for six years and is still too pretty and serviceable to throw away.

Cleaning Lacquered Brass.

As every one knows, lacquer is put on brass for the purpose of preventing rust, verdigris, etc., but notwithstanding this lacquered brass sometimes becomes soiled, and in that case the following is a good way to clean it: It must be immersed in hot, strong soda and water and brushed with soap. While still covered with the lather it should be dipped in very hot water and after remaining there a minute or two should be lifted into cold water and subsequently dried. It should not be necessary to polish the brass after this process, and it must be remembered that the lacquer is only a preparation laid on the surface and is liable to wear off if the article be subjected to rough treatment.

No Grease In These.

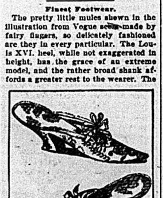
There is a housekeeper in Maine whose doughnuts are famous not only in her own home, but throughout the neighborhood. She attributes a great part of their popularity and healthfulness to this little finishing touch: She has a bowl of hot water on the stove, and as each doughnut is removed from the kettle it is plunged for a moment into the water, thus removing any superfluous fat. The need and value of this are shown by the grease coated water and by the added delicacy and healthful nature of these most popular doughnuts, says a Good Housekeeping correspondent.

The French Way With Veal.

Veal is tender when it is killed, and all that is necessary is to have the animal heat thoroughly out of the body and the "rigor" of the muscles relaxed before it is fit for food. The proper way of treating veal is to pound the fibers, as the French do, as some ignorant Americans treat beef—a barbarous way to treat such a noble meat. It breaks the fibers and lets out the juices. Veal is not hurt by breaking the fibers.

Finest Footwear.

The pretty little mules shown in the illustration from Vogue seem made by fairy fingers, so delicately fashioned are they in every particular. The Louis XVI. heel, while not exaggerated in height, has the grace of an extreme model, and the rather broad shank affords a greater rest to the wearer. The most exquisite silks and brocaded satins are used in making, the linings being of the dominant shade or white.



SOME PRETTY LITTLE MULES.

Ribbon trimmings around the edge are sometimes used, and fancy cords are seen on some of the best models. Old brocades are often pressed into use for their fashioning and make extraordinarily artistic models. The foot looks only about half its size in these mules.

A TRUNK WARDROBE.

When Closed It Makes a Convenient Bedroom Window Seat.

When my baby girl was put into short clothes she required so many dresses that I found the hamper, previously used, inadequate.

A neighbor gave me a small, old fashioned wooden trunk having one light tray inside. It was an unsightly object, being much soiled, both inside and out. I moistened all the paper lining, then carefully removed it, and when the wood was thoroughly dry I relined with scraps of wall paper in a dainty pattern of wild roses, using the border for the inside of the top and the bottom of the tray. I fitted this lining very carefully and pasted it on.

I covered the outside of the trunk with denim, tacking through the small plaits around the top. I covered the lid with a separate piece of denim, stretched very tightly over a stuffing of excelsior, and finished with a four inch ruffle tacked on with brass headed tacks. The trunk when it is closed makes a convenient window seat for my bedroom.

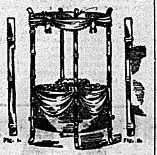
The receptacle under the tray is thirty inches long and gives ample room without folding or crushing for the two dozen little white dresses, with the cambric and flannel petticoats. The tray is convenient for smaller articles. The little shoes, each pair in its own box in a corner, and the little pique reefers and bonnets, also the tiny sheets and pillow cases, are easily within reach. I do not see how I could get along without this device, which would be equally useful for shirt waists or lingerie.—St. Louis Republic.

PRETTY WORK TABLE.

It is Made of Bamboo Poles and a Cheese Box.

Here is a charming work table made of some lengths of bamboo and an ordinary wooden cheese box. The height of the four lengths of bamboo, which form the foundation for the table, are regulated by your individual taste, and having cut them the required height cut a slot in each piece, as shown in Fig. 1, the exact measurement of the bottom of the box, which is then wedged in. (See Fig. 2.)

The top of the box which forms the table is fixed in the same manner higher up. As the slots are only cut the width or a fraction more of the width of the box they naturally hold tightly and only require one or two screws to keep them in place.



CHEESE BOX WORK TABLE.

The structure being completed, the decoration must be considered, and you have endless variety to choose from. First there is enamel, with which lid and box can be covered, the different wood stains varnishing in this scheme the bamboo. Poker work, imitation marquetry, metallic painting, all these can be pressed into service with artistic results.

Household Linen.

Modern housewives are beginning once more to pride themselves on their household linen, and this fact is very evident in the use of tablecloths woven in the most exquisite and artistic designs, the table napkins following them on a more minute scale. Some of the bedroom towels now in use are very useful both as to fineness and pattern, the borders being of floral design, beautifully handworked in washing thread or silk. They are finished with a deep fringe of linen thread, with a heading of the colors which prevail in the embroidery. Many of these face towels are of the finest imaginable Irish damask, with design and border of shamrocks or tiny fleurs-de-lis.

Drippings.

Grease, cooking butter and drippings of any kind that have become "strong" or discolored may be made sweet and white by being clarified with bits of raw potato. Turn all the drippings into a deep kettle which has a perfectly fitting cover and allow them to become heated through. In the meantime slice and peel one medium potato for three pounds of dripping. Slice and throw in and allow it all to cook together until the bits of potato are a deep brown. Strain and set away. When cold a quantity of snow white shortening material will repay the time and trouble.

The Really Clever Pose.

There is much more intellectual cleverness among the girls of today than there was fifty years ago. A flippant cousin says: "It does not pay for a girl to be clever. Men are afraid of you if you are, and the other girls hate you." But between a pedantic prig and a well educated young woman there is a vast difference. The really clever women are those who disguise their learning and pose as amiable and charming idiots.—London Ladies' Field.

Cut Flowers.

Cut flowers should be placed in the refrigerator overnight. In the morning cut the stems about an inch, and put fresh cool water in the vases. Do not sprinkle them, as a rule, although roses do not seem to be injured that way.

Sunshine Furnace

Flues Easily Cleaned

Cleaning out the flues of most furnaces is so difficult and complicated that only an expert can do it, and experts' services usually come high

The flues in the Sunshine Furnace can be cleaned from two different clean-out doors and from the feed-door, so that there is no part of the flues which is not easily reached.

A special brush for this purpose is always supplied, and the operation is so simple that a boy can perform it.

The whole Sunshine Furnace construction is on the same plan of simplicity.

The Great Hair Tonic is a Positive and Thorough Antiseptic and will quickly eradicate all trace of scalp bacteria, which is the cause of hair falling, dandruff and baldness. NO SCALP CAN BE HEALTHY AND NO HAIR CAN BE BEAUTIFUL WHEN CONTAMINATED WITH THESE DISEASE-BREEDING CREATURES. They undermine the hair and devour all the nutriment or life-sap of the scalp, without which the scalp dries up and peels off, forming dandruff and causing the loss of hair. SEVEN SUTHERLAND SISTERS HAIR GROWER AND SCALP CLEANER ARE THE ONLY REMEDIES IN THE WORLD THAT WILL DESTROY THESE GERMS. They penetrate the scalp thoroughly, carrying with them all the necessary properties to quickly regenerate all the impoverished parts. They rebuild the lost tissue of the scalp and renew the growth of the hair in every case. A few applications will make the hair fairly sparkle with new life and vigor. They make healthy hair grow twice to three times as fast as it does normally.

CHEESE BOXES.

Chief of the Dairy Division, Ottawa, Mr. J. Ruddick, Makes a Strong Appeal for a Better Quality.

At the dairy conventions recently held Mr. J. A. Ruddick, Chief of the Dairy Division, Ottawa, made a strong appeal for better cheese boxes. Boxes are, said he, necessary to protect the cheese from injury in transportation, to facilitate their handling, and to permit their being piled several tiers deep in a warehouse without being crushed out of shape. Without the boxes the cheese could not be delivered in Great Britain in a presentable condition. Now, if it is desirable to have cheese in boxes at all, it is surely important that the box should be strong enough to reach its destination in a sound condition. A great many shipments of cheese are landed on the other side with twenty-five per cent. of the boxes broken. Indeed some reports from the inspectors show a larger percentage. This simply means that one quarter of the money paid for the boxes has been spent to no purpose. And that is not all, for the broken boxes in a shipment, while detracting from the actual value of the cheese which they once contained, make the whole lot less attractive to a purchaser.

What are the reasons for this unsatisfactory state of affairs? In the first place we have increased the weight of our cheese, and at the same time reduced the strength of the box by using thinner veneer and an inferior quality of elm. It is evident also that there are many box makers who have never properly learned their trade, as a large proportion of the boxes is only half put together.

The increasing cost and scarcity of elm, and the demands of cheese manufacturers for a cheap box, have induced the veneer cutters to reduce the thickness of the veneer, until much of that now offered for sale is entirely too flimsy for the purpose. It should never be cut less than full five to the inch. A great deal of it is six and some even seven to the inch.

Another fault in the veneer is that the log is often not boiled sufficiently to soften the wood; consequently the veneer knife shatters it while cutting, and gives it a tendency to split easily. Another result of insufficient boiling or steaming is that the salts of the wood are not extracted; consequently boxes made from such stock mould very readily.

When I began buying boxes for the cool curing rooms, said Mr. Ruddick, I insisted on getting heavy selected veneers. The box makers tried to persuade me to accept the thin veneer, some claiming that it would stand more rough usage than the thicker material. I have had to give two cents above the regular price for such boxes, but it paid to do so, for the reports on shipments from the curing rooms showed only one and two per cent. broken. Of course these shipments were all carefully loaded into the cars and not left standing four or five tiers high, to be thrown down and smashed by the first shunt. Hundreds of boxes are broken in that way. I believe there is almost enough wasted in trimming boxes, either in the cheese factory, or at the warehouse to make up this difference of two cents. Boxes are now worth at least one cent per inch in depth, and that part which is cut away is absolute waste.

If boxes are not thoroughly dry when put on the cheese, the growth of mould is started. This is particularly the case in cold weather when the boxes dry slowly.

In aiming to have the cheese fit the boxes without trimming, it is well to remember that a box, which measures twelve inches deep when newly made, will shrink to eleven and a half inches as it dries out. The same box will expand again to nearly its original depth after it has been in a warehouse for a week or so, because it absorbs moisture from the cheese. In fitting dry boxes to the cheese it is necessary, therefore, to have the cheese project at least one-quarter of an inch above the edge of the box. One would think it hardly necessary to call attention to the importance of having the box of the proper diameter to fit the cheese snugly. No box will stand the handling that is not supported by the cheese on the inside.

Value of a Cord of Manure.

One cord of manure on the basis of fertilizing constituents, according to experiments conducted by the New Hampshires Agricultural College and Experimental Station, is worth 3½ cords of meadow muck. On the basis of organic matter, a cord of manure is equivalent to 1½ cords of muck.

FEED FOR LIVE STOCK.

Limits and Value of a Balanced Ration in Feeding.

The principle of feeding a balanced ration originated with farmers who found in their everyday experience that the commonly raised grains of the farm when fed whole were lacking in something necessary to produce uniform development of flesh and fat and to promote rapid, thrifty, healthy growth, says Wisconsin Agriculturist.

It is not possible to formulate a perfectly balanced ration, one best for the cow giving milk or for the young growing animal, from any combination of corn, oats, rye and wheat. If good clover or alfalfa hay forms the roughage, a combination can be made from the above grains that will come close to being satisfactory, or if peas are grown with the oats and ground into meal a balanced ration may be formulated from the grains produced upon the farm.

It will always pay best to make the ration right, and if the farm grown grains are too wide money will be made by selling some of the grain and buying bran, gluten or oilmeal to mix with the balance of the feed.

Breeding and Feeding Hogs.

Public opinion is much at sea as to what constitutes a good quality of bacon. A good many persons imagine the bacon hog to be a sort of scrub animal, resembling a razorback. This is a mistaken idea. The true bacon hog is a highly improved animal, as much improved as any of the other breeds of swine, although the improvement is made with these in a different way from which it occurs with some other breeds. Others again conclude that hogs that are marketed in a lean condition furnish bacon. This mistake is quite as great as that referred to above. The true bacon hog is an animal which is kept growing from birth on until ready for the market, says The Farmer. Care must be taken, however, that the growth be not rushed too fast at any particular period, or the tendency will be to produce pork lacking in firmness. A certain amount of exercise is also conducive to producing the right kind of pork.

When animals are sold too young or too light they will likely furnish pork too soft to satisfy the dealers in a good quality of bacon. Food, however, exercises a more important influence on firmness in pork than anything else. If a considerable quantity of skimmed milk is fed along with corn it will make firm pork. The same is true of clover, rape and alfalfa when these crops are fed in proper balance.

Barley has also been found to furnish an excellent food for producing firm bacon; also shorts fed along with barley.

The illustration gives a front view of Challenger, the champion beef animal of the late Chicago International Show.

The Value of Timothy Hay.

Farmer feeders of timothy hay are liable to overestimate its value as a feed. Where corn is grown and the straw taken care of, where clover, alfalfa and cow peas can be grown for hay for feeding to farm stock, the greatest value of timothy hay is in its selling price. It has a much greater feeding value to the town keeper of horses, who uses oats largely as his grain feed and finds good, bright timothy the best filler he can use in connection with oats or oats and corn.

True, if there be no clover or alfalfa hay at hand and only corn stover for "roughage," for the sake of adding variety to the ration some timothy should be used.—Journal of Agriculture.

Cut Bone Makes Pullets Lay.

I have only common fowls that were hatched May 14, and the pullets began laying October 14, or at 22 weeks old. I sold three cockerels September 1 that dressed 9½ pounds. Up to December 7 my 14 pullets laid 14 dozen eggs and the last week they averaged three dozen per week. All the extra care they get is all the cut bone they will eat every day. This is cooked bones from the kitchen, some being saved for several years in hopes of getting a bone cutter. After getting it I would not farm without it, for it saves a large amount of feed in that it makes useful a waste product at a trifling cost in labor.—American Agriculturist.

CANNED GOODS.

Information Concerning the Trade in These and Evaporated Goods in Great Britain—Market Pointers.

Mr. A. W. Grindley, Agent of the Department of Agriculture in Great Britain, gives the following information in regard to the trade in canned and evaporated goods during 1903, in addition to the extracts from his annual report published last week:

There is a good demand for the following fruit pulps which can be put up in Canada: Strawberry, raspberry, gooseberry, black currant, peaches, pears, apricots.

The above fruits are largely used in jam factories in Great Britain.

Canadian packers of fruit pulps should observe the following points:

1. Use a heavy grade of charcoal tin plates for making the cans.
2. Do not use rosin for soldering the inside seams as the least portion imparts a bad flavor to the contents.
3. One gallon tins are preferable to cans holding five gallons chiefly because there is less loss in case of a puncture or other cause of damage.
4. For colored pulps an internally lacquered tin is very much preferred.
5. No coloring matter or preservatives of any kind should be added.
6. Have cases holding cans made strongly and with tight covers, not slats.

Tinned Meats.

There is a good demand in Great Britain for tinned meats, but complaints are made that Canadian tinned meats, etc., are often colored next the tin by some acid action. This may be caused by using light grade tin plates for making the cans. These plates are rolled after being tinned and so much of the tin being taken off the iron is exposed in spots and a chemical action sets in shortly after the goods are packed. Some British firms who import heavy lines of canned goods from Canada furnish the tin plates from which the cans are made and also have an export representative to supervise the packing of their goods during the season, the result being general satisfaction and increased demand for the brands.

The quality of Canadian beef and mutton is preferred to the imports from other countries, the packs of which countries are often filled with meat from which extracts have been taken to make fluid meat preparations.

Most of the Canadian tinned beef and mutton is put up in tins holding not over two pounds of meat. There is a good demand for tins holding six pounds, especially for War Office and Naval Stores.

Whatever sized tins are packed be sure they contain strong net weight.

Tinned Lobster.

There is a good demand for Canadian tinned lobster if properly put up. Only heavily tinned plates should be used for making cans (lobster works quickly on light plates), the inside of which should be lined with heavy parchment paper and the lobster packed while thoroughly fresh. This requires large packing factories. Small factories do not as a general rule employ skilled labor and as they cannot pack as fast as supplies come in during the packing season the result is that stale or partially stale goods are packed which go off flavor very quickly.

Dessicated Vegetables.

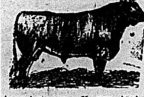
There is a growing demand for dessicated vegetables in Great Britain, not for home consumption, but for Naval Stores and the War Office.

Goiter in Sheep and Lambs.

Goiter is becoming annoyingly prevalent, so much so that it is getting to be a source of very great loss, especially to those engaged in breeding the better classes of sheep, says Professor Thomas Shaw in American Sheep Breeder. Now it is a fact that this disease is the outcome of certain causes, just as surely as every other disease is the result of a cause. But unfortunately the causes that lead to it are not known. Until they are any measures to prevent it can only be tentative in character. Now why should it be impossible to detect these causes? There is evidently some relation between goiter in the lamb and the condition of the system in the dam, for the lamb nourished in the dam until birth is affected by goiter as soon as it is born.

Shorthorn Bull Lord Wenlock.

The above illustration represents the Shorthorn bull, Lord Wenlock, for which $2,640 ($6,000 Argentine money) was paid at the annual sale of breeding stock held in Buenos Ayres last year. He was bred in Argentina from stock imported from Scotland. He is possessed of exceptional quality and from his proud bearing it may be judged that he would be an impressive sire.



Agricultural News and Notes?

Speaking of materials used in adulterating feed, Professor Carlyle of Wisconsin says weed seeds are often ground and introduced into the bran. They may possess feeding value, but the bran should not be called pure bran.

According to American Agriculturist, potato holdings are not heavy, fully three-fourths of the crop having found its way to market.

As a cultivated plant the dandelion is assuming a place of some importance in farm products, and in the New England market gardens it is grown extensively, yielding large returns per acre, says American Cultivator.

THE MESSENGER FROM KHARTOOM

BY ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

Author of "Dr. Jack," "Dr. Jack's Wife," "Miss Caprice," Etc., Etc.

—Europeans, Hindoos, Mohammedans, Parsees, Christians, Buddhists, Jews, etc.—one of the most delightfully interesting cities upon the face of the earth.

As soon as it is possible, the whole party, with their luggage, are transferred to the shore, where vehicles are secured to take them to a hotel.

These native shigrams, or, as they are generally called, palkee gharries, are peculiarly built affairs. They look like an oblong, black box with four wheels; a sliding door is on either side, and there are also windows. Two seats face each other, and the whole equipage is drawn by a couple of sturdy bulls of the species used in India for nearly every purpose, decked in showy blankets, with a driver to walk alongside and urge them on.

Mynheer Joe knows where to go. He has been in Bombay before, and the rest may now profit by his experience.

A small hotel is to be found among the bungalows of the rich foreigners and Parsee bankers upon Malabar Hill, a suburb of a charming character, where the grounds of nearly every house are so filled with cypress, and banyan-trees, coconut-palms and tropical vegetation, such as plantains, guavas, custard-apples and the like, that the building can rarely be seen over the wall. There is also a cool fountain splashing in every yard, which adds to the beauty of the scene.

At the hotel they managed to find accommodations, and Mynheer Joe even hires what little space there is to spare. The wisdom of this is made apparent when, later, a palkee gharry arrives, bearing the baron and his companions, who are compelled to go back into the city and seek accommodations at one of the leading hotels, near the Esplanade, where the government buildings are to be found.

Molly's first act is to secure a lady's maid, for in this enervating climate one does as little as possible, and an ayah is almost indispensable to the comforts of my lady, fanning her, dressing her hair and doing worlds of small things.

The gentlemen, of course, fall in with the customs of the country at once, and soon appear dressed in white, with shakos upon their heads.

Mynheer Joe presently makes his way to the barracks, known as cantonment in this tropical country. He has business with an officer whom he hopes to find in Bombay. Disappointment awaits him, since the party in question is at present away. His return from Benares is daily expected—Benares, the sacred city, where one of the yearly melas, or religious fairs, that draw thousands of pilgrims anxious to wash in the waters and be made well, is in progress. So Joe can only await his coming. Meanwhile, there is no reason why he should not be enjoying the passage of time.

When he contemplates the pleasure with which he will show Molly over this peculiar city of the Hindoos, gazing upon its many strange sights, he finds no reason to feel down-hearted over the matter.

He knows it all like a book, from the Towers of Silence on the hill, where the Parsees bring their dead for the vultures to prey upon, to the horse markets, where sit, cross-legged, Persians wearing their blue or green cotton kuftans, belted at the waist, and smoking their kalians, together with more active Arabians, with their striped mantles and silk kafeeyas, or tasselled handkerchiefs, twisted about their heads, all having horses for sale, that have been brought by sea from the land of Mocha.

The mysteries of the native quarter are well known to this man who has travelled, and he is almost as much at home among the shops and bazars of the famous Bhendy Bazar Road as on Broadway, New York.

Thus, the party can in a measure be free from the tyranny of the chowkidar, or guide, although they secure several of these illustrious personages to be useful. They are ready to do almost anything, even to waiting on the table or pulling the cord of the great punka fan that keeps the air cool at meal times.

As in almost every part of the globe, the travellers find money an important factor to bring comfort, and the mighty rupee in Bombay will go far toward making one's stay a round of pleasure.

The weather is delightful, and it looks as if our travellers from the Nile may have a very pleasant stay in Bombay. Sometimes coming events do not cast a shadow before. The cyclone may burst upon a community with startling rapidity. Perhaps these good folks who have malice in their hearts toward none may yet be surprised by the sudden and awful coming of a storm. As the dreaded monsoon sweeps across the Indian Ocean at certain times, bringing ruin in its path, so the hatred of one man may leave a trail of desolation behind, especially when that man is as unscrupulous as the Russian baron who comes to India in the interest of his czar, whose covetous eyes have long yearned to possess the rich country of the Indus and the Ganges.

One there is among them who sleeps with part of his senses on the alert—the man whose business has been such that he trusts not to seeming peaceful surroundings—Obed Grimes will hardly be caught napping when the blow finally falls.

Sandy is alive to his opportunity, and endeavors to see as much in a limited time as he possibly can. He takes copious notes in shorthand as he goes, which later on will be written out in the shape of spicy letters to the wide-awake New York journal by whom he is employed.

In company with Demosthenes Tanner of a chowkidar or two, he proceeds to take in as much of Bombay as can be done during a single afternoon.

They visit the Towers of Silence, enter magnificent bazars, watch the worshipers in the mosques, where the venerable moulajee chants in a harsh voice or reads the Koran, while the devout Mussulmans bow in the direction of the setting sun, for Mecca lies thither, far away over the Persian Gulf. They see life upon the great Bhendy Bazar Road, where porters carry loads, stately elephants are occasionally met, bullocks draw native vehicles; where stride the rich Brahmin, the poor gwalla, or cow-herder, the lordly rajah and his attendants, and the lower grades of Hindoo people, of different castes, each picking his or her way along without touching others, which faculty makes a crowd in India more endurable than in any other place on earth.

All these things and others they see. The eyes never tire of watching the human kaliedoscope that moves and changes before him. In no other city on earth can this peculiar spectacle be met with in so intense a form as Bombay. Mingling with the colored robes of the natives, the white or red coats of the British soldiers remind one of a stupendous fact—that India, containing about a quarter of the population of the globe is in reality ruled by some thirty thousand British soldiers. Truly the Hindoos are a peace-loving people. No war like nation would thus tamely bear the yoke of the conqueror.

While Sandy and the Honorable Demosthenes Tanner are thus taking in the sights, Mr. Grimes nurses a lame ankle at the hotel. This leaves Mynheer Joe to show Molly about.

They have a very enjoyable afternoon, though it is just possible they are as much wrapped up in each other as interested in the singular sights upon which they gaze. This is only the same old story, with variations, that has been told since the days of our first parents, and which will never be antiquated. Love's young dream! What an ecstasy it carries. No time in future life can compare with it.

It is near the close of the day, when they are thinking of returning to the hotel that they arrive in front of a large mosque. Many persons are passing in and out, for worship is carried on at all hours among the Mohammedans.

"Let us look in," says Joe. "I think it will repay you for the trouble."

He pays no attention to a frowning Hindoo near the door, but soon sees that they will not allow his companion to pass. This mosque is just as sacred as the highest at Mecca. The followers of Mohammed believe so little in women having a soul like themselves that they deprive them of many privileges. They are deemed servants, slaves, or, if particularly beautiful, fit subjects for a harem.

Thus foiled, Mynheer Joe and his fair charge turn away, laughing. They do not seem to feel very badly over the matter. True, the young woman's curiosity is piqued, but there are so many things to be seen in the quaint city that it need not worry one if a single door is shut in one's face.

It is just at this moment that they become aware of something out of the ordinary in the air. Molly shivers.

"Are we going to have a storm? I feel so very queer!" she remarks; while Joe looks upward in a thoughtful manner.

"Now that you mention it, I myself am conscious of a strange sensation. Perhaps it comes from being on firm land after two weeks and more on shipboard; or it may be that crowd yonder has something to do with it."

His words draw her attention down the Bhendy Bazar Road. Sure enough, a crowd does seem to be advancing. Something in the way of excitement reigns in that quarter, and, Joe, always on the alert, strains his eyes to make out what it is all about.

"Listen!" cries Molly.

She stands there like a statue, with her head poised, just as the beautiful deer might hearken in suspense when the distant blast of the huntsman's horn echoes through the forest.

The breeze is light, but it chances to come from a favorable quarter, where the people are seen; and now they can catch voices in deep anger, bellowing forth angry words.

"Listen! Oh, Mr. Joe, it's the governor!" cries the alarmed girl at his side.

Sure enough, Mynheer Joe has occasion to jump to that conclusion himself, for that roar as of a bull cannot possibly come from any one else. He looks closer, and discovers that two figures fly in front of the crowd, one tall and immense in stature, the other rather diminutive—in short, the fugitives can be no other than Mr. Tanner and Sandy.

What sort of a mess have they gotten into now? The pursuers seem determined to wreak vengeance upon them, and it looks serious, for when once excited these Mohammedans and disciples of Vishnu are hard to control; an insult to saint or god is very apt to be followed by speedy vengeance upon the head of the thoughtless offender, for these Mussulmans and idolators are more touchy about their religion than true believers.

"Come," mutters Joe, uneasily, "this looks like a serious business. If they overtake them I'm afraid murder will follow. Too bad! What have they been doing? Is this any work of that rascally Russian? Never mind crying over spilt milk. The only thing to be done is to save them—but how!"

That is the rub—how?

Mynheer Joe has to think quickly, for the crowd surges nearer with every minute. He has an idea which promises at least some hopes for success.

If he can delay matters—keep the enemies from coming into personal contact for a little while—all may be well.

"Molly!" he says quickly.

"Yes Joe!" she replies.

In times like these etiquette is forgotten.

"It is your father's life that is in peril. I will be able to hold them in check for a time. Will you dare something for his sake?"

"Yes, yes! Only tell me!" she gasps.

"Run as fast as you can to yonder corner; then down the street to the left until you come to the cantonment. Tell Colonel O'Brien it is Mynheer Joe who is in danger. He will send troops on the double quick."

She turns and flits from the spot like a gleam of light. Mynheer Joe has his attention at once occupied by the rush. Panting and holding each a revolver in his hand, Sandy and the Western orator rush up. Then Mynheer Joe stands out between them and the mob of angry Hindoos. He raises his hand, and, with the gesture of one born to command thunders out in their tongue the word:

"Stop!"

CHAPTER XVIII.

The natives are very much wrought up by something that has occurred. It does not take a great deal to excite a crowd of Hindoos, especially if they are engaged in worship. Any indignity to their god or the mosque wherein every object is sacred to them, whether the insult is real or fancied, will bring them around like a swarm of bees, eager for the blood of the trangressor.

Mynheer Joe knows this full well, and, judging from the excitable condition of the crowd, fears that his friends have been unwise in doing something.

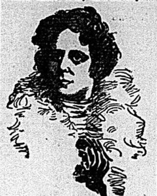
WOMAN'S WORLD

BUSY CLUB WOMAN.

A New Yorker Who Is Doctor, Lawyer and Musical Club President.

One of the most unique as well as one of the busiest clubwomen in New York city is Mrs. Albert Wallerstein, president of the Rubinstein club. Mrs. Wallerstein is unique because, besides being an active clubwoman and a member of scores of clubs, she has found time to be a society woman and in addition to all this has studied law, having graduated from the Women's Law school of the class of 1899 and found time to pursue a course in the Women's Medical college, which she entered in 1900. Her first experience as a club president was as president of her class in the medical college. Being a woman of ample means, she took up the study of medicine purely for philanthropic purposes, being actuated by a desire to open a free clinic for women and children.

Mrs. Wallerstein believes that all women should study and accomplish something and re-enforces her belief by setting an example which the majority of women would hardly be able to follow.



MRS. ALBERT WALLERSTEIN.

In spite of her social and club duties and her studies she has found time to master four languages and to contribute frequently to the leading magazines. Besides being president of the Rubinstein club she is a member of the following organizations: Phalo Woman's Press club, Daughters of the American Revolution, New York city chapter; National Society of New England Women, College Woman's club, Minerva, New Century Study circle, Woman's Republican club, Professional Woman's league, Rainy Day club, Society For Political Study, Vassar Students' Aid society, Euterpe Choral society, New England Glee club and the Woman's Health Protective association. Mrs. Wallerstein is a Catholic and a member of the Dorn family of Worcester, Mass., one of the oldest families in the Bay State.

When she was elected president of the Rubinstein club, which has been in existence seventeen years, she conceived the idea of forming a social club in connection with the choral club, and she has already secured over 150 members. The Rubinstein club holds two councils every year and in addition meets the second Saturday of each month in the myrtle room of the Waldorf-Astoria. The object of the club is entirely musical.—New York Globe.

Children's Eyes.

Parents, teachers and playmates often think children dull when nothing ails them but nearsightedness or difficulty in hearing. Such troubles being corrected, as in most instances they can easily be, the children are found to be among the brightest in their classes. I knew a boy, now a brilliant college professor, who until he was twelve years of age his parents despaired of educating. They deemed him stupid. One day in a jeweler's store, quite by accident, he placed a pair of glasses in front of his eyes and looked around. The world seemed new. He jumped with delight. He had not known how bright the sun is, how green the grass and trees, how lovely the whole earth. This joy on the boy's part was the first hint that his parents, who were more than ordinarily intelligent, had that his trouble was mechanical, not mental. They provided him proper spectacles, whereupon he began to forge ahead in his studies and to display unusual talent.—Twentieth Century Home.

Stair Climbing.

Under no circumstances but that of actual illness or extreme debility should stair climbing become a matter of dread. In every other case it should be attended by a pleasant feeling of exhilaration. The "panting collapse" which many women experience at the top of a flight of stairs is due to the assumption of an incorrect position of the body during the ascent and the employment of wrong muscles for the work. The spine should be kept straight, as in correct standing and breathing poise, and movement should come from the knees and not from the waist and hips. Lift the knees well, hold the chest erect and breathe deeply as you pass from stair to stair. The observance of these rules ought to make the exercise one of real benefit instead of a drudge, for it will be one or the other, since stair climbing is a daily necessity to every woman who has household duties. Then she need never complain that she has not time for physical culture.

Window Transparencies.

Window transparencies are much in favor, and they are easily made. The glass is first cleansed with alcohol, after which the steel engraving or half tone picture which is to be transferred is cleansed with a sponge. With a soft brush apply a paste made of alum and one ounce of nitrate of strontium to the face of the print and to the glass.

Lay the picture face downward and with a dry cloth press until every part of the picture has adhered to the glass and no blisters are left. Then lay the glass away until perfectly dry, which will take several hours.

When dry wet the paper and commence rubbing it off. Several wettings may be necessary before nothing but the outline of the picture remains. Oil with three parts of castor oil and oil of lavender mixed. If too thick add turpentine. Place in a transparency metal frame and hang in the light or set in the window pane.

Substitute For Milk.

Where milk is not to be had or there is but little to use cornstarch may take its place in pudding sauces, white sauce, etc., especially if butter and eggs are used. Mix the cornstarch—two tablespoonfuls—with a little cold water, cook it by adding a pint of hot water, letting it cook thoroughly, then when a little cool beat in an egg thoroughly beaten. Return to the fire for a minute or two, then season with salt, a lump of butter or whatever seasoning you prefer—chopped parsley is good. This makes a white sauce good to serve with boiled onions, warmed over veal, dried beef or salt fish, like codfish or finnan haddie, or, with the addition of sugar and the juice of a lemon and lemon extract, makes a fairly good pudding sauce.

Making Washing Easy.

"Instead of shaving soap over my clothes when they are all ready in the boiler on wash days," says an experienced housewife, "I make a solution of soap and kerosene, which I put into the boiler of water when the latter is hot. I shave half a bar of soap into a quart of water, add two tablespoonfuls of kerosene and set on the stove till the whole is blended. I then pour the solution into the boiler and put the clothes in, slashing them about and up and down for twenty minutes, instead of boiling them. This method obviates the necessity of soaking the clothes and of boiling them."

Wide Hips.

Many women appear to be under the delusion that these are unsightly. As a fact, sculptors, artists and anatomists are unanimous in crediting the ideal female form with pronounced width of hip. When really excessive width is present one may reasonably ask the question whether anything can be done to lessen it. The answer is: If the width be occasioned by superfluous fat the cure is to be found in the gymnasium, but that if the width results from shape of the bones nothing whatever can be done.

Trying Work For Tots.

Many physicians are "down" on beadwork, and they recommend mothers to discourage their little daughters in trying their eyesight over beadwork. Do not hasten the day when your daughter must go to the oculist to have her eyes examined for prescription glasses. The long curriculum of lessons in modern schools, the claims of text books, music lessons and drawing lessons, make quite enough demand on the eyesight of a growing girl without the unnecessary claims of "fancy work."

Bath Sachet.

A French recipe for a bath sachet calls for three pounds of bran to one of powdered orris root, with a pound of starch, a pound and a half of almond meal and twelve ounces of good white soap. Five ounces may be put in each bag, which should be made large enough so that the mixture will have plenty of room to swell and will serve only for one bath.

Staining Floors.

When staining a floor remember to work along the grain of the wood, never across it. A good oak stain is made by putting a couple of ounces each of potash and pearl ash in a quart bottle and filling it with water. Keep well corked. Apply with an old brush, as it will spoil a good one, and take care not to touch the skin with it, for it will cause blisters.

The Clothes Closet.

In the cloak closet—either opening from the hall or sitting room—have hooks low enough that each youngster can hang wraps, hats and bonnets, and if drawers cannot be provided for overshoes, leggings and mittens, have a shelf a foot from the floor for the first named and one two and a half feet high for hand and neckwear.

Painted Walls.

To clean painted walls dissolve two ounces of borax in two quarts of water and add one tablespoonful of ammonia. Use half this quantity to each bucket of water. Do not use soap. Wash a small portion of the paint at a time and rub dry with clean cloths.

The lid of a teapot should always be left so that the air may get in. Slip in a piece of paper to keep it open. This prevents mustiness. The same rule applies to a coffeepot.

The worst feature about games is that they are taken too seriously. Girls do not play for amusement so much as to excel, and their pleasure becomes a task.

Bronzed lamps, chandeliers, etc., should be merely dusted with a feather brush or with a soft cloth, as washing them will take off the bronzing.

Old stockings cut down the seam make excellent cloths for polishing furniture and floors.

A Golden Wedding.

FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY OF THE WEDDING OF REV. MR. AND MRS. JOHN FERGUSON, OF THIS CITY.

There are some things that money cannot buy; "their price is above rubles." Chief of these is Christian character. A pure life and noble ideals have their reward even here and now. This was surely illustrated when the over 200 guests called at their home to congratulate the Rev. John Ferguson and Mrs. Ferguson on having reached their semi-centennial of a happy wedded life, and to wish for them many years of happiness and usefulness. They were married on May 17th, 1904, 50 years—one half century—has passed by, since they started out to meet life's vicissitudes, and to share each other's joys and sorrows. The Rev. John Ferguson spent many years in the ministry of the Methodist Church, and his wife was a true helpmate. They shared in the glorious successes and experiences and many of the privations of the pioneer ministry in the province, but would gladly go over the same way again, assured of Divine guidance and trusting in their Heavenly Father. Their family consists of three sons and three daughters. This noble couple had right conceptions of life. They willingly and gladly denied themselves many things so that their sons especially might have the advantage of a Christian education. To an unusual degree can it be said of them, "they are worthy sons of a noble sire." The sons have won such distinguished honor that they deserve more than passing notice. They received their early education at Albert College, they walked morning and evening from Canifton where their father was pastor, and are remembered by the "Old Boys" of that institution as Frank, Wilbur and John. Now, Dr. Frank Ferguson resides in Boston. He is an honored minister of the Congregational Church and a graduate of Yale. Besides being Principal of an important college, he has distinguished himself in raising many thousands of dollars for struggling institutions. Dr. Wilbur Ferguson, who some years ago preached the Baccalaureate sermons at Albert College, graduated as gold medalist at the institution. He has been Principal of the Centenary College at Becketstown, N.J., and is now pastor of an important Methodist Church in Los Angeles, Cal. Dr. John Ferguson went some years ago as a missionary to China, to organize and take charge of a Missionary College. His great success soon attracted attention and he was called to erect and establish the State University at Shanghai. He was given unlimited means, and that noble pile of buildings, said to be the most complete educational structure in Asia, will ever remain as a monument to him. He enjoys to an unusual degree the confidence of the Chinese Viceroys, and although an application for permission to come to Canada to attend the golden wedding of his parents was at first denied because of the present war between Japan and Russia, he was at the last moment able to do so, because of being hurriedly sent on important diplomatic business to Washington. He now holds the important position of Chief Secretary of the Imperial Chinese railway administration. Is it any wonder the parents are proud of "Our Boys!" They well might be. Such pride is not only pardonable but praiseworthy.

The daughters are Mrs. S. S. Anderson, Winchester, Mass.; Mrs. A. Sherman, Iroquois; Mrs. Taplin, of Boston. All the sons and daughters were present on the occasion except Dr. Wilbur Ferguson, Los Angeles, who was unable to be present because of the serious illness of his wife and because of the General Conference of the M. E. Church, now in session in that city. As stated in these columns yesterday, there was a large attendance of the many warm friends of the Ferguson family present at the festivities, which took place from 3 to 9 p.m. on Tuesday at the family residence on Grier St. Short, eloquent and appropriate addresses were given by Rev. Dr. Gardiner, Rev. Dr. Dyer, ~~Rev. G. Brown~~, F. B. Stratton, Amos Campbell, A. Maybee and His Worship Mayor Chown, all congratulating the aged and honored couple on the completion of their jubilee of married life, and on the successes and honors which had came to their children. Short and pithy addresses in reply were given by two of the sons, Rev. Dr. Frank and Rev. Dr. John Ferguson. There was music on the lawn, and the festivities were attended with great enjoyment. Mr. James Wallace, of this city, did the catering, and did it in admirable style. The unique and pleasant event will ever be cherished as a delightful memory by Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson, who, in the evening of their life saw their children and friends gathered round them, all hoping that they may be spared for many more years of happy wedded life and live to celebrate their diamond wedding. Many rich and appropriate gifts were received, consisting of $231.25 in money; solid gold cups and saucers, large silk embroidered portiere, solid gentleman's gold watch charm and ladies' gold brooch, from Sheng Kung Poo, Director-General of Imperial Chinese Railway Administration, Shanghai; solid gold cuff links, solid gold brooch, from China, Chi-Hung; one stamped scroll; four pairs silk embroidered panels; two silk embroidered pillow tops; one ceiling scroll; also from Mr. and Mrs. Dyer clock; Mr. and Mrs. Cherry, tomato server; Mr. and Mrs. Francis Scantlebury, crumb tray and brush; Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson, sugar and cream; R. and E. Phillips, cold meat fork; Lucila Boselly, gravy ladle; Mr. and Mrs. Pringle, salad spoon; Mrs. Fairman, golden slipper; Mrs. Nutbrown, spoon, "souvenir"; Mrs. Herman Cole, spoon, "souvenir"; Mr. and Mrs. Hearn, one-half dozen coffee spoons; Mr. and Mrs. McCurdy, clock; Mrs. Farnham and Mrs. Farley, one-half dozen coffee spoons; Mr. and Mrs. Pitman, cake basket; Mrs. Godwin, basket, "burnt wood"; Mr. and Mrs. Wallace, two spoons; Mrs. Bell and Arden, sugar spoon; Mr. and Mrs. Blackburn, gravy ladle; Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Scantlebury, gold fountain pen.

Yesterday afternoon Rev. Dr. Frank Ferguson informed Principal Dyer that he and his brother, Rev. Dr. Wilbur Ferguson, in kindly remembrance of former days in "Old Albert," would establish a scholarship in that institution, and will defray, in future, the tuition expenses of one student each year who may not be able to undertake the same himself.

Rev. John and Mrs. Ferguson value very highly the "souvenir book" of their golden wedding, in which is recorded the names of all those present; also the letters of regret from their absent son and other friends and relatives.

The Bible Not in the Sunday School.

The following article was contributed to The Presbyterian by Rev. W. A. Bremner, formerly a resident of this city, and who is still warmly remembered by the people of St. Andrew's Church:

Mr. Yellowlees in his timely article "Crowding out the Bible," touches a very vital question in relation to the position accorded the Bible in the average Sunday school of to-day. Not only is the Bible going out of the Sunday school, but, as a natural consequence, its use is being abandoned in the regular public worship in the church. Every minister sees how very few in the average congregations use the Bible during service, either to follow the reading of the Scripture lesson, or even to turn up the text. Now, there can be no reasonable doubt that this state of things is traceable to what Mr. Yellowlees terms the crowding of the Bible out of the Sunday School.

We do not believe it is through any intended disrespect to the Bible that its use in the church services is being departed from, but we are firmly convinced that it is due to the fact that the people are becoming less familiar with the Bible as a book and consequently becoming less expert in its use. This, naturally, produces a feeling of embarrassment, to avoid which the only other alternative is chosen, namely, to cease to use the Bible in the presence of others. What has brought this about? The fact that some years ago, when these persons were scholars in the Sunday school the use of the Bible was not insisted on. It is safe to say that the constant use of the Bible during the Sunday school days of the average member of the Presbyterian Church would result in such familiarity with the Book, and create such a love for its teachings that the present regrettable absence of the Bible from the church services would not exist.

But what are the facts? The following questions, to which the following answers were received, were lately submitted to the ministers in the Presbytery of Barrie. Twenty sent in reports from their Sunday schools:

(1) Do you find any difficulty in getting the scholars in your Sunday school to bring their Bibles to class? Sixteen out of the twenty answered, Yes.

(2) What per cent of the scholars outside the Infant Class bring their Bibles to the school? Answer, for the twenty schools, a little less than sixty per cent.

(3) Do all your teachers use the Bible in teaching the lesson? In only eight of the twenty do all the teachers use the Bible.

(4) Do you consider it a benefit or even necessary to have the lesson passages printed in the lesson helps? Eleven of the ministers answered, "Neither a benefit nor necessary.

(5) If the lesson passages were not printed in the Helps, do you think it would tend to bring the Bible into more general use among the scholars of your school, both at home and in the class? Fourteen answered, Yes, and some of them very decidedly.

These facts speak for themselves and abundantly prove the necessity for ministers and superintendents to give this matter the attention it demands. Superintendents can do a great deal by quietly insisting that each scholar be provided with a Bible.

That superintendents are not entirely free from blame in this regard is shown by the method of at least one of these officers in the Presbyterian Church in Canada. When the opening exercises of the school are over, this man announces to the scholars that they will now read the lesson, and forthwith produces from his vest pocket the current number of the Home Study Leaflet, and from this reads the lesson in the presence of the school. It would be useless for that superintendent to insist on the Bible being in the hands of the scholars until he himself sets an example.

We firmly believe, however, that it is well-nigh beyond the power of either our ministers or superintendents to successfully cope with this difficulty until that which is proving the greatest hindrance is taken out of the way, and it is our humble opinion that the Bible will not come back to the Sunday school so long as the lesson passage is printed in full in our Lesson Helps. Let the lesson passages cease to be printed and this would make it necessary for each scholar and each teacher to come back to the use of the Bible.

It is true this might occasion some slight inconvenience in studying the lesson, but that very inconvenience would result in bringing about the very thing desired—a closer acquaintance with the Bible as a book, and consequently a deeper appreciation of its teachings.

Alleged Inhuman Treatment.

A case of inhuman treatment to a child is being investigated by the authorities. It is alleged that a woman residing upon the outskirts of the city is taking care of a child, which, by the way, is not her own, in a peculiar manner. It is said the little one is often left in the house alone for hours, and its plaintive cry causes the neighbors to use very harsh language towards the woman, who is supposed to be its protector. It is also alleged that the little one has in numerous ways been badly used. The matter has been reported to the Magistrate, who has taken steps to find out, if possible, the truth of the affair, and he asserts that if a case is made out he will show no mercy.

MAGNIFICENT SPECTACLE.

JERUSALEM AND THE CRUSADES REGALLY DEPICTED BY RINGLING BROTHERS.

Ringling Brothers' World's Greatest Shows lead their huge circus programme this year with a magnificent dramatic spectacle, Jerusalem and the Crusades, involving a cast of 1,200 characters, a ballet of 300, and a singing chorus of 200. More than 2,000 costumes, designed and made by Parisian artists of world-wide fame, are worn, and the music, composed especially for this grand production, is rendered by the largest and only portable grand organ ever made, and a selected band of fifty soloists. The musical embellishment is peculiarly effective and permeates the entire production. Never in the history of the circus has there been offered to the public a spectacle of the magnitude, the originality and fascinating feature of this stupendous performance. No circus in existence could afford the fabulous expenditure of money invested by the Ringling Brothers in this radiant and dramatic interpretation of the beautiful and dramatic stories of the Crusades. The subject portrays life in the ennobling days of chivalry, when loyalty, bravery, justice and gentleness went hand in hand, and courtesy to an enemy, and woman was a cheerful duty. The men and women of this age are inspiring pictures of devotion to high ideals, and depict in glorious flower the sentiment of chivalry from which the stirring crusades sprung. This spectacle opens upon a brilliant scene of preparation for the Crusades, multitudes move about the vast space before the great cathedral of Claremont, France, from whence the invading army started, scanning the tournament notices and instruments to be used by the contesting knights in the tourney, which is to celebrate the departure of the warrior hosts. Bejeweled and enpurpled royalty; obsequious servitors, gaily garbed; ecclesiastics, sparkling with precious ensignia of rank; mounted knights, with shields and helmets inlaid with gold and precious stones: monks, seminarians and other lowly children of church devotion and work; court ladies in daintily fashioned fabrics of glistening sheen; nobles of blue-blooded bearing and dress; soldiers, grim and glittering in armor of steel; singing maidens, dancing girls with garlands, pilgrims, vassals, pages, sword, shield and helmet bearers, and countless other pictorial types of the period intermingle kaleidoscopically in this massive and enthralling scene of changing splendors. The most exciting of ancient sports, including jousting tilts, sword combats, spearing exercises, equestrian exploits, athletic competitions and other thrilling pastimes are reproduced in the splendid tournament. A horse ballet is introduced to illustrate the wonderful equine education of three squadrons of the highest bred animals in the world. The marching pageant as the Crusaders leave upon their holy mission is the most magnificent and bewilderingly beautiful procession display ever seen under canvas.

All the barbaric radiance and voluptuous luxury of the Egyptian court in the mediaeval days of the first crusades are depicted in the environment and action of the next gorgeous scene. A ballet divertisement is presented for the enjoyment of the Egyptian ruler and his numerous court. The enormous scope of stage room is taxed to the utmost by the brilliant gathering. Dancing girls flood the stage, and gracefully glide through bewitching conceits of terpsichorean invention. The costumes are creations of art, fashioned by Parisian masters and models of exquisite elegance and taste. No spectacle of modern times has been staged with the lavish disregard of expense and with such overwhelming success, as this production by Ringling Brothers of Jerusalem and the Crusades.

The marvellous shows will exhibit here on Saturday, June 4, and give two performances, afternoon at 2 o'clock and night at 8 o'clock.

The grand street pageant, the largest, most varied in sensational feature and gorgeously decorative ever organized, and more than twice as long as any other show ever gave, will leave the show grounds show day at 10 o'clock.

Peterboro Association of Baptist Churches.

The 101st annual meeting of the Peterboro Association of Baptist Churches will be held in Belleville June 21 to 23. There are twenty-two churches in the association, including those at Lakefield, Cobourg, Port Hope, Peterboro, Norwood, Campbellford, Brighton, Picton and Colborne, and it is expected that between sixty and seventy delegates will be in attendance. The purpose of the gathering is to consider the progress and life of the churches, and also to hear representatives of the various branches of the denomination's work. Active preparations are being made by the local church to receive and entertain the delegates.

ALLAN STEAMER ASHORE

Driven in With the Ice the Hibernian is Filling Fast.

No Lives Lost, But Vessel, It Is Expected, Will Be a Total Loss—Str. Viking Has Left Halifax to Aid—No Details at Montreal—Her Cargo and Crew—Three Other Ship Casualties.

St. John's, Nfld., May 19.—The Allan Line steamer Hibernian, which sailed from Montreal on May 14, and Quebec on May 15, for London, with cattle and a general cargo, and seven passengers, went ashore at midnight Tuesday, during a dense fog, at Stormy Point, a shoal near Cod Roy, thirty miles north of Cape Ray, at the entrance of the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

The vessel is listing and filling fast, and it is feared that she will become a total wreck.

The crew and passengers are safe.

Halifax, May 19.—The steamer Viking left for the scene of the wreck of the Hibernian at Cod Roy shortly before midnight yesterday. She was practically ready for sea, being fitted to go to Labrador on a trading expedition. No definite news is obtainable as to how the Hibernian went ashore, but it is supposed that she was driven there with the ice.

No Details.

Montreal, May 19.—Messrs. H. & A. Allan have received no details whatever except that the Hibernian is ashore. The cargo consisted of hay, 55,807 bushels of grain, 56 tons of cheese, 128 tons of hay (including cattle feed), 602 cattle, 175 standards of deals, 1,500 sacks of flour, 86 tons of sundries; in addition there was a considerable amount of lumber and tinned meats. There were 22 cattle men on board, 40 of a crew, but no passengers. The value of the vessel is estimated at $350,000 and the value of the cargo of the vessel, $250,000; total value of steamship and cargo, $600,000.

TWO MORE WRECKS.

British Bark Helen Isabel and Sch. Pansy Total Losses.

St. John's, Nfld., May 19.—The British bark Helen Isabel, Capt. Laurier, laden with molasses, eighteen days out from Barbados for St. John's, was wrecked off Mistaken Point, near Cape Race, Tuesday, in a dense fog. The vessel will be a total loss. The crew escaped.

Sch. Pansy, Too.

The schooner Pansy, Capt. Christian, salt laden, is also ashore off Point Verde, in the same vicinity. She will be a total loss. All on board were saved.

Liner Friesland Disabled.

Queenstown, May 19.—The steamer Aurania reports having passed the Belgian Line steamer Friesland, disabled, yesterday morning, off the coast of Waterford, Ireland. The Friesland signaled that her shaft had been broken. The weather is fine and a tug has been sent from Queenstown to assist the disabled ship into port. The Friesland sailed from Philadelphia for Liverpool on May 10.

CLASH IN THE COMMONS.

Joseph Chamberlain and Lord Hugh Cecil Have Words—Premier Balfour's Majority Is 55.

London, May 19.—By a majority of 55 Premier Balfour last night successfully defeated an attempt to upset the Government upon the fiscal question. An interesting debate, characterized by some heated exchanges, took place, resulting in the Premier's reiterated determination to shelve the question of fiscal reform until the next Parliament. In this decision Joseph Chamberlain publicly concurred.

In the course of the debate Lord Hugh Cecil, in scathing satire, denounced the policy of his cousin, the Premier. Mr. Chamberlain interrupted him, and then a storm of interruptions and cries of "order" arose from the Radical and Liberal benches. Twice Mr. Chamberlain sat down, and twice the Speaker appealed to the members to give the former Colonial Secretary a hearing.

At last there was comparative quiet, and then Lord Hugh Cecil, with much heat, and amid a great uproar, accused Mr. Chamberlain of cowardice in dodging the issue by refusing to meet his opponents in the House on the campaign which he had preached throughout the country.

Then Mr. Chamberlain reiterated that he did not wish to raise the fiscal question in the House. He said he supported the Government, and would continue to do so. He hoped that the Premier would take his own time to carry out his policy.

CANADA'S MISSION.

Carnegie Says to Bring Back American Union to Motherland.

London, May 19.—(C. A. P.)—Andrew Carnegie, in opening the Hawick Free Library, quoted his letter to the Winnipeg Historical Society that Canada's mission lay in bringing back the American union to the Motherland. He prophesied there would be 200,000,000 English-speaking people in North America within the present generation.

Ex-Colonials For Parliament.

London, May 19.—(C.A.P.)—The promoters of the latest League, the Imperial Federation League, were formerly identified with the Colonial Committee of the Tariff Reform League, but the new league believes that tariff reform is yet a long way off. The league will endeavor to promote colonial Federation on general lines, and one of the league's objects will be to find a supply of eminent ex-colonials with ripe colonial experience as candidates for British constituencies.

German Emigration Monopoly.

London, May 19.—(C. A. P.)—A German correspondent, writing to The Liverpool Mercury, asserts that the German official stations for the control of emigrants secure for German shipping companies a preference which almost amounts to a monopoly. The Mercury says there are plenty of opportunities throughout the British Empire for experimental retaliation, which would be eminently legitimate, and could hardly fail to exercise a wholesome effect.

Contributions to Canada.

London, May 19.—(C.A.P.)—The Blue Book of the United Free Church of Scotland, issued prior to the meeting of the General Assembly at Edinburgh, on May 24, shows the contributions to the Canadian church to have been £610 for last year. The report praises the unabated flow of emigration to the Northwest.

To Encourage Imperialism.

London, May 19.—(C. A. P.)—The historical committee formed by the League of the Empire to encourage Imperial scholarships, includes John B. Bury, professor of modern history at Cambridge University, as chairman, the president of Trinity College and Professor Lodge Peters.

Devonshire.

London, May 19.—(C.A.P.)—The Duke of Devonshire has written the British Empire League that he has pleasure in retaining the vice-presidency of the league.

To Lord Strathcona.

London, May 19.—(C.A.P.)—Dominion Day will be celebrated at the Hotel Cecil by a banquet and reception to Lord Strathcona.

MINISTER WHO IS MUTE

Silence of Mr. Emmerson on the Grand Trunk Pacific.

Conservatives Call Attention to It, and Sir Wilfrid Laurier Offers Explanation, But the Minister Concerned Opened Not His Mouth—A Peculiar Situation—More Conservative Amendments Voted Down By Government's Brute Majority.

Ottawa, May 19.—In the House yesterday George Taylor again complained of the mail service between Ottawa and Brockville. Sir William Mulock read a letter from the comptroller of railway mails in which it was stated that there seemed to be no disposition on the part of the Grand Trunk Railway and the C. P.R. to make connection at Brockville. If the companies so desired the connection could be very easily made.

In reply to Mr. E. F. Clarke, the Minister of Militia said that Lieut.-Col. Roy had been instructed to effect as speedily as possible a settlement with the Town of Valleyfield in regard to claims for the service of troops called out during the labor troubles in October, 1900.

Mr. Tolton made a number of enquiries as to the use of private and official cars by ministers of the Crown and others. The questioner was asked to move for a return.

Mr. Bennett was informed that no bonus had been paid yet to the owners of the Collingwood dry dock. The value of the dock as estimated by Louis Coste, C.E., is $54,000.

The Minister of Marine and Fisheries, in reply to Mr. Sinclair, said the department will at once give the necessary instructions to have tests made by the Government cruisers so as to ascertain if dog fish can satisfactorily replace salted herrings as bait.

The French-Canada Service.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier stated in reply to Mr. Casgrain that no line of steamers has been established between France and Canada within the provisions of the contract and no portion of the subsidy has been paid. It is claimed that one steamer made a trip in April between St. Malo and Halifax via St. Pierre, Miquelon, but the Government has no information as to whom the steamer belonged to or who chartered it.

The G.T.P. Bill.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier addressing himself to the subject argued that all railways in Canada should be operated by boards of directors on which British subjects constitute a majority, and not only the G.T.P. as proposed in Mr. Casgrain's amendment.

Hon. Chas. Fitzpatrick followed up the Premier's statement with a distinct promise that a measure would be introduced at the present session of Parliament providing that there shall be on every board of railway directors in Canada a majority of British subjects.

Mr. Casgrain's amendment was rejected.

The Government has practically accepted the amendment moved by Mr. Bennett of East Simcoe, providing that the commissioners may make no lease of completed portions of the eastern division without the consent of the Governor-in-Council and that a copy of every such lease shall be deposited with the Secretary of State.

Mr. Borden's Amendment.

Mr. Borden's amendment directing the Board of Railway Commissioners to investigate and report upon complaints that the company is not observing the contract by diverting traffic from Canadian ports to ports in the U. S. was taken up.

Mr. Fitzpatrick said the General Railway Act empowered the board to investigate but not to report. He was, therefore, favorable to amending the General Railway Act to provide that the board shall report to Parliament. But he would prefer to have the provision inserted in the Railway Act and so made applicable to all railways rather than to specialize as regards the Grand Trunk Pacific. He promised to submit to the House before the third reading of the Grand Trunk Pacific Bill, his proposed amendments to the General Railway Act.

Mr. Borden's amendment was then voted down, as was also the Opposition amendment giving the Government haulage powers and running rights over the western division should the Government at the end of 50 years undertake to operate the eastern division.

Simultaneous Construction.

Mr. Fitzpatrick moved an amendment to the effect that construction work shall be begun as nearly as possible simultaneously west from Moncton, east and west from Quebec, east and west from North Bay Junction and east from Winnipeg with the object of having the whole line completed at the same time as nearly as possible.

Mr. J. B. Morin moved an amendment to the amendment to the effect that the National Transcontinental be built southerly from Levis, through the Counties of Dorchester on to Moncton.

The amendment to the amendment was voted down after which Mr. Fitzpatrick's amendment carried.

Probability of Deadlocks.

Mr. Borden criticized the increase in the number of commissioners who are to construct the eastern section from three to four. He regarded it as both unwise and unnecessary. Three members would answer all the purposes, while four members there would be a probability of deadlocks.

To Take Over Branches.

Mr. Lavelle proposed an amendment to the effect that when the Government takes over the operation of the eastern division after the expiration of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company's lease, it shall have power to take over any branch lines. As the bill stands the company may hold the profitable branch lines and foist on the country all the branch lines that are losing propositions.

Mr. Fielding's defence was that 50 years from now, when the company's lease expires, no branch line built in connection with the Grand Trunk Pacific will be unprofitable. The amendment was voted down.

The Minister of Railways.

Mr. Casgrain said that the Minister of Railways, to whose Department the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway question belonged, had not seen fit to justify the project. His deliberate withdrawal from the House day after day to avoid participation in the discussion could only mean that, like his predecessor in office, Mr. Emmerson was not in sympathy with the Government's railway policy. He declared, furthermore, that the country had lost confidence in Mr. Emmerson.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier took the ground that Mr. Emmerson having been only recently appointed to the Cabinet, could not be expected to familiarize himself with every detail of a contract which he had not assisted to prepare. He had one of the heaviest departments to administer, and it was unjust and unfair to expect Mr. Emmerson to assume these important duties, and at the same time defend every detail of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway contract. He assured the House that the Minister of Railways was in entire accord with his colleagues on the Transcontinental Railway.

This explanation did not satisfy Mr. Borden, who pointed out that the Minister of Finance, while engaged in the administration of a very heavy department, was still able to take an active part in defending the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway contract. There was no valid excuse, Mr. Borden argued, for Mr. Emmerson's conduct. The House was now without an iota of assistance from the Minister of Railways. Mr. Emmerson had signed the contract and he should therefore be familiar with every feature of it.

Emmerson Deserted Robinson.

Jabel Robinson reminded the House that Mr. Emmerson had until a few months ago been an advocate of public ownership. "He was a strong disciple of mine," said Mr. Robinson, "and I would like to know why he has deserted me." Mr. Robinson advised the House to quit quarreling over the Grand Trunk, the Government having a majority which it could call in any moment and vote every clause through.

"They're here to vote and for nothing else," added the member for West Elgin. He concluded by giving notice of an amendment providing that any time after 10 years, whether the road is completed or not, the Government may expropriate the road and all its branches on payment of moneys actually expended by the company and should also have the power to terminate the company's lease of the eastern section.

The bill was reported with "certain amendments," which were then read a second time. It was agreed to take up the third reading to-day, and the House adjourned at 11.15.

Want Import Duty.

Vancouver, May 19.—The Board of Trade Tuesday night decided to support Victoria and Westminster Boards of Trade in the suggestion that a delegation should be sent to Ottawa to press upon the Government the need for the imposition of an import duty on lumber. The Board of Trade also passed a resolution urging on British Columbia members to have a clause inserted in the Grand Trunk Pacific bill that construction must be commenced simultaneously from the Pacific Coast.

JAPANESE LOSE A CRUISER AND 15,000 TON BATTLESHIP.

Admiral Togo Reports Sinking of Two Japanese Ships.

2,000 Russians Reported Killed—Russian Cruiser Bogatyr Grounds in a Fog Near Entrance to Vladivostock—70,000 Russians Marching to Relieve Port Arthur—But Japs Are Hastening Offensive Operations

Tokio, May 20.—Vice-Admiral Togo has reported as follows:

"A report from Rear-Admiral Dewa says that the cruisers Kasugi and Yoshino collided during a fog off Port Arthur on May 15. The Yoshino sank, only ninety of her crew being saved.

"On the same day the battleship Hatsuse struck a Russian mine and sank."

Giving details of the disaster Vice-Admiral Togo says:

"At fourteen minutes past one in the afternoon of May 15, in a deep fog off Port Arthur, the Kasugi rammed the Yoshino, sinking the latter in a few minutes. Ninety of her crew were saved.

"The same morning, the Hatsuse, while cruising off Port Arthur, covering the landing of the soldiers, struck a mine ten knots southeast of the harbor entrance. She signalled for help and instantly struck another mine. She sank in half an hour. Three hundred of her crew were saved by torpedo boats."

The Yoshino.

The Yoshino was a cruiser of 4,180 tons and was 350 feet long. Her armament consisted of four 6-inch guns, eight 4.7-inch guns and twenty-three 3 pounders. Her speed was 23 knots and her crew numbered 300 men.

The Hatsuse.

The Hatsuse was a battleship of 15,000 tons, and of the latest model. She was only completed in 1900, was 400 feet long and was heavily armored. Her armament consisted of four 12-inch guns, fourteen 6-inch guns, twenty 12-inch pounders and eight 3-pounders and four 2½ pounders. She had four torpedo tubes, estimated speed 19.11 knots, and her crew numbered 741 men.

News Is Confirmed.

Washington, May 20.—Advices received at the Japanese legation from Tokio, confirming the Associated Press accounts of the sinking of the cruiser Yoshino and the battleship Hatsuse, state that after the Hatsuse had been struck by Russian mechanical mines, a Russian flotilla of sixteen torpedo boats and destroyers approached, but were repulsed by the Japanese cruisers, which saved 300 of the Hatsuse's crew, including Admiral Mashiba and Captain Nakao.

Two Thousand Killed.

London, May 20.—The Standard's correspondent at Tientsin cables that while the Japanese fleet was covering the landing of troops near Kaichau on Monday a sharp engagement occurred at Hsinyencheng. Two thousand Russians were killed or wounded. The Russians retreated and the Japanese occupied both Kaiping and Kaichau.

The Chinese Governor at Chencow has received news, the correspondent adds, that the Russians have destroyed the railway between Taschiao and Newchwang.

Russian Cruiser Injured.

Paris May 20.—The correspondent at St. Petersburg of The Echo de Paris says:

"The Russian cruiser Bogatyr grounded during a fog on the rocks near the entrance to Vladivostock. Her position is critical. Her crew was saved."

Reported Jap Reverse.

Newchwang, May 20.—It is reported here from reliable sources that the Japanese army from the Yalu River has received a heavy blow and has been driven back to Fengwangcheng.

Other Disasters Reported.

Che Foo, May 20.—A party of thirteen Russians arriving from Dalny yesterday morning by junk are authority for the statement that, during a bombardment of Port Arthur by the Japanese on Monday afternoon, the Japanese battleship Shikishima and the cruiser Asama struck mines and sank.

The Russians say that the Shikishima sank two minutes after running on the mine, and that the Asama was being towed away by a vessel of the bombarding fleet when she, also, went down.

The battleship Fuji, not the cruiser Asama, which struck the mine on the port bow, had a heavy list, and was also down by the bow, but was righted, and went off in tow of the other cruisers. It is thought impossible, however, that she could reach port.

Only One Sunk.

London, May 20.—Special despatches from Shanghai to the London morning papers report that the Fuji and the Asama had to be towed away, badly damaged.

Presumably, the Russians wrongly identified the vessels, the Shikishima and the Hatsuse being practically sister ships.

TO RELIEVE PORT ARTHUR.

70,000 Russians Marching to the Stronghold, But Japs Are Active.

London, May 20.—The correspondent of The Daily News cables from Tientsin as follows, under date of May 19:

"It is reported that seventy thousand Russians are marching to the relief of Port Arthur and the Japanese are consequently hastening offensive operations.

"Forty-five thousand troops have already been landed at Kinchau and Talienwan, thus entirely investing Port Arthur.

"The Japanese advanced lines are seven miles from the Russian batteries.

"Skirmishes occur daily along the railroad.

"It is believed that the Japanese intend attacking Port Arthur with the entire force when it numbers 50,000 men. They are mounting six-inch naval guns on steel wheels with the object of silencing the Russian batteries.

"The Manchurian Railway south of Harbin is constantly broken by Chinese marauders, and the Russians threaten reprisals.

"The Russians admit that they have to contend with terrible difficulties along the whole line. Their men, however, are behaving splendidly and they are very confident."

Battle of the Yalu.

Tokio, May 20.—General Kuroki reports that the Japanese losses at the battle of Kiuliencheng (May 1) were:

Killed—Five officers and 218 men.
Wounded—33 officers and 783 men.

Thirteen hundred and sixty-three Russian dead were buried and 18 officers and 595 men were made prisoners.

The Japanese captured 21 quick-firing guns, 19 ammunition wagons, 1,417 shells, 8 machine guns and 37 goods for these guns, 1,031 fires and 350 good rounds of ammunition; 63 horses; 10 wagons and 1,244 coats and 541 tents.

The Japanese captured 357 shells for mountain guns, 188,000 pounds of rifle ammunition, 1,720 coats, 40,000 loaves of bread and other supplies, together with a quantity of tools and telegraph stores.

TO SET QUACKENBUSH FREE.

Chas. Burke, Ex-Convict, Caught Sawing Prison Bars.

Toronto, May 20.—One of the most hopeless attempts at a jail delivery in the history of the city police occurred at about 10 o'clock Wednesday night, when Charles Burke, an ex-convict, tried to liberate his pal, Quackenbush, who is at present serving a term of two years in the Central Prison, for house-breaking and escape. The efforts of Burke were frustrated by Guard Cephas Mark, and Burke was immediately secured. Yesterday he appeared in the police court and pleaded not guilty to a charge of assisting prisoners to escape, and was remanded until Thursday next.

FELL FOUR STOREYS TO DEATH.

Fatal Accident to Youth in An Elevator Shaft.

Toronto, May 20.—Harold Street, aged 17, was killed about 5.30 yesterday afternoon in an elevator shaft in the T. Eaton Co. premises. He was in charge of one of the Albert street freight hoists.

Just how the accident occurred no one seems able to state definitely, but it is said that, having ascended to the third floor, he stepped from the hoist to a cross-piece in the shaft, lost his balance, made a jump to save himself, but dropped to the bottom. Death was instantaneous, his head being badly crushed.

Creamed Cabbage.

Chop part of a solid head of cabbage fine in the chopping bowl, put it into a kettle with a cup of hot water, and keep covered and cook quickly. When tender, drain off the water, if any remains; season with butter and salt, then add a cupful of sweet cream; if you have no cream, stir in two spoonfuls of flour in cold milk until smooth, then add a cupful of milk and stir all in the cabbage; remove and serve.

A Table For a Boy's Room.

This table, illustrated in the Ladies' World, is for the boy's room. Get two shoe boxes at the shoe store and stand them on end a little way apart. Make a top to go upon these of a size so that the ends and edges will project two or three inches over the boxes. The top should have a rectangular piece of dark green cloth glued to it in the manner shown, leaving three inches or more of the wood to show all about the cloth. The wood can be stained a cherry color if desired. The interiors of the boxes are now to be fitted with a number of drawers, drawer "pulls" being placed upon the front of these and the whole front and sides of the boxes being stained the same color as the top. This will make a fine writing or reading table, and the drawers will be most convenient for holding the boy's treasures—writing material, "collections" of this, that and the other thing, his camera and photographic material. Oh, there will be plenty of things to put into those drawers!

SPLENDID PARADE.

RINGLING BROTHERS' SUPERB STREET DISPLAY DIFFERENT FROM ALL OTHERS.

The circus parade has at last, thanks to Ringling Brothers, reached the dignity of good taste, instructive feature and discriminating approval. This street display, peculiar to all circuses, until Ringling Brothers came into the field with fresh ideas, was a rather stale parade, in which the tawdry and unkempt laid heavy and gloomy hold of everybody and everything. With the advent of this famously successful circus firm came the well groomed man and horse, the splendid chariot and cage of distinguished style and tasteful coloring, the numerous open dens of the rarest wild animals, the inventive and never vulgar clown, squadrons of symmetrical equines of aristocratic breeding riders modishly dressed, and erect with the hall mark of culture, allegorical waggons picturing historic persons and scenes, lilliputian cages and tableau flotas for children's eyes and hearts, army types in companies and correctly uniformed and equipped, elephants strung out for a wide city block, and numbering forty or more, herds of sleepy eyed camels, trained domestic animals, musical vehicles of different kinds, the only cathedral pipe organ—the largest portable one ever made, and used in a street pageant, a mounted band, and many other unique and exclusive features, which separated the Ringling Brothers free circus pageant from all others, and made it the most fascinating event of each year. This season Ringling Brothers street parade is longer than ever, and more radiantly beautiful in costuming, decorative cages, and chariots, and splendid exhibit of handsome wild animals and shapely, highbred equines. All of the 1,280 men, women and children employed with the enormous shows take some part in the pageant. This procession leaves the show grounds at 10 o'clock sharp, and follow the usual route over the principal streets.

Many men owe the grandeur of their lives to their tremendous difficulties.—Spurgeon.

Daily Intelligencer.

"CANADA FOR ALIENS."

The great "I," Sir William Mulock. Minister of Labor, has at last been goaded into giving a pledge that he will make full inquiry into the facts brought to his attention by Mr. Geo. Griffith, on behalf of the Dominion Institute of Amalgamated Engineers. The allegation was that no less than twenty-two engineers from the United States were employed by Mr. Hays in the survey of the Transcontinental Railway line, which included the Government portion, and for which the Government was to pay. Mr. Hays, in reply to inquiry, said that 96 per cent. of the engineers were Canadian, that railways do not keep records of the nationalities of their engineers and that it would take some time to get the information. This was not regarded by Sir William as a satisfactory answer and he addressed Mr. Hays with a request for more information. The ground for his action, as stated in his letters, was that nothing could more effectively defeat the settlement and colonization purpose of the Government than the employment on the Grand Trunk Pacific of citizens of another country, "whose interest in Canada is not an abiding one and who may be expected to leave the country as soon as the occasion of their temporary employment is at an end." After reading his letters to the House, Sir William went on to say that he was not able to understand how the Grand Trunk Pacific could justify the employment of non-residents of Canada, non-British subjects, to the exclusion of Canadians.

This was all very well until Mr. E. F. Clarke rose and punctured the Minister's tire. He recalled that during the session of 1903 the employment of United States engineers on the surveys had been brought to the attention of the ministers. He showed that these surveys were being made even on the section of the National Transcontinental Railway the Government was to build, and recalled that Mr. Fielding had said the Government would likely pay for this part of the survey work. Then he showed from the records that as long ago as March 31, within a fortnight after the opening of the session, the attention of the Government had been called to the matter; and that on March 28, and again on April 2, it had been the subject of questions across the floor of the House. It was only in May, though, that any energy was shown by the ministers, and it was May 18, possibly after Mr. Borden had spoken, that Sir William Mulock's interest was aroused sufficiently to write with vigor.

Now it is given out that Sir William, stung to action by these revelations, and realizing that the matter is of pressing importance, in view of the daily deportations of Canadians under the United States Alien Labor Act, has determined to follow up his inquiries. If he is as dilatory as heretofore, however, the work will be all done by the time he is ready to correct the cause of complaint.

CANADIAN NATIONAL ENSIGN ALL RIGHT.

EXPERTS SO TESTIFY—THE AUTHORITIES QUOTED.

(Toronto News.)

"I have been making a number of inquiries about the flag," said Chief Inspector Hughes, of the Board of Education, this morning. It may be recollected that at a recent meeting of the Management Committee, Trustee Walker opposed the Inspector's suggestion to put a chart of the Canadian ensign in all the schools, on the ground that it was not a duly recognized national flag.

"Among the authorities I have consulted," said Mr. Hughes, "are Hon. R. W. Scott, Secretary of State, and Mr. F. Barlow Cumberland. They both agree that the red ensign with the unwreathed shield of the four original provinces, as authorized in 1892, is the duly authorized national flag of Canada."

Mr. Cumberland is the author of "The History of the Union Jack," a copy of which is to be found in every school library in Toronto. He writes to Inspector Hughes as follows in reply to an inquiry whether the Canadian flag is properly to be used on land as well as on the high seas:

"It is not necessary that the Canadian red ensign should be specifically recognized for use on land as well as on the waters, any more than the British red ensign. One recognition covers the other, being for use by citizens. The white ensign and the blue ensign, being for specific use by certain classes of vessels, are restricted to those vessels, and therefore not open for general use, although there is no objection to their being used on land, but not by vessels on the waters, except those specifically entitled.

"The Union Jack, being the sign of British Parliamentary Government, is properly to be used upon the buildings of the Imperial Parliament at Westminster and the Canadian Parliament at Ottawa. It is also specifically ordered to be raised upon all garrisons of His Majesty's forces, whether Imperial or colonial.

"It would, of course, be desirable that the Canadian Government should make some arrangement with the Herald's office and the Board of Admiralty, either for the addition of all the provinces in the Dominion to the Canadian coat-of-arms, or for the use of the single maple leaf upon the escutcheon in the flag, the latter being more clearly discernable for flag purposes."

"In all the schools," says Inspector Hughes, "the children learn to make the Union Jack, which is not so simple a matter as many people may think. I once went to address a meeting of Orangemen, and the room was hung with scores of Union Jacks, but not one among them was right. The children in the kindergarten made the Jack with colored strips of papers, and in the higher classes once a year they make it in colors."

Seeing the World.

The following letter has been received from Mr. S. F. Burton, formerly a resident of Belleville, who left here over ten years ago:

Edmonton, Alta., Canada,
May 11th, 1904.

Dear Father,—I am doing a little travelling in the west and thought you would like to hear from me. I have been having a good time here, hunting for several weeks. I leave here in a few months. I am going to Vancouver and from there to San Francisco by boat. I have been working as secretary to the President of the Bank of Buffalo for the past three years. I thought I should like to see a little of the world, so I took a vacation. I might take it into my head to visit the Sandwich Islands before returning home to Buffalo.

GILBERT'S FUN AGAIN.

TELLS AN INTERESTING STORY OF A SONG IN THE MIKADO.

The creator of the Mikado, W. S. Gilbert, has come out of retirement and his name is attached to a new domestic comedy, entitled "The Fairy's Dilemma." He favoured the First Nighters' Club of London recently with his latest jokes.

Responding to the toast of "The Drama," he remarked that it was on record that a certain occasional reporter, having to describe the incidents of a case of suicide, concluded his article with these pregnant words: "No reason could be assigned for the rash act, seven and sixpence having been found on the body of the deceased. He (Mr. Gilbert) was, to a certain extent, in the position of the unfortunate gentleman who formed the subject of the reporter's article.

He had committed dramatic suicide seven years ago, that is to say, he had voluntarily withdrawn from the profession with which he had for many years been identified. His friends had been good enough to see that there was seven-and-sixpenny worth of dramatic invention still left in the cranium of the deceased. But a certain modicum of dramatic ability could not save him from the anxieties, worries, jealousies and annoyances inseparable from his profession. So he had retired to an obscure corner of Harrow Weald and there, so to speak, blown out his brains.

The chairman had described his plays as clean. He did not altogether deserve it. When the "Mikado" was in rehearsal it occurred to Sir Arthur Sullivan and himself that the entrance of the Mikado might be effectively made to a Japanese song.

They asked a friend who was an authority on Japanese for a suggestion, and he said they could not do better than the Japanese National Anthem. The friend hummed the air; Sullivan took down the notes, and he himself the words: the air was incorporated in the play. A few years ago a performance of the "Mikado" was given at Hamburg. A Japanese gentleman who was present remarked that he was very much interested to find so much of the detail was accurate as could be and so much as wrong as possible. But what astonished, shocked and horrified him was the fact that the entrance of the Mikado was made to the very foulest song that was ever sung in the lowest teahouse in Japan. This was the song that their accomplished friend had palmed off as the Japanese National Anthem.

Wanted Something Strong.

(Brockville Times.)

On Saturday night a local military man nearly ended his life by an accident and even now, lies in a dangerous condition and is under medical care. While lying in his bed, he reached his hand out for a bottle of whisky. Now, beside the bed were two bottles, one containing whisky and the other lye. He grasped the bottle of lye, and without thinking poured some part of the contents down his throat. When his mistake became apparent, medical aid was hurriedly called in.—Kingston News and Times.

Now, isn't that just like a Kingston soldier? Mistaking lye for rye! But as for his requiring medical aid why that's only a bluff. Lye wouldn't disturb a Kingston man—soldier or civilian—for a moment. All that Kingstonians want for irrigation purposes is something they can hear from at once—rye, lye, high wines, nitric acid, or any sort of a torchlight procession goes down with them.

THE INTELLIGENCER is printed and published for The Intelligencer Printing and Publishing House (Limited), by CHARLES JAMES BOWELL, of the City of Belleville, in the County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, at their Office, No. 403, Front Street, Belleville, Ont.

There is nothing equal to Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator for destroying worms. No article of its kind has given such satisfaction.

Only 900 people in 1,000,000 die of old age.

Some persons have periodical attacks of Canadian cholera, dysentery or diarrhoea, and have to use great precautions to avoid the disease. Change of water, cooking and green fruit is sure to bring on the attacks. To such persons we would recommend Dr. J. D. Kellog's Dysentery Cordial as being the best medicine in the market for all summer complaints. If a few drops is taken in water when the symptoms are noticed no further trouble will be experienced.

Cut the trunk, the branches fall of themselves.

For coughs, colds, bronchitis and all lung and throat troubles there is no preparation of medicine can compare with Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It never fails to afford prompt and permanent relief. It removes all soreness and heals the diseased parts. It immediately soothes the most troublesome coughs, and by promoting expectoration, removes the mucous which stops up the air tubes which causes difficulty in breathing, thereby gives relief to that depressing tightness experienced in the chest. Public speakers and singers will find Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup of inestimable value, as it speedily and effectually allays all irritation and huskiness in the throat and bronchial tubes and gives power to the vocal cords, rendering the voice clear and sonorous. If parents wish to save the lives of their children and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness, give the Syrup according to directions.

A tailor made woman is one of the noblest works of man.

To Those of Sedentary Occupation—Men who follow sedentary occupations, which deprive them of fresh air and exercise, are more pone to disorders of the liver and kidneys than those who lead active, outdoor lives. The former will find in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills a restorative without question the most efficacious on the market. They are easily procurable, easily taken, act expeditiously, and they are surprisingly cheap considering their excellence.

A self made man has his private opinion as to what is the noblest work of God.

A Sure Cure for Headaches. — Bilious headaches, to which women are more subject than men, become so acute in some subjects that they are utterly prostrated. The stomach refuses food, and there is a constant and distressing effort to free the stomach from bile which has become unduly secreted there. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are a speedy alterative, and in neutralizing the effects of the intruding bile relieve the pressure on the nerves, which cause the headache. Try them.

Some men whose lives are blameless in other ways will whistle "Bedelia."

The Well Known Strengthening Properties of IRON, combined with other tonics and a most perfect nervine, are found in Carter's Iron Pills, which strengthen the nerves and body, and improve the blood and complexion.

UNTOLD MISERY — WHAT A WELL-KNOWN COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER SUFFERED, AND HOW HE WAS CURED.—Gentlemen, about five years ago I began to be troubled with Dyspepsia, and for three years suffered untold misery from this terrible complaint. I was at that time travelling for Messrs. Walter Woods & Co., Hamilton, and was treated by some of the best physicians in the country, but to no purpose. I continued to grow worse, one day I was induced to try a bottle of Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, and to my great surprise and joy, I soon began to improve. I continued using this medicine and when the third bottle was finished I found I was entirely cured, and as a year has elapsed since then, I feel confident that the cure is complete and permanent. To all afflicted with this distressing complaint I heartily recommend Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, believing that the persistent use of it will cure any case of Dyspepsia. (Signed)

T. S. McINTEE.

Some second thoughts occur several minutes later.

He Has Tried It.—Mr. John Anderson, Kinloss, writes: "I venture to say few, if any, have received greater benefit from the use of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil than I have. I have used it regularly for over ten years and have recommended it to all sufferers I know of, and they also found it of great virtue in cases of severe bronchitis and incipient consumption."

EASTER HATS AND OTHERS.

Beautiful Spring Confections For Dressy or Smart Street Wear.

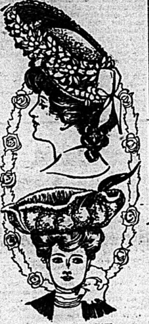
Pink straw, white lace and flowers compose the lovely Easter confection of the upper figure sketched by the Delineator, while white straw, black straw and a black quill form the other very smart affair. The same authority says:

There is a suggestion of the picturesque "baby" hat in some of the dressy models. One of rare beauty was made entirely of ruffles of lace outlined with gold. The lace was caught up at the left side, where the palest pink roses nestled and fell over on the hair. In black lace ruffles edged with gold, American Beauty roses supplanting the pink ones, this would be a striking style for a young brunette. The lace ruffle falls over the brim and shades the face slightly in these new "baby" hats, and ofttimes a pretty touch is given by a spray of blossoms caught in the ribbon bow and trailing over the brim to the back, where it falls on the hair. For street wear this pretty hat is fashioned of glace taffeta or liberty satin. It should match the gown in color.

The black picture hat trimmed with a white lyre feather is one of the essential items of a fashionable wardrobe, and it has come forth again in tulle and lace. The brim of this hat is straight and suggests the large, round sailor. It is slightly raised at the left side and in front by a bandeau. Hats of this type are becoming to almost every woman, but they should be worn only upon dressy occasions.

There is a touch of gold in nearly all of the newest models, and it is rumored that this military suggestion will be more and more in evidence as the season progresses.

A bonnet or headdress that is especially appropriate for evening wear is formed of a hoop of wire about an inch wide, over which is twisted black or colored velvet ribbon.



AMONG THE NEW HATS.

Flower toques and turbans are especially attractive at this season, for the flowers that now pervade the millinery world have copied nature very closely, some of them almost defying detection as imitations. There are flowers, though, that in no way suggest nature which are nevertheless beautiful and full of delightful possibilities.

The new toques are much smaller than those that were worn during the past season. They are quite oval in shape, forming almost a point in front. At the sides they are close fitting, and in nearly every instance a long lace drapery that falls over at the back is a distinguishing feature. All sorts of materials from coarse straw to the filmiest lace will be employed to fashion these modish hats.

A cavalier gown composed entirely of tiny red rosebuds is the distinctive feature of a new and dressy hat. The wide, straight brim is of black chantilly lace, the finely scalloped edge of the lace falling over.

So fashionable is ostrich plumage that in some cases it forms almost the entire hat. A model of rare beauty had the entire crown of pale pink ostrich feathers, with the wide, straight brim of cream lace.

The violet hat is included in almost every spring outfit.

Sausage Rolls.

Sausage rolls are a favorite in our family these crisp mornings, says a Good Housekeeping correspondent. Try my recipe: Make a rich biscuit dough with milk and cream, roll thin and cut with a large cooky cutter. Have the fried sausage, in links, hot; roll one link in each disk of dough, pinch ends together and bake in a quick oven. Serve on hot platter, pouring gravy around them when sent to the table.

A Pointer on Prunes.

Don't order prunes of the grocer boy when he calls for orders and then cook any old thing he delivers. It is best to select them yourself the first time or two; then after awhile the grocer will learn what you mean when you say, "Bring me some more of those nice prunes."

Brass Beds and Drafts.

The objection to brass or iron beds that drafts are noticeable is overcome by the use of dainty curtains at the head. In hospitals squares of heavy pique tied by tapes at the corners to the uprights of the bed are laundered weekly with the other bed linen.—Pilgrim.

A Promising Camp.

One of the most promising districts in British Columbia is that lying about the thriving city of Kamloops, B.C. The unlimited resources of the Pacific Province are shown here in all variety: Grazing lands, where thousands of cattle live and grow fat on the nutritious bunch grass; fruit lands in the valleys, farm lands on the benches, and mining lands on the mountains with good transportation facilities; an enterprising community and a glorious climate will make the Kamloops district.

A large amount of progress has been made in all lines, but the riches to be wrested from nature's treasure vaults in gold and silver and copper attract most attention. As a mining camp the district has not been boomed by the unscrupulous promoter but development has gone on quietly until to-day it is proved beyond a doubt that in all the rich sections of the great Dominion, Kamloops is second to none. The Cherry Creek Copper King mines, whose advertisement appears in another column, have secured one of the most promising properties in the camp, which was secured on very favorable terms. John Redman, M.E., in his annual report on the camp, says:—

"This group of claims, which is well known, possess some promising and extensive showings on the continuation of the Iron Mask lead. The following extract from the Company's prospectus fairly describes these, and I believe is a conservative description:

"The veins on the 'O.K.' which have been opened up by surface work and a shaft east and west at the 50-foot level is a true fissure, about 90 feet in width at the shaft. The strike of the lead is northeast and southwest, with a dip to the southeast of about 60 degrees. The ore bodies are lenticular, occurring throughout the vein filling. From these lenses a high-grade pyritic copper ore assaying from 10 per cent. to 16 per cent. copper and from $4 to $8 in gold is taken. A sampling of the fissure where exposed in the shaft gave an average of 12.60 per cent. copper and $6.75 in gold.

"A parallel vein on the Prince Charles has been opened up by a small shaft and a good body of medium grade pyritic ore uncovered. The extent of this body is apparently large but must be proved by further development. Average assays of this body give 70 per cent. copper and $6.75 in gold.

The company embraces some of the most responsible and successful business men of the Interior, and is setting forth its plans with a care and foresight not always devoted to the most prominent mining enterprises."

A perusal of their advertisement will show the plan for securing the shareholders.

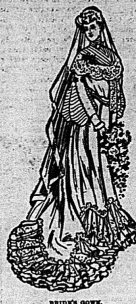
WEDDING FASHIONS.

PREVAILING STYLES AND FANCIES FOR EASTERTIDE BRIDES.

A Bride's Gown and Other Dresses. The Heavy Trained Dress Versus the Airy Short One—Veils and the New Coiffure Arrangement.

For pictorial representation is selected a charming bridal gown of white mousseline de duchesse, the skirt cut in deep vandykes, edged with a lovely Irish crochet point lace and falling over a quantity of white net frills, stitched with rows of narrow white satin ribbon and fine white silk medallion lace, which lace is also again used in vertical lines on the back of the skirt. Particularly dainty is the corsage, with its deep bertha of lace and bouffant sleeves of net run with ribbon, while the graceful bridal veil of net has a large true lovers' knot embroidered in each corner in white floss silk. The second cut shows two gowns of a trousseau, one being the going away gown.

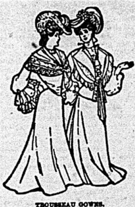


BRIDE'S GOWN.

White satin is still one of the handsomest of wedding gowns and gives a better effect than the newer diaphanous materials when made with a very long train. Charming as are the chiffons, nets, mousselines de soie and other filmy fabrics, they are not well adapted to very long trains. Hence the train in these materials is usually much shortened.

Lace veils, especially if they are heirlooms, are quite the vogue, but otherwise there is nothing so charmingly becoming and altogether appropriate as the very fine chiffon veils that crown the costume with a sort of radiant softness and grace.

Among the latest fads for bridesmaids is the substitution of the elaborate coiffure and veil for the hat that has been so long worn. At a recent swell New York wedding the eight bridesmaids, gowned in white chiffon draped over pink satin, wore three pink or three white ostrich tips arranged in court fashion, from which was draped a long scarf veil that hung down the back. Another fancy is the use with the scarf veil of wreaths of natural flowers. AMY VARNUM.



TROUSSEAU GOWNS.

The New Line In Bodices.

The middle portions of bodices in general are full or given that modification of fullness which plaits achieve, says Vogue. In this respect our gowns are further emphasized by many new and odd ways of keeping up full fronts above the girdle line, while flat backs are to be retained. This movement reduces the tiresome vulgarized front blouse line, and yet saves us for awhile from dart fitted bodices, which, no doubt, will come around in good time. Smart tailors have already accepted these foreign hints, and some of their latest suits bear evidence of this.

Baked Eggs and Cheese.

Stamp out rounds of bread, spread with butter and cover with thin slices of cheese. Arrange in a baking dish—one that can be sent to the table preferred—break a fresh egg over each round of bread and cheese, dust with salt and paprika and set in the oven until the eggs are cooked to taste.

How to Keep a Clean Sponge.

Everybody may secure a clean sponge by rinsing it whenever it feels sticky and slimy in a quart of hot water with a tablespoonful of salt. Give several applications of cold rain water and dry in the open air. Soap should not be rubbed on a sponge, which should be washed daily in clear water after use.

TWO IN ONE Shoe Polish

Puts on "The Shine that will please you."

It's a Paste combining all the Good features of the liquid-and-paste polishes without their faults.

Puts on a "patent leather shine" quick as a wink, keeps shoes soft, prevents the leather from cracking, makes it damp-proof and water-proof. One application a week of "2 in 1," and a few brisk rubs every morning, will keep your shoes as fresh and bright as new.

BRITAIN'S THIN CRUST.

Hidden Beneath the Earth Surface of the Mother Country Many Dangers Lie —Burrowing Under London.

How many of the millions of inhabitants of this 'tight little island' realize that danger lurks hidden and unsuspected beneath many an apparently firm and rigid city pavement, beneath many a smiling green field, and even beneath the back gardens which they cultivate with so much assiduity and pride?

That may, perhaps, appear to be a somewhat alarmist way of putting it, but it is, nevertheless, justified by hard fact.

Britain is honeycombed in many districts to an extent which places the lives of large sections of the population in jeopardy.

Centuries of delving for coal and salt in the bowels of the earth have, in parts of South Yorkshire, Lancashire, Midlands, Cheshire and South Wales, left nothing but a thinnish crust between the vault of heaven and the cavernous depths below.

This has led to subsidences of the earth, which have so recently as the past month or two been attended with loss of life and damage to property in the shape of collapsing houses and sinking, undulating streets.

Another source of danger is to be found in the numberless disused wells that have become covered up with a slight caking of soil and a treacherous growth of weeds, and which from time to time claim unsuspecting victims.

But it is in congested towns and cities that a new danger is confronting us. The rapid growth of population and the necessity for obtaining means of rapid transit have driven man to employ his ingenuity in devising methods of locomotion in the air above and in the earth beneath.

London, to take the supreme example, is being burrowed from end to end with "tubes" and underground railways. It may be contended that these "tubes" are constructed at a depth so great as to preclude all possibility of danger; but already we have seen in the case of the Central London Railway bitter complaints of vibration and damage to property on the part of people living in houses immediately above the "tube."

This cause of complaint and other troubles still to be revealed will be multiplied as "tubes" increase in number.

A coal mining expert informed an Express representative yesterday that some 150,000,000,000 tons of coal remain to be extracted from the earth in Great Britain, and that as the enormous yearly extractions continue earth cavities will have to be made of such huge dimensions that an extensive system of underpinning must be resorted to in order to make the surface even tolerably safe for the people.

A correspondent who occupies a cottage in Kent writes to The Express a letter which relates a remarkable story.

He says that he and his wife and children were returning from a ramble in the country when they noticed a circular depression in the vegetable patch close to the cottage. The earth suddenly began to move, and the mother, in deep anxiety, snatched her children away just in time to see the earth sink and reveal a disused well, which, when measured, showed a depth of 80 feet.—London Express.

A Queen Victoria Story.

What is believed to be an unpublished story about the late Queen Victoria has been told to a Kingston audience by the Rev. R. Harris Lloyd, who for six years was a Wesleyan army chaplain.

One of the color-sergeants of the Scots Guards under his pastoral care was selected, he said, to drill Prince Arthur of Connaught, and for that purpose frequently attended at Buckingham Palace. On one occasion Queen Victoria invited him with others to attend a theatrical entertainment at the Palace, and was astonished when the young soldier asked to be excused, stating that that form of entertainment had been a snare to him in his younger days, and that he had made a vow never to have anything to do with it again. The Queen excused the young soldier.

In a few days he was summoned into the Royal presence, when he found a beautiful breakfast service on the table. Addressing him, Queen Victoria said: "I have sent for you, sergeant, in order to tell you how much I honor you for the noble stand you made the other day for your Christian principles, and I ask you to accept this breakfast service as a token of how your Queen appreciates men who are true to their deepest convictions."

A Smokeless London.

An article on "A Smokeless London" has appeared in Cassier's Magazine. The writer believes the attainment of such an object to be in the increased use of gasoline fuel, suitable for heating alone, and having no illuminating qualities, which can be made very cheaply and could be used in the place of coal for domestic and many industrial purposes. In the same way illuminating gas will be entirely replaced by electricity, and with gas employed for heating purposes and electricity for lighting, the problem would be in a fair way of solution.

Englishwomen's Feet.

The evidence of ladies' outfitters affords direct proof of the improvement in physique of modern woman. "Most decidedly," said the manager of a Regent street firm, "our lady customers require larger sizes than they did ten years ago. Formerly we stocked nothing larger than 5, and 3 was the average size. Now we keep 7s, and during last year even 8s, and 5s is the average size of boots. Gloves, hosiery, and underwear are all being sold in the West End in larger sizes than ten years ago."—St. James' Gazette.

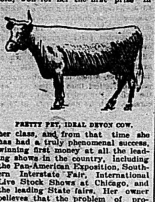
AN IDEAL DEVON TYPE.

"Pretty Pet," Pronounced by Good Judges to Be the Best in America.

The Devon cow Pretty Pet 10,579 shown above, owned by James Hilton of Albany County, N. Y., was calved June 3, 1898; sire General Gordon 2nd 5,243; dam, Pet 3,404. Good judges have pronounced Pretty Pet the most perfect type of Devon cow in America. Her first appearance in the show ring, as a three-year-old, won for her the first prize in her class, and from that time she has had a truly phenomenal success, winning first money at all the leading shows in the country, including the Pan-American Exposition, Southern Interstate Fair, International Live Stock Shows at Chicago, and the leading State fairs. Her owner believes that the problem of producing a dual-purpose animal, bred for beef and milk, has been successfully solved in Pretty Pet.



PRETTY PET, IDEAL DEVON COW.

The Crossbred Bullock.

Is the cross-bred bullock the most profitable to feed? If he is, what is the reason? asks Breeder's Gazette. The best bullock is the one which is most correctly formed, has the greatest percentage of high priced meat and makes the greatest gain for the amount of food given. This must be true when only steers under three years of age are allowed to compete, and that is now very generally the custom. Some light is thrown on this question by the figures derived from a recount of the championship winners at the Norwich Fat Show, one of the principal fixtures of the sort annually held in England. This show takes place in a region where very many excellent cattle are each season fed for the London market, and the representation of tenant farmers and men who make farming their business and not their pleasure is usually larger than at any of the other English fat stock exhibitions of like calibre. The championship at Norwich has been won ten times by cross-breeds, six times by Shorthorns, four times by Herefords, three times by Red Polls, twice by the Angus and once by a Devon. No better proof could be asked that there are good ones in all breeds, but the crosses seem to have the call in a very decided fashion. In the light of modern feeding experience, then, is the cross-bred bullock the best to feed? If so, why?

Draft Horses.

The heavy draft horse is the best for several reasons, says Professor J. H. Skinner of the Indiana experiment station. He can be produced easily and cheaply, requires little attention and is readily broken. Furthermore, he can be used on the farm from two to four years and thus pay his way. Blemishes do not detract so much from his sale as in the case of many other types, and he is well suited to the heavy work now found on the farm. It is not my purpose to advocate a coarse, awkward, extremely heavy horse for the farm. A few years ago much was said about the short legged, extremely blocky horse, and to-day such are good sellers, but a far superior farm horse is found in the active, upstanding horse of 1,600 pounds and upward with good action and style. Such a horse will not only sell to advantage, but fill the role of farm horse well. He can be taught to walk rapidly and does not know what a load is. Where such are raised on the farm they cost little and help mightily in making up for the losses from cattle feeding, etc. They can be produced by mating the heavier mares with pure bred stallions of any of the leading draft breeds of approved types and quality.

Walking Gait.

Walking is one of the gaits that are nearly always neglected, and yet an active, quick, clear footed walk is a valuable gait to the horse intended for the farm, for use as a roadster or for a saddler. A horse broken to harness is generally trained for awhile at the side of some steady old animal, and the youngster, if inclined to walk fast, soon begins to learn that it is not the thing to do. For that reason it is best to break a young horse in single harness or under the saddle, and train him to be a good walker as well as good at other gaits. A three-year-old is generally a better walker than he will be at any other age if he is kept as a harness horse unless specially trained with a view to brisk, active improvement in that gait.

Horse Breeder's Advice.

At a fair recently Mr. A. B. Anderson, a horse breeder, spoke as follows:

"It is my opinion that the farmers are making a serious mistake in breeding cold-blooded mares of draft type to either standard bred, thoroughbred or Hackney sires. To get the very best results—that is, most profitable and satisfactory—the safest way is to breed mares of that description and quality to draft sires of good quality and weight.

Handling Lousy Hens.

The best way to treat a hen that is very lousy is to dust her well with fine ashes. Sift coal ashes and then sift again with a flour sieve. On each peck of ashes mix one-half pound insect powder. Hold the hen over the ashes head down and throw them in among the feathers by the handful. Rub a few drops of lard on the head and turn her loose.

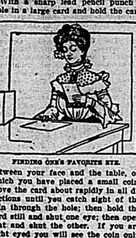
FOR YOUNG FOLKS

TEST YOUR SIGHT.

Find Out Whether You Are Right Eyed or Left Eyed.

A left eyed person uses the left eye alone in all cases where it is not necessary to use both eyes, as in using a spyglass or a microscope, either closing the right eye or paying no attention to what is seen by it. Furthermore, the left eyed person when reading with both eyes open pays little attention to what the right eye sees. Now, it may seem very difficult to prove this, as both eyes usually see the same thing, but it can be proved very easily in the following way:

With a sharp lead pencil punch a hole in a large card and hold the card between your face and the table, on which you have placed a small coin. Move the card about rapidly in all directions until you catch sight of the coin through the hole; then hold the card still and shut one eye; then open that and shut the other. If you are right eyed you will see the coin only when the right eye is open; if you are left eyed you will see it only when the left eye is open. This test will not succeed if you move the card very slowly, for unless you are nearly blind in one eye you will see the coin when the hole is in line with it and either eye, but when you move the card quickly you catch the rapid glimpse of the coin with your favorite eye, so to speak, but not with the other one, which you are accustomed to neglect. This habitual neglect of one eye is so common and so complete that many a person has for years been nearly blind in one eye without knowing it.—New York Mail.



FINDING ONE'S FAVORITE EYE.

A LAUGHING GAME.

How a Roomful of Girls and Boys May Have a Jolly Time.

This is one of the jolliest impromptu games that we know of. We mean by impromptu that it requires no preparation whatever, but may be played by a roomful of boys and girls the moment it is suggested. And it is brimful of fun from start to finish.

Any number of players may take part in it. They first select a leader, who should be a bright, alert, quick witted boy who is capable of preserving his self possession while fun and laughter are going on all around him.

The players seat themselves in a circle, and the leader takes his place in the center. He holds in his hand a white handkerchief, which he has knotted so as to make it partly solid.

When everything is ready the leader tosses the handkerchief up in the air, and then every player must begin laughing. But they must all stop laughing by the time the handkerchief reaches the floor, and if any one does not stop and the leader catches him either laughing or smiling he imposes a forfeit or a fine.

Or instead of making the detected laugher pay a forfeit he may be required to drop out of the circle. If played in this way the players drop out one after another until only one is left, and that one wins the prize.

Spanish Tag.

This is the way the Spanish children play the game of tag: One child, chosen by lot, is the moon and must keep within the shadow. The others, morning stars, are safe only in the lighted spaces. The game is for the morning stars to run into the shadow, daring the moon, who, if successful in catching one, becomes a morning star in turn and passes out into the light, leaving the one caught to act the part of the moon. As the morning stars run in and out of the moon's domain they sing over and over the following stanza:

Oh, the moon and the morning stars!
Oh, the moon and the morning stars!
Who dares to tread—O,
Within the shadow?

Flowers In Soap Bubbles.

Did you know that it is possible to blow a flower inside a soap bubble? It is done in this way: The bottom of a plate should be covered with a soapy solution at least a half inch thick. In the center place a carnation, a rose or any compact flower. Over this place a tin funnel, and while slowly lifting it continue the blowing until a large film has been made. The funnel is then disengaged, after having first turned it at right angles.

To make the most successful soap bubbles use castile soap, glycerin and ammonia. It should stand for three days before using it, whereupon the scum should be removed.

A Lesson In Etiquette.

Whenever you go out to tea, little man,
Remember this lesson as well as you can:
If the hostess should offer you cocoa or tea
Don't say you would rather have milk or coffee.

Just apply what I tell you to all things in life.
It will lighten the burden and lessen the strife.
Take just what is offered, smile a beautiful smile
And be glad if a choice is yours once in awhile.

WONDERFUL CURE OF SORE HANDS

By Cuticura After the Most Awful Suffering Ever Experienced.

EIGHT DOCTORS

And Many Remedies Failed to do a Cent's Worth of Good.

"About five years ago I was troubled with sore hands, so sore that when I would put them in water the pain would very nearly set me crazy, the skin would peel off and the flesh would get hard and break. There would be blood flowing from at least fifty places on each hand. Words could never tell the suffering I endured for three years. I tried everything that I was told to use for fully three years, but could get no relief. I tried at least eight different doctors, but none of them seemed to do me any good, as my hands were as bad when I got through doctoring as when I first began. I also tried many remedies, but none of them ever did me one cent's worth of good. I was discouraged and heart-sore. I would feel so bad mornings when I got up, to think I had to go to work and stand the pain for ten hours, and I often felt like giving up my position. Before I started to work mornings I would have to wrap every finger up separately, so as to try and keep them soft and then wear gloves over the rags to keep the grease from getting on my work. At night I would have to wear gloves in bed. In fact, I had to wear gloves all the time. But thanks to Cuticura, the greatest of all great skin cures. After doctoring for three years, and spending much money, a small box of Cuticura Ointment ended all my sufferings. It's been two years since I used any and I don't know what sore hands are now, and never lost a day's work while using Cuticura Ointment."

THE MESSENGER FROM KHARTOOM

BY ST, GEORGE RATHBORNE

Author of "Dr. Jack," "Dr. Jack's Wife," "Miss Caprice," Etc., Etc.

The Hindoos cease to advance. This word, spoken in their native tongue, tells them that the other is a master. His personality is great. He checks their desire to reach out their hands and clutch their intended victims.

Eager dark faces, shining out from under varicolored turbans, greet the view, some bearded, others smooth. Two dozen pairs of black eyes are focused intently upon one point, and this the countenance of Mynneer Joe. He holds them as if by some magic. They are swayed in a measure by his mind. It is the power of one will over others.

"What does this mean?" he asks.

A dozen voices endeavor to answer him. The babel is such that he cannot understand. He waves his hand with authority.

"Stop!"

Then he selects one who seems to be more intelligent than his fellows, as his face is crowned by gray hair and beard.

"Let this man tell me all," he says.

They push him forward as spokesman, a position he is eminently fitted to fill.

"It is plain. It is simple. We were worshipping in our temple before Vishnu. No man dares enter there with his shoes on. Suddenly we hear a terrible noise, and these two foreign devils jump in through the window. That is a deadly insult to our god. We burn to avenge it. We chase the Inglese here. We demand satisfaction. Vishnu will have revenge. Their blood must wipe out the insult. That is all."

Murmurs of applause arise as the old Hindoo finishes his little speech. Mynheer Joe sees that it is as he feared. These people must be handled with gloves in all that pertains to their religion.

"Now, hear me. You are fair and just. It is only right both sides should explain. Your god has been insulted. I believe it was an accident on the part of my friends, for they do not go around insulting honest worshippers. I shall hear their story and repeat it to you. Then we will see if this trouble may not be averted."

His manner pleases them, for they feel he is an honest man. So Mynheer Joe turns to his friends and begs Sandy to explain, which that worthy does in an excited manner, accompanying his words with gestures.

The traveller smiles, for he sees the situation is not so bad as he feared. He speaks to Demosthenes Tanner, who eagerly agrees to his proposition. Then once more the friend of Gordon faces the eager, attentive crowd, and proceeds to get his friends out of this scrape into which their lack of due caution has thrown them.

"Listen!" he says, sharply, and the muttering in the air ceases as if by magic. "It is, as I believed, an accident. My friends had no desire to disturb you in your worship, or to insult your great god Vishnu. With reverence they were looking in through a window, standing upon a platform, when one end of it gave way and precipitated them through the opening. They could not explain matters because they are unable to talk in your tongue, so the best they could do was to retreat. My stout friend is particularly grieved that such a thing has occurred. He desires to make restitution as far as possible. Let the high priest come forward and accept a handful of rupees. That will prove their friendship."

The point is well taken, and Joe knows their weakness. Immediately a hubbub arises. Most of the crowd seem to be in favor of an eager acceptance. A few demur, but they are so much in the minority that they are speedily snowed under, and the moulajee comes forward to receive the promised rupees, a venerable man, who resembles the priest Joe saw in the mosque, though it cannot be the same.

Mynheer Joe has been careful to keep back a portion of the truth, because he fears lest it create new trouble. At the time of the sudden disaster, Sandy has been just putting the finishing touches to a picture of the ugly old idol Vishnu, and he has managed to retain his precious notebook through all the disturbance.

The humor of the crowd has changed as wonderfully as upon many a similar occasion, for there is nothing more fickle upon earth than a mob. The worshipers of old Vishnu are now eager to call the Americans their friends, though it is all done by word or gesture. Handshaking is generally tabooed in India, for a man fears lest he lose caste by touching another and have to inflict punishment on himself as a penalty.

Just at this moment there bursts into view a detachment of Sepoys, headed by a British officer, at whose side runs brave Molly Tanner. They come from the cantonment, and it is evident the colonel did not hesitate a moment when he learned that Mynheer Joe was in danger.

Of course, all are relieved when they see the three Americans uninjured and mark the change in the humor of the crowd. Molly cannot understand it, and as she affectionately greets her father, she asks:

"What is this? One time these men seem eager to murder you, and now they act as though on the best of terms!"

Demosthenes Tanner, still blowing hard from the effects of his wild run, jerks his thumb over his shoulder and remarks:

"It's all owing to Mynheer Joe. He palavered the heathen and made them believe we were doing their old god a real favor when we tumbled into the temple through the window, after the beastly platform gave way."

"Indeed! He seems a wonderful man, governor," murmurs the girl, stealing a look at the object of her thoughts, who, just then is engaged in conversation with the British officer, explaining the cause of the sensation.

"Yes, dear child. Such logic as he possesses would even enthuse the Illinois senate. Why, unless you're on your guard, he can easily bring you around to his way of thinking and make you believe black is white."

The girl turns her head away again, this time to hide her rosy cheeks; she blushes without hardly knowing why, save that there is something in her father's manner of speaking that seems like a sly allusion and warning to herself. Love is very sensitive, especially at that stage where the modest young woman awakens to the condition of her own heart, and the backward young man has not yet gathered courage enough to storm the citadel which he hopes to capture.

As the crowd rapidly increases, with evening coming on apace, it is deemed best to leave the scene and retire. The soldiers right about face and head back toward the cantonment after the four Americans have entered a palkee gharry and started for their hotel.

Mynheer Joe decides that the baron can hardly be held accountable for this affair, since no stretch of the imagination could invest him with the power to weaken the platform and hurl the two adventurous lookers-on in Venice through the window of the temple of Vishnu.

As the incident has really been productive of no more ill than relieving Tanner's pocket of so many rupees, which he can easily afford to offer at the shrine of the idol, they feel that they can well afford to laugh over the adventure now.

This is especially the case when, after Joe has eloquently translated his speech and told how he praised the beauties of Vishnu, Sandy passes his notebook to Molly, and her eyes fall upon the well-executed fac-simile of the hideous idol these benighted people worship.

Her laughter breaks forth like rippling water, and the deep bass of the governor joins in the tide.

Passers-by turn and survey the shigram with amazement, as though wondering what manner of passengers it contains.

They reach the snug litle hotel as night is casting her mantle over Bombay. A young moon nearing the half-way stage hangs high in the heavens, proving that it will not be dark at least.

Thus their first day in India has passed, and, as we have seen, it has not been without its adventure. If the record is kept up, their stay in Bombay must be an eventful one.

One of Joe's first duties upon visiting the barracks is to deliver a message from the commandant at Cairo, which probably contains information respecting Baron Popoff; for the officer who reads it looks very grave and asks the American many questions concerning the doings of the Russian, which Joe, fortunately, is in a position to answer.

At this time, England is greatly disturbed over the actions of Russia's ruler. He is said to be making preparations for pushing south through the Afghan territory to a point where his troops will be knocking at the door of India. A great railroad is about to be built for strategic purposes, and no one positively knows where it is aimed at--meaning no British subject.

Hence, the appearance of a shrewd Russian diplomat and secret agent, like the baron, upon the soil of India, is likely to create a sensation. His name has been connected with numerous unscrupulous political moves in Bulgaria and Roumania and all along the Balkans, so that it long age became thoroughly known to all the reading world. Those who watch the moves upon the chess board of Europe can see deep purpose in every action, however careless it may appear to the casual looker-on.

Those officers stationed in India have, of course, a peculiar interest in everything the White Czar does. They are threatened by no other nation. France is busy in Tonquin and Algiers; Germany in Central Africa; Italy in Abyssinia, while Austria has no foreign policy, and Spain is conerned almost wholly in her West India possessions. It is Russia who stretches her vast domains across from Atlantic to Pacific, and yearns to reach the Indian Ocean as well. Year after year she placates the tribes en route, slowly but surely stretching her hand nearer the prize. The day will certainly come when the fiercest war Asia has ever known will be fought on neutral territory between these two giants. One has only to travel to India by the overland route, via Herat, to see the evidences of Russian cantonment. Almost up to the gates of India the traveller finds, here and there along the road, Russian rebats, or small wayside houses of refuge, erected through charity, where the weary pilgrim can pass a night without any charge for the shelter.

No reasonable man doubts that England must some day be prepared to fight for her Indian empire; nor is there any reason to believe but that she will be able to hold her own against that cunning foe who would creep in at the back door while the mistress is engaged in sweeping and garnishing the front of the house.

Whatever may be the mission of the baron to India, now that his presence is known, it is not likely that he will be allowed to go about without some sort of secret espionage.

When the evening meal has been disposed of Sandy and Mynheer Joe decide to see what Bombay looks like after nightfall. So they dress as quietly as possible, not forgetting to carry their firearms, as there must always be a certain amount of danger traversing the streets alone.

Mr. Grimes hopes to be all right by morning, but thinks he had better rest until then. Molly complains of a headache, probably the result of her exciting race for assistance, and begs to be excused. This has an influence upon Mynheer Joe in inducing him to accept Sandy's proposal that they take a stroll, for he has no desire to spend the evening alone, Demosthenes complaining of bruises received in his tumble, which he wishes to bathe.

Peace reigns in the neighborhood of the little hostlery near the foot of Malabar Hill, save in one quarter. Joe draws the attention of his artist correspondent comrade to the rear of the hotel, whence loud voices of discussion come. The row seems to be between the bobajee and a mussaljee under him. The cook berates the scullion, and the latter assumes a ridiculously dramatic attitude, with his head cocked on one side. Sandy eagerly takes it in. If he could only reproduce that scene on paper, it would be a dandy. At any rate, his memory is good, and he may succeed.

As they walk on in the soft, balmy moonlight, the angry voice of the bobajee continues to float after him. Finally there is a hubbub, and they know he has launched forth other arguments than mere words.

It is not long before they have reached the native quarter. Perhaps some unusual festival is taking place; at any rate, the shops and bazars are lighted up and throngs are on the street. As in the densely populated cities of China, the people of Bombay seem to have no particular time of rest, unless during the hot part of the day their enthusiasm dwindles to a low peg. Night's cooling breezes bring them all out-of-doors, and the noise reminds a traveller of carnival time in Rome.

Lanterns of every color, made of paper or muslin, hang about the streets and in the shops, sending a strange light upon the picturesque crowd. Sandy's artistic soul is charmed by the spectacle. He seems to never tire of drinking it in, no detail escaping his eye, and all the while he utters exclamations that are indicative of his rapture.

As for Mynheer Joe, he is more reserved in his manner, and yet enjoys the sight almost as well as the correspondent.

They seem to excite no curiosity as they move along. The natives are accustomed to meeting English-speaking people at all turns; slowly but surely they are leaving the ways of their ancestors, already more than two million having become Christians.

England allows full freedom of worship. The only thing she set her iron heel upon were some barbarous customs, such as the juggernaut-car and its slaughter, the putting to death of widows when the head of a family died, and like practices, for which Brahmins, Parsees and Mussulmans alike have actually become thankful, as these things were relics of ancient barbarism that clung to the country.

Such sights the two travellers look upon—here is a retail grocery with many odd things upon the shelves, and the queerest object about the place is probably the banija himself; indeed, Joe declares he must be a natural clown from his dress, while Sandy berates himself for not having one of the new style little cameras with him, by means of which he could secure a masterpiece for a subject.

Next door is a shelf-like shop, where all manner of bric-a-brac may be found, anything that is bizarre having a place, and the Hindoo proprietor, smoking his hubble-bubble nods wearily over his Koran.

THE CELLAR.

A Place Where Perpetual Cleanliness Should Reign—Often a Death Trap.

"It isn't typhoid, malaria, grip or spring fever half so much as decayed vegetables in the cellar," said one physician to another when called in consultation over a severe case of fever.

It is a popular notion that the cellar should be cleaned in the spring cleaning time, but by spring the seeds of disease and death may have been sown, and cleaning comes too late to save the life of some member of the family.

Cleaning the cellar should be a weekly affair, but with the breaking up of cold weather greater attention to its condition is required.

Decayed vegetables should not be allowed to remain one hour, and all specked or spotted fruits should be removed.

The cellar should receive a daily airing. This does not mean to leave the windows open long enough to freeze the vegetables and fruit, but in the severe cold weather let the windows be opened to allow a circulation of fresh air and closed quickly.

Jars, pots and barrels should be thoroughly cleared before putting away, and untiring watchfulness should preside over this portion of the house.

In the spring the walls should be swept down, sprinkled with water and a little sulphur be burned in the cellar.

Upon a pan of ashes, hot or cold, place a tablespoonful of sulphur in a little heap. Touch a lighted match to it and leave it to burn. It will slowly consume and will kill all unpleasant odors and disease germs.—Table Talk.

Cleaning Furs.

Furs dark in color may be cleaned first by brushing them well with a switch, after hanging over a line, then by rubbing well heated cedar or mahogany sawdust into the fur and brushing out again. The best way to remove the same after the cleaning is done is to put the fur side down on feather pillows and beat thoroughly or until all dust is removed.

If the furs are soiled at neck or wrists, they may be cleaned with gasoline—of course in a room or outdoors, where no fire is.

White furs may be cleaned with hot cornmeal (white), the same being rubbed into the fur as described above for the dark furs with sawdust. Both the dark and white furs should be hung outdoors in a shady place after cleaning.

Magnesia may also be used for cleaning light colored or white furs. It should be used in cakes and the cake rubbed upon the fur.

Rice Mold With Maple Sugar.

Wash well one cupful of rice, drop into boiling salted water and keep at a galloping boil until the grains are tender all through. This will take about from twelve to eighteen minutes, according to the variety of rice. Drain, place in a saucepan with one-half of a cupful of milk and one-quarter of a cupful of cream and cook very slowly until the liquid is absorbed. Have ready a buttered mold. Fill this with the rice, tapping it sharply from time to time that the rice may settle well. Stand in the open oven for five minutes, then turn out on a heated dish. Serve with an abundance of good butter and scraped maple sugar. This is an old New England dish and a very good one, says Table Talk.

Power is a fretful thing and hath its wings always spread for flight.—Wallace.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

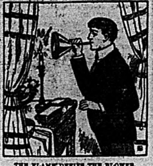
THE OBSTINATE FLAME.

How to Extinguish a "Blower" by Letting Him Blow.

Of course you know what a "blower" is. The meaning that we have in mind is not to be found in the dictionary, but you are doubtless familiar with the term boaster, which is the same thing.

The next time you encounter him tell him that you don't believe he can blow out a candle placed only a foot from his experienced mouth without any other obstacle than his own breath between them.

If he accepts the challenge seat him comfortably at the table, place the lighted candle in front of him and, putting to his lips a large tin funnel, with the center of its mouth opposite and near the flame, tell him to blow through that.



THE FLAME DEFIES THE BLOWER.

He may blow until he becomes black in the face without extinguishing the candle. The harder he blows the more it doesn't go out.

After he has given it up say, "It is easy enough when you know how," put the funnel to your lips and blow out the candle. How? Simply by bringing the rim instead of the center near the flame.

When you blow through a funnel your breath spreads and follows the conical surface, leaving a region of dead calm in the center. Your friend blew all around the flame without touching it, but you extinguish it with a puff.

There are a good many queer things about air currents that would never have been thought of if they had not been found out by experience. This is one of them.—New York World.

Clever Sparrows.

One of the prettiest sights as regards seamen's pets was afforded by six sparrows which were tamed and trained by an old bluejacket on board a coal barge. He had trained them to such a degree that they would march in regular military order, "turning" and "wheeling" as desired by merely moving his hand. On each of their heads he had fastened a small piece of scarlet cloth, cut so as to form a cockscomb, which gave the birds a very saucy appearance as they went through their varied evolutions.

Animal Notes.

Naturalists tell us that sometimes a single beaver will go off and live by himself, leaving the colony to which he belonged. Whether these "bachelor beavers" have been put out of their native towns or leave of their own free wills we do not know.

A gentleman on one of our western ranches found a nest of young rabbits and took them in to his cat, supposing she would make a meal of them, but she surprised everybody concerned by adopting them and bringing them up along with her kittens.

Why They Want a Curl.

Do you wish to know why sister's friends ask you for a curl? Why Uncle Will tosses you up to the ceiling? Why all the grownup people talk with you and ask you questions? If you really want to know, dears, lean right close and you will hear that it is because they love you so and care so much for your good opinion. It is well for you to know how much you are loved. You will wish to be loving to others always, will you not?

Disappointed.

Clarence had been looking forward eagerly to his sixth birthday, and when it came his sister woke him up early in the morning. Clarence lay still a moment and then said in a tone of deep disappointment:

"Pshaw, I aren't a bit bigger!"

In the Night.

Do you ever waken sometimes in the night,
When the room's all dark, except the queer, dim light
From the window, and you're turned about in bed,
And you can't tell where the foot is, nor the head?
And you sit up, scared, and look round everywhere,
But the door to mother's room just isn't there.
Oh, it's very bad, I know, because, you see,
It happens often just that way to me.

But then if I lie down again and wait,
Why, by and by just everything comes straight.
The bed stands in its old same place again,
The window's where I thought it was—and then,
Right over here, this side, is mother's door,
And then I don't feel frightened any more.

HINTS ABOUT HATS.

Preserve the Balance Between Your Figure and Your Headpiece.

Do not buy a hat unless you have tried it on before a cheval glass. It must suit your figure as well as your face. A very short woman is ridiculous in an immense hat unless she is pretty and graceful enough to be piquant. On the other hand, a woman who is far too tall is nothing less than overwhelming in a huge picture hat. There is a certain balance between the headpiece and the figure, and this balance must be preserved. Your own good taste will guide you in this matter.

Color has laws so subtle that only long study can make you sure of them. The general laws are affected by a slight tint of complexion. You must learn the colors that are yours, and then never, on peril of your beauty, depart from them. You have day colors and evening colors, dark and light colors, and you must know what they are.

The old rule of "match your hair by day and your eyes by night" is now regarded as almost meaningless. Experiment proved its mistakes in many cases.

In general, the dead white hat should be worn by none except the girl with dark hair and delicate complexion and is therefore the most difficult of all hats. The black hat is safe for almost any one and can be worn by many whose skin is too dark to permit of black below the face. Black above and white below the face are inclined to make a sallow woman look fairer.—Washington Star.

RICE AS FOOD.

More Nutriment In the Cooked Water Than In the Grains.

The rice grains that we eat and believe are nourishing do not begin to have the real nutriment that is contained in the water in which they have been cooked.

For thousands of years rice has been the main food of the Chinese, Japanese and even the Sikhs of India. When we stop to think that these warlike nations compose one-third of the human race and subsist largely on rice, it seems probable that they thoroughly understand its properties. But the orientals have found that the water that we throw away after cooking the cereal is what contains the greatest life giving properties. In fact, they prefer the water to the grain as a nutriment.

In cases of stomach trouble, so prevalent in the east, it is used with great effect and can be retained when even milk is rejected.

But for the Anglo-Saxon a delicious dessert can be made from this same rice water. After cooking the rice drain the water and flavor with some extract. Set on the ice to cool, and it will form a jelly. Heap with whipped cream or fruit and serve. This makes not only a tasty but nutritious dish and certainly an economical one.

THE HOME DOCTOR.

For snake bite or other poisoning a poultice of onion is effective.

For any kind of a sore that "is always getting hurt" protect it well with a cushion of cotton batting.

When a finger is cut or bruised or any poisonous wound made, apply turpentine freely at once. It takes out the soreness immediately.

A wash made of witch hazel and cocaine to be applied to the nasal passages when the asthma comes on is an effective cure for hay fever.

Cloths wrung out of hot water with which a tablespoonful of turpentine is mixed is effective in cases of inflammation of stomach and bowels.

Any one can add strength and weight to his body by rubbing well with olive oil after a warm bath. Oil baths are particularly beneficial to delicate children.

Children and Nutmegs.

"Every careful mother," said a doctor who had just treated a child made violently ill from chewing a nutmeg, "should keep nutmegs as far out of reach of her children as she does the ammonia bottle or the carbolic acid. Nutmegs are a deadly poison. I remember a case about six years ago where a boy eight years old died in great agony after chewing and swallowing two nutmegs. As a general thing small children do not like to interfere with pepper, ginger and similar aromatic spices left around in kitchen cupboards. One taste is enough usually. But it seems to be a fact that most children will chew nutmegs if they can get them."

Starchy Foods.

Too much starchy food is eaten in many households. Potatoes are served with every meal, and they are usually mashed or boiled. It is well to substitute rice, hominy and macaroni for potatoes two or three times a week at the very least and better still to omit any of these at many meals. Fried hominy is a delicious substitute for potatoes when chicken is served. Boil the hominy in the usual way, pour it into a shallow dish to cool and slice pieces half an inch thick. Flour lightly and fry in chicken fat or butter and drippings. This is an excellent breakfast or luncheon dish served with maple sirup or chicken gravy.

Antidote to Poisons.

It is a great thing to thoroughly understand what simple antidote to take if one is so unlucky as to swallow poison of any kind through mistake or otherwise. Sweet oil is to be found in nearly every house, however humble, and a half pint of it taken immediately is an effectual antidote to almost all poisons. Any one with a strong constitution should take a larger quantity of this simple remedy.

A NOTED HORSEMAN'S EXPERIENCE.

Mr. Antoine Wendling, owner of Deveras, 2.11 1-4, and proprietor of the Clifton House, Brockville, says no liniment compares with Nerviline for general use around the stable. For strains, sprains, swellings, internal pains and especially for affections of the whirl bone Nerviline is unequalled. Mr. Wendling believes Nerviline is indispensable as a horse liniment; it has strength, penetrating power and works thoroughly. Every horse and stock owner should use Nerviline. BELLEVILLE METHODIST DISTRICT MEETING.

HELD IN BRIDGE ST. CHURCH YESTERDAY AND TO-DAY — DEEPER CONSECRATION ON THE PART OF ALL METHODISTS BELIEVED TO BE NECESSARY.

The Belleville district meeting of the Methodist Church was held yesterday and to-day in Bridge Street Church, Rev. Dr. Crothers, chairman of the district, presiding.

After the usual religious exercises, Rev. S. Crookshanks was elected secretary of the Ministerial Session, which occupied most of yesterday. There are eleven fields of labor, and Albert College, requiring active men. These, with Rev. Dr. Carman, General Superintendent, number thirteen; eleven superannuates and one supernumerary constitute the ministerial session. These have all to pass in review, as to character, doctrine, labor etc., before the annual meeting. There were no candidates for the ministry, and but one probationer for continuation in this district, which is rather unusual. The only change recommended re the superannuates was in the case of Rev. S. Duprau, from that of one year as at present to that of permanency, on account of his prolonged illness. Two of the latter class, belonging to this city and district, Revs. W. Tamblin and Eli Woodcock, having been called during the year from labor to reward, very appropriate resolutions, setting forth the high esteem in which they were held, and expressing deep sympathy with loved ones were unanimously carried and ordered to be sent to the bereaved families.

Most of the afternoon session was taken up with a searching inquiry into the spiritual well-being of the church, and seeking to ascertain if all available means were used to advance her welfare in the varied departments of Christian work.

A very general and most profitable discussion followed the several questions proposed, the conclusion of which was, that a deeper consecration on the part of ministers, officials and laity in general would be the best remedy to secure more faithful attendance at class, prayer meetings, public worship and family devotion.

A deputation from the W. M. Society was presented and able addresses given by Mrs. (Rev.) Real and Miss Martin. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered the ladies and the ministerial session closed.

LOOKING FOR DIVIDENDS.

ENGLISH INVESTORS IN GRAND TRUNK SHARES ARE NOT PHILANTHROPISTS.

The recent increase in taxation of railway companies by the Province of Ontario, says the Financial Times, has been followed by the announcement by the Grand Trunk Railway Company of an increase in its freight charges to all points north and west of Toronto. This decision has, of course, created a great deal of discontent in that city, and it is stated that appeals are to be made to the Railway Commissioners to intervene in the matter. Apparently the good people of Ontario do not realise that there are two sides to the question, and that railways have not been built in Canada solely for the purpose of providing cheap transport for the inhabitants. Outside capital was not put into these enterprises with such a philanthropic idea, but rather in the hope of dividends. It is well known that the severe snowstorm last winter cost the Grand Trunk an enormous sum, and on the top of this the province has, it is stated, added some £250,000 more to the assessed value of the company's property. As regards the appeal to the Railway Commissioners, it depends on the powers conferred by the Act passed last year whether that body will be able to interfere effectively in the question. We learn from a well-informed source that it is very unlikely that the law authorizes intervention in such a case.

Pleasing Entertainment

An entertainment, the participants in which were children, was held in the Salvation Army barricks last evening. There was a large attendance and all were seemingly well pleased. The programme consisted of songs, recitations, drills, etc., and was well rendered. Mr. John A, Conseul occupied the position of Chairman.

Died at Northport.

The death occurred at Northport, P.E. County, on Thursday, May 18, of Mr. R. A. Brooks, which fact will be heard with regret by the many friends of the deceased gentleman in this city. The funeral will take place at Picton on Sunday, under the auspices of the Foresters.

Catarrhozone destroys disease germs, stops the cough, heals sore spots, clears the nose and throat of discharge. Catarrhozone soothes, never irritates. Guaranteed for every form of catarrh. Ottawa Journal: The Toronto baseball club after an elaborte procession, the blatant blare of brass bands and all the formalities attendant upon the opening game at home, lost the match. To offset this disaster was only one factor, the newspapers didn't knock. It will be brief consolation that will afford the players if they lose games, for the Toronto papers got so much experience knocking the Ottawa Hockey Club last winter that when they get going together they form an anvil chorus, of no mean volume, albeit a trifle out of tune. Funny that Toronto can work up enthusiasm about a team composed entirely of Yankees. Is it that Torontonians are cultivating a friendly spirit towards Americans or that the strangers play good ball?

The latest book on baseball is issued by Richard K. Fox, and it is written and compiled by no less an authority on the great national game than John J. McGraw, Captain and manager of the New York Team, National League. He has written chapters and provided illustrations on how to throw a curved ball, the art of catching, how to become a good batter, and has covered every other detail of the game. It is the only book of the kind published. The book has a handsome cover, and it is No. 8, of Fox's Library. It will be sent to any address upon receipt of seven two cent postage stamps. It also contains the official rules and a schedule of the games of both leagues for the present season.

The Toronto baseball team is moving fast these days—towards the bottom of the list.

Our former Belleville boy, Marshall, won first prize in the international chess masters' tournament, which was concluded last night. Lasker and Janowski divided second money. Marco was placed fourth and Showalter fifth, while the sixth prize was equally divided between Schlecter and Tschigorin. Thus two Americans and five Europeans were prize winners. Marshall's final score was 13 points won and 2 lost, comprising 11 victories and 4 drawn games. His feat of passing throughout the entire tournament without a loss is unprecedented.

DR. POTTS IN NEW YORK HOME FROM JERUSALEM.

TELLS OF HIS SERMON ON MARS HILL TO WORLD'S SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

New York, May 19.—Five hundred American delegates back from the world's Sunday school convention, now on tour in the Holy Land, arrived to-day. They bring the story of how Rev. Dr. John Potts, of Toronto, just before Easter Sunday, climbed Mars Hill, where St. Paul preached his striking sermon, gave out the same text and preached to the assembled delegates.

Dr. Potts, describing the impressive scene, said:

"Up the steps of the Areopagus climbed the worshippers until the summit was black with the waiting congregation. The song was "America," and as a banner of Christian conquest, a flag bearing the words, "By This Sign We Conquer," was unfurled over the national flags as the last stanza of the national hymn was sung. The steps leading up the hill were impassable, and great crowds of natives gathered at the base to watch the strange scene.

"President Gates, of Robert College, Constantinople, led the service, reading the familiar account of St. Paul's address from Acts xvii.

Dr. Potts' sermon followed. His address and that of St. Paul were the same and the texts were the same, "Jesus and the Resurrection." The preacher drew a graphic picture of the man Paul, told of his scholarship, masterful eloquence, model heroism and Christ-like humility, and then pictured the lonely grandeur of this Paul of Tarsus, as, in the midst of philosophers and Stoics, he proclaimed "Jesus and the Resurrection."

"To an audience so different from that of old Athens, Paul's theme was still the greatest of all themes, and when unfolded again under the sky of Athens, several days before the anniversary came of that first resurrection in the world's history, it took on beauties it had never had before."

What Causes Fires.

(Harper's Weekly.)

The annual losses by fire in the United States, which have averaged as high as $100,000,000 a year at certain periods, were attributed during a single year to the following causes, the number of fires from each cause being given: Incendiarism, 1,927; defective flues, 1,309; sparks (not from locomotives), 715; matches, 636; explosions (of lamps, etc.), 430; stoves, 423; lightning, 369; spontaneous combustion, 326; prairie and forest fires, 280; lamp and lantern accidents (other than explosions), 238; locomotive sparks, 221; cigar stubs and pipes, 203; friction, 179; gas-jets, 176; engines and boilers, 150; furnaces, 135; and from firecrackers, 105.

Inspected the Hulls.

Mr. Davis, of Kingston, Inspector of Hulls, was in the city yesterday and to-day inspecting the hulls, etc., of the various craft which are in commission here. Previous to his visit, Mr. Thompson, of Kingston, had inspected the boilers and machinery.

What Was He There For ?

(Peterboro Review.)

Mr. Ross, accompanied by one of the criminal chiefs of his machine, has been in Ottawa consulting with Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and there is much curiosity as to their object. It would be easier to surmise what Mr. Ross did not seek. He was not protesting against our province being robbed of four representatives by a fraudulent census, for of that he approves. He was not denouncing the invasion of our provincial rights in the matter of franchises affecting our streets, for in that he aided. He was not insisting on our railway receiving aid, while we contribute to building railways for other provinces, for he has submitted placidly to that injustice, and has even pushed on the line to help Sir Wilfrid in his fad. We may be sure he was seeking, not the benefit of Ontario, but his retention of his usurped office.

"I'm afraid he might accept."

QUESTION OF THE HOUR

Can the Empire Be Converted Into An Economic Reality?

Can Britain Produce a Statesman of Sufficient Courage and Insight to Head An Economic Movement—Sir Charles Dilke's View—Any Expenses Incurred By Anglo-French Convention Are to Be Defrayed By Parliament.

London, May 20.—(C. A. P.)—Professor Ashley, lecturing on "Political Economy and Tariff Reform at the Compatriot's Club, said the question of the hour was whether the Empire could be converted into an economic reality. Prof. Fuchs eleven years ago wrote that a closer union between the different parts of the Empire was inevitable and for their own sake desirable. The question was whether Britain could produce a statesman of sufficient courage and insight to head an Imperial movement.

Sir Charles Dilke's View.

London, May 20.—(C. A. P.)—Sir Charles Dilke, speaking in the House of Commons, declared that members were prevented from discussing urgent public matters by blocking notices. It was a monstrous scandal that since May, 1903, when the principle was laid down at Birmingham that the Empire could only hold together through the fiscal question a most dangerous disruptive element had been introduced which could only be settled by a full debate in the House. A deep and very natural interest was taken in the question in Canada, and nobody who knew the Dominion denied that a danger had been introduced into the relations between the British Empire and the United States through that issue.

Defrayed By Parliament.

London, May 20.—(C. A. P.)—By the Anglo-French Convention Bill issued to the House of Commons it is stipulated that any sum payable by way of indemnity under the convention or for expenses incurred in carrying it into effect shall be defrayed by Parliament.

Crimean Veterans to Dine.

London, May 20.—(C. A. P.)—Empire Day will be celebrated at the Tower, when 50 Chelsea pensioners will dine with the Yeomen of the Guard who served in the Crimea war.

Fifty More Emigrants.

London, May 20.—(C.A.P.)—Fifty-four emigrants who left Canada under care of the Rev. Mr. Payne are sent under the auspices of the east end emigration fund.

Chinese Free to Courts.

London, May 20.—(C.A.P.)—The text of the Chinese Labor Convention, issued by the Government, arranges that every British colony or protectorate to which indentured Chinese emigrants may proceed shall provide for the appointment of officers to see that each emigrant shall have free access to the courts of justice.

Allans to Make Changes.

London, May 20.—The Canadian Associated Press understands that important changes are imminent in connection with the trans-Atlantic passenger traffic from Scottish ports, in anticipation of the prominent increase in Scotch emigration to Canada. The Allan Company will transfer a selection of its best steamers from Liverpool to Glasgow. One, if not two, other important companies are seriously considering entering passenger business next season. The Press also learns that ever since the Hamburg-American Line succeeded in inducing the German Government to establish control stations, the company has raised the price of passage thirty marks.

Carrying Farm Produce.

London, May 20.—The President of the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries has appointed a departmental committee to inquire as to the rates charged by railway companies in Great Britain in respect of the carriage of foreign and colonial farm, dairy and market produce from the ports of shipment or of arrival to to the principal urban centres, and to report whether there is any evidence to show that preferential treatment is accorded to such produce, and if so what further steps should be taken, either by legislation or otherwise, to secure the better enforcement of the law in the matter. The Earl of Jersey is chairman.

Chinks on Way to Mines.

New York, May 20.—A trainload of Chinese arrived from Canada yesterday on their way to the mines in South Africa. Their bundles tied together in every imaginable form, were piled in big heaps at the station and attracted a great deal of attention. The Chinese were of all sizes and ages, the youngest being about 17. All wore straw hats. The man in charge said they had come from various parts of Canada.

Loss of $12,000.

St. Jacobs, May 20.—The Conestogo Flour Mills, together with warehouse, owned by Menno Snider, were totally destroyed by fire at 5 o'clock yesterday morning; also about 3,000 bushels of wheat and between one and two hundred barrels flour. The loss is about $12,000; insurance $8,000.

Marratt Is Insane.

Calgary, May 20.—Frank Marratt, the young Frenchman, who killed his brother at Canmore last Wednesday, was acquitted on a plea of insanity. Medical evidence was given for the defence, and was unanimous. The jury was out ten minutes. Marratt will be committed to an insane asylum.

AMENDMENTS REFUSED

A Procession of Opposition Ideas Voted Down.

Moved on the Third Reading of the Grand Trunk Pacific Transcontinental Railway Bill—House Rises Until Next Wednesday, and Sir Wilfrid Laurier Promises Budget on the Week Following Passage of Railway Bill.

Ottawa, May 20.—Replying to Mr. Thompson of Haldimand, the Minister of Finance stated that the Dominion Government accepts the guaranteed bonds of the American Security Co. of New York, and the United States Fidelity and Guarantee Co. of Baltimore as security boards for public offices. There are five Canadian and British guarantee companies licensed to transact business in Canada, the Guarantee Co. of North America, Dominion of Canada Guarantee and Accident Insurance Co., London, Guarantee and Accident Co., Limited; Employers' Liability Assurance Corporation, Limited, and Railway Passenger Assurance Co. The United States Act does not specifically exclude foreign companies, but the effect is the same. After reasonable notice the Canadian Government will confine its guarantee business to British and Canadian companies.

Move the Third Reading.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier moved the third reading of the bill to amend the National Transcontinental Railway.

Mr. Monk moved an amendment providing that the line should be run north of Lake Temiskaming as near as possible to the Village of Bais-des Peres, and thence to Quebec, crossing the Laurentian Mountains and the Valleys of the Gatineau, Lievre, Mattawan, and St. Maurice Rivers to Quebec.

The amendment was defeated on a vote of 91 to 38.

Mr. Henderson of Halton moved the second amendment, which provides that any agreements between the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Co. and the Grand Trunk Railway Co. in regard to the latters guarantee of Grand Trunk Pacific bonds shall be subject to the approval of the Governor-in-Council.

This amendment was also voted down.

Mr. Rufus Pope moved an amendment providing that as often as a share of the Grand Trunk Pacific stock is handed over to the Grand Trunk Co. in return for the latter's guarantee three shares shall be handed to the Government.

The amendment was negatived.

Mr. George Taylor moved an amendment declaring that the rolling stock acquired by the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway as first equipment shall be so acquired that an absolute interest shall rest on the company free from any prior charges.

This amendment was lost on the same division.

An amendment, moved by Dr. Sproule provided that in case, the Government believed that the earnings derived from the interchange of traffic between the eastern and western division of the Transcontinental Railway were not properly proportioned, ushc proportionment should be determined by arbitration by the head of railway commissioners.

Mr. Fitzpatrick stated that it would be the intention of the Government to safeguard the point raised by Dr. Sproule by amending the Railway Act.

The amendment was declared lost.

An amendment, moved by Mr. Lavell of Leeds, that the Government shall have the option of taking over any branch lines running to the eastern division which it may choose, in the event of the Government deciding to operate the eastern division, was also voted down.

The Interest.

Mr. Blain moved that, notwithstanding anything in the bill or the agreement, the amount of interest payable by the Government without recourse, for the G.T.P., should not be increased, but remain as provided in the agreement, and as if clauses one, four and five of the agreement were not contained therein.

This amendment, too, was declared lost on the same division.

An amendment by Mr. Ingram that, in the event of the Government undertaking the operation of the eastern division at the end of fifty years, the Government shall have haulage rights and running powers over the G.T.P.'s western division, was held over, at the request of the Minister of Justice, until next week.

Mr. Northrup moved to amend the bill by providing that complaints regarding discrimination against Canadian ports shall be investigated by the Railway Commission and reported upon to Parliament.

The amendment was rejected.

Question of Rental.

Mr. Richardson of South Grey offered an amendment, obliging the Grand Trunk Pacific to pay as rental for the eastern division the rate of interest paid by the Government upon the cost of construction. This amendment was also rejected.

Mr. Clancy moved an amendment to oblige the Grand Trunk Pacific to pay 3 per cent. of the cost, as rental for the portion of the road between Winnipeg and North Bay Junction, in the event of that section being constructed before the completion of the whole of the eastern division, the commissioners to allow the G.T.P. compensation for its use of that section for construction purposes, and retaining the right to make an arrangement for operation by the G.T.P.

The amendment was voted down.

Mr. Alcorn offered an amendment binding the G.T. as well as the G.T.P. to abide by the agreement in regard to giving the preference to Canadian routes and Canadian ports.

Mr. Fitzpatrick asked the House to reject the amendment, which was done.

Mr. Clare moved the adjournment of the debate. This was agreed to.

At the suggestion of Mr. Borden, the time for receiving petitions for private bills was extended to Friday, May 27.

Mr. Borden asked when the budget might be expected. The Prime Minister replied that, as it was understood that the National Transcontinental Railway Bill would be finished next Thursday, the budget would be brought down the following week.

The House then adjourned until next Wednesday.

Domville Gets An Enquiry.

Ottawa, May 20.—Senator Domville's motion for a committee to investigate the affairs of the Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association was the subject of a keen and at times bitter discussion in the Upper House yesterday.

After a long discussion Senator Gibson's amendment, referring Senator Kerr's bill to the Banking and Commerce Committee, was defeated on a vote of 16 to 15.

Senator Domville's motion, that the affairs of the company be investigated by a special committee was then carried on a vote of 16 to 13.

SULTAN MUST PAY RANSOM.

Subjects of Great Britain and U.S. Captured By Bandit.

Tangier, Morocco, May 20.—An American citizen named Perdicaris and his step-son, a British subject, were carried off by the well-known bandit Raisuli and his followers last night, and will doubtless be held for a very heavy ransom. The captives were staying at Perdicaris' summer residence, only three miles from Tangier, when the bandits attacked and captured them.

Must Pay Ransom.

Washington, May 20.—U. S. Consul Gummere and the British minister have informed the Sultan's deputy to comply with all requests the brigands make in the kidnapping of Perdicaris, in order to obtain the release of the captives.

POUNDING ON ROCKS.

High Seas Sweeping Over Hibernian and Cattle Have Perished.

St. John's, Nfld., May 20.—The Allan Line steamer Hibernian, which went ashore at midnight, May 17, during a dense fog at Stormy Point, a shoal near Cod Roy, 30 miles north of Cape Ray, at the entrance to the Gulf of St. Lawrence, was pounding heavily on the rocks yesterday. There was a fierce southerly gale, and the high seas were sweeping over the vessel, making salvage operations impossible.

The steamer Eagle left here yesterday morning for the purpose of attempting to save the cattle, but it is feared that most of these have perished owing to the adverse weather.

Taxing Wealth at the Cape.

Cape Town, May 20.—The budget submitted by Mr. Walton, the Cape Treasurer, to the House of Assembly proposes:

1. Excise duty of 6s. per gallon on brandy, producing £350,000.
2. Duty of 3d. per gallon on beer, producing £75,000.
3. Income tax of 6d. in the pound from £500 to £2,000, and of 1s. in the pound above £2,000 except on the first £5000. This would produce £275,000—of which De Beers would have to pay £145,000.

The Treasurer estimated that there would be a surplus of £155,000 at the end of the year.

Relations Cut Off.

Paris, May 20.—The Council of Ministers assembled in extraordinary session yesterday to consider the action to be taken relative to the Pope's protest against President Loubet's visit to Rome, decided upon the recall of M. Nissard, Ambassador of France, to the Vatican, if the authenticity of the protest forwarded to the foreign powers was established. This practically assures the Ambassador's recall. The effect of the Ambassador's recall is to interrupt diplomatic relations between France and the Vatican.

Judge Used Fire Escape.

Ottawa, May 20.—An alarm of fire in the Russell House yesterday morning caused about 200 guests to rush downstairs and out into the street. The fire originated in the bake-room, but from what cause is unknown. Part of the ladies' dining-room, as well as the basement, was destroyed. Total damage, about $3,500. A number of guests descended from their rooms by the fire escape, including Judge Britton of Toronto.

Boy's Body Found.

Strathroy, May 20.—The mystery surrounding the strange disappearance of the 5-year-old son of Malcolm McIntyre of Napier on March 30, was solved yesterday at noon, when the body was recovered by a party of searchers. He had apparently been playing on the ice on the pond, and, it is supposed, ventured in a weak spot and was carried under the ice.

Little Girl Drowned.

Kemptville, May 20.—The little daughter of Alexander Hyndman of Mountain township, near Kemptville, was drowned in their well a few days ago. There was a loose board in the well platform to permit of hanging a milk can in the water and the little one slipped through.

Little Boy Drowned.

Hamilton, May 20.—Osborne Mooney, a 4-year-old son of Patrick Mooney, 351 North McNab street, a cigarmaker employed by the Hilda Cigar Company, fell into the bay near the foot of James street yesterday afternoon and was drowned.

First Shipment of Chinese.

Tientsin, May 30.—William Forbes & Co. will, on June 8, send the first shipment of Chinese emigrants from North China to the Transvaal.

A SEA SONG.

A wet sheet and a flowing sea,
And wind that follows fast,
And fills the white and rustling sail,
And bends the gallant mast;
And bends the gallant mast, my boys,
While like the eagle free,
Away the good ship flies, and leaves
Old England on the lee.

Oh, for a soft and gentle wind!
I heard a fair one cry;
But give to me the roaring breeze
And white waves heaving high;
And white waves heaving high, my boys,
The good ship tight and free;
The world of waters is our home,
And merry men are we.

There's tempest in yon horned moon,
And lightning in yon cloud!
And hark the music, mariners!
The wind is piping loud;
The wind is piping loud, my boys,
The lightning flashing free—
While the hollow oak our palace is,
Our heritage the sea.

THE HASTINGS COACH.

Ghostly Legend Attached to the House of the Earl of Loudon.

Mr. T. P. O'Connor tells the following in his Mainly About People: To many prominent Scottish families there is, as is well known, attached some ghostly legend or other, generally taking the form of weird music or a similar manifestation, which is believed to forewarn death of some member of the house. Of such a nature is the famous "Hasting coach," which is said to be heard (although not seen) driving to the door, when the death is imminent of any member of the ancient family of which the Earl of Loudon and Lord Grey de Ruthyn are now the heads. Lady Victoria Kirwan, mother of the lady who has for some years past devoted herself to further the material and moral welfare of the working shop girls of the West End, had good reason, she used to tell her intimate friends, for believing in the truth of this legend. Her brother was the fourth and last Marquis of Hastings, who died in 1868, in his twenty-seventh year, after a career on the turf alike brief, brilliant and disastrous.

Lady Victoria's story was that she was dining in her brother's company, (I think in his own house) in the autumn of 1868, soon after the Newmarket October meeting, when Lord Hastings was seen on a race course for the last time. In the middle of dinner she heard the grinding of carriage wheels on the gravel outside, and immediately afterwards a loud ring at the door bell. The servants apparently heard nothing, but the young Marquis instantly rose from the table, and said he would go himself and see who had arrived. A few moments later he returned to the dining-room with a white face and a strange smile, and, looking around on the assembled company, offered to wager a large sum that there would be a funeral from the house within a month. Three weeks later he himself was lying dead in an upper chamber. The ghostly warning had come to no one in the room except his sister and himself—for it is heard only by those of the Hastings blood.

An English School Fete.

There is probably no old English custom so rich in interesting memories as the pancake-tossing ceremony of which the hall of Westminster School was recently the scene. The custom, which is known to the boys by the unaesthetic name of "Grease," has an unbroken history which takes us back to the days of Queen Bess, when as many as 300 boys would scramble in one tumultuous heap for the possession of a solitary pancake. Heneage Finch, first Earl of Nottingham, groveled with the rest long years before he subsided into the no less coveted Woolsack. John Dryden, the parson's boy from Northamptonshire, struggled on the floor with young Christopher Wren; and from the crowd of pancake-snatchers in 1743 you might have picked out William Cowper, Warren Hastings and Charles Churchill, all very small boys, to whom the pancake loomed much larger than the laurels they later won. And among the scrambling crowds of other years were John Locke, Charles Longley (destined to be Primate of all England), Edward Gibbon, Lord Raglan and many another boy who was to win much greater trophies in the big world outside the school walls.

Then think of the stories those walls could tell had they but tongues. Edward the Confessor watched the building of the arches on which the "school" rests; King John was signing Magna Charta when the very walls which re-echoed the boys' shouts this morning began to rise on the site of the dormitory in which generations of Benedictine monks had slumbered. Boys were learning their lessons in the same hall years before Oliver Cromwell was born, and for three centuries all the classes of Westminster School were held where the pancake was tossed to-day.—Westminster Gazette.

When Lord Minto Was Press

"One of the Crowd," writing to The New York Sun, upon the contradictions in the news from the seat of war, says: "I remember once reading in a magazine article, written, I believe, by the present Governor-General of Canada, of a correspondent in the last Afghan war, who submitted to the press censor with the British army a letter intended for transmission to his paper, in which a picturesque description of Afghan scenery was given, with crocodiles in the rivers, and palm trees along their banks. The censor sent for the writer, and pointed out to him the absurdity of putting crocodiles into the icy waters of the rivers and palm trees where none could flourish, but the correspondent insisted that the British public would be satisfied with nothing less; and so, as there were no military secrets to be extracted from the saurians and palm trees, the letter went forward."

It takes about twenty-five days to make a bank note and get it fully seasoned.

A $300,000 Fire.

Montreal, May 21.—The seven storey carriage factory of B. Ledeux & Co., perhaps the largest in Canada, on the north side of Osborn street, near the C. P. R. depot, was completely destroyed by fire yesterday afternoon; and Mr. Ledeux says the loss will be $300,000, half of which is covered by insurance.

Bell Beaten in Peterboro.

Peterboro, May 21.—At a special meeting of the Town Council here last evening, the Canadian Machine Telephone Company were granted a ten years' franchise of the streets of the town, on which to erect poles and string wires for the operation of a system of machine telephones.

Town Takes Stock.

Bracebridge, May 21.—The bylaw regarding the Hess Furniture Company was carried by a large majority here yesterday, only seventeen votes being polled against it. The principal item of the bylaw was that the town should take $15,000 in preferred stock in lieu of their mortgage on the property of the company, on the company complying with some conditions to make this safe. The change was made owing to the injury to the company by a lack of borrowing power.

Wife Beaters Sentenced.

JAPS ARE BUSY LAYING PLANS TO TAKE PORT ARTHUR BY STORM.

Insecurity of Sea Power Reason For New Japanese Plan.

Storming of the Fortress Will Inevitably Cost Many Lives, But the Japs Think it is the Best Thing to Do—Russians Report a Jap Defeat—Kuroki Repulsed, With Big Loss' Retreats to Fengwangcheng.

Chicago, May 21.—A special to The Daily News says:

"Port Arthur is to be taken by storm the moment proper preparations have been completed. Siege guns have yet to be placed in position, and the land forces appointed for the assault have to be strengthened. The unexpected loss of two fine vessels has emphasized the insecurity of sea power and the authorities feel that no chances must be taken that would encourage Russia to send out the Baltic fleet counting on finding a harbor of refuge in Port Arthur.

"It is realized that the storming of the fortress will inevitably cost many lives, but it is said that the waters where the Japanese ships are forced to manoeuvre are becoming so dangerous because of floating mines that heroic measures are imperative. Under these circumstances it is thought that life will be economized by storming the stronghold and eliminating it and the adjacent waters from the area of actual conflict.

Another Jap Reverse.

St. Petersburg, May 21.—The following despatch from Gen. Kuropatkin to the Emperor, dated at Liaoyang, May 19, has been received here:

"A detachment of Cossacks engaged a detachment of the Japanese advance guard on May 18 north of Fengwangcheng, in a mountainous district. The fight began in the morning and lasted until 2.30 o'clock in the afternoon.

"The Japanese were successively dislodged from four positions, extending over fifteen miles.

Japs Retreated 12 Miles.

St. Petersburg, May 21.—An official report has been received to the effect that Gen. Rennenkempff's Cossacks fell on the Japanese column advancing on Fengwangcheng on Wednesday, and that the Japanese were compelled to retreat for a distance of twelve miles.

The Russians have evacuated Kaipin (or Kaichou) about thirty-five miles south of Newchwang without a fight.

JAP AND RUSSIAN MET.

Latter Were Repulsed in Thirty Minutes —Losses on Both Sides.

Tokio, May 21.—The following official statement was issued here yesterday:

"A section of infantry of the Liaotung forces went in the direction of Shanchuasn to reconnoitre and met two sections of Russian infantry. The Russians were repulsed in thirty minutes. Our casualties were one officer and four men killed and one officer and eight men wounded. The Russian casualties were one officer and forty to fifty men killed. The landing of Japanese troops at Takushan began yesterday.

Landed Blue Jackets.

"Admiral Hosoya, commanding the third squadron, reports that with the third squadron, consisting of the Fuso, Hei Yen, Tsukushi, Sai Yen and other vessels, he protected the landing of troops at an unnamed place, probably Takushan, yesterday, bombarded the coast and landed a party of bluejackets, who occupied a point of land and raised the Japanese flag at 8 o'clock in the morning. The landing of troops immediately commenced, and was accomplished very quickly."

Russians Lost 300.

London, May 21.—The Japanese Legation here gave out yesterday the following despatch, received from Tokio:

"The enemy's forces participating in the fight near Kinchou (Liaotung Peninsula), May 16, consisted of the Fifth, Fourteenth and Sixteenth Sharpshooters (infantry), with eight quick-firing guns. They left on the field thirty dead officers and men. According to the prisoners, the enemy's casualties were over three hundred."

Japs Head For Mukden.

Liaoyang, May 21.—Forty-five battalions of Japanese troops have been landed on the Liaotung Peninsula. In order to embarrass their advance the Russians have destroyed the railroad bridges.

The Japanese have retired to Fengwangcheng, though divisions are moving northward, their apparent destination being Mukden.

The excitement among the Chinese has been increasing during the last few days. The Chinese bandits are causing considerable trouble and are being energetically hunted by Cossacks.

The Eastern Chinese Railroad has increased its carrying capacity, and for some days past troops have been arriving quickly and in splendid condition.

WAR BULLETINS.

Report That Gen. Kuroki Has Been Repulsed With Great Loss.

St. Petersburg, May 21.—A report has been received here," saying that Gen. Kuroki has been repulsed with great loss.

Tientsin, May 21.—It is announced from authentic Russian sources that the Japanese army from the Yalu yesterday sustained a severe defeat and was driven back to Fengwangcheng.

Che Foo, May 21.—Heavy firing was heard in the direction of Port Arthur early yesterday morning. Chinese arriving from Dalny say that the Russians regained control of the railway but lost it again.

Chicago, May 21.—A special to The Daily News from Che Foo says: "At 10.30 yesterday morning a tremendous explosion was heard in the direction of Port Arthur. It was impossible to ascertain the cause."

London, May 21.—The Japanese legation yesterday received the following official despatch from Tokio: "A portion of one army commenced landing at Takushan, west of the mouth of the Yalu River, yesterday."

Newchwang, May 21.—The reports of the Japanese retreat to Fengwangcheng are officially confirmed. The Japanese, numbering 20,000 men, came upon 32,000 Russians in a strong position on Monday, sixty miles west of Fengwangcheng. It being unwise to rising battle, the Japanese retreated in good order and with great rapidity.

Vladivostock, May 21.—Japanese warships appear from time to time in Peter the Great Bay, but they do not approach Vladivostock.

St. Petersburg, May 21.—The report that Russia may shortly proclaim all the ports of the Siberian Coast, including Vladivostock, to be free, thus permitting unrestricted commerce, is confirmed.

THE JAP DROWNED.

List of Those Drowned By Sinking of the Yoshino.

Tokio, May 21.—The loss of life incurred by the sinking of the cruiser Yoshino included Captain Sayeki, Commander Hirowateri, three first lieutenants, five second lieutenants, five midshipmen, a paymaster, surgeon, three engineers' cadets and eight boatswain mates. Of the crew the number of those lost is unknown.

Those who went down with the battleship Hatsuse when she foundered were Commander Tsukamoto, Commander Viscount Nire, Commander Arimori, five second lieutenants, five sub-engineers, two surgeons, six midshipmen, four cadet engineers and ten non-commissioned officers.

It is not known yet in this case how many of the men perished. The Hatsuse was surely sunk by coming in contact with a submerged mine and not by the attack of a submarine boat.

The report that the battleship Shikishima was damaged and the battleship Fuji sunk is denied here.

Port Arthur Free.

St. Petersburg, May 21.—Naval officers say that the channel to Port Arthur is free, despite the Japanese claims to the contrary, and that the Russian fleet may go out again within a fortnight. Second thoughts have caused the admiralty officials to discredit the report that the Japanese battleship Shikishima and Fuji have been destroyed.

Ship Was Destroyed.

Tokio, May 21.—A trustworthy report has been received at Imperial Headquarters that the Russian cruiser Bogatyr ran ashore outside Vladivostock in a heavy fog and was destroyed. This is the first ship of the Vladivostock squadron to be destroyed.

The report of the grounding of the cruiser Bogatyr came Thursday night from the St. Petersburg correspondent of The Echo de Paris, and was announced by the Russian admiralty yesterday.

A cable from Vladivostock yesterday made no allusion to the Bogatyr and reported all quiet there.

FIREMAN SHOOTS HIMSELF.

Was in Poor Health When He Committed the Rash Act.

Toronto, May 21.—Charles S. Toplis, 25 Maple Grove avenue, a fireman attached to hose 15, at the Cowan avenue station, committed suicide by shooting himself in the temple late yesterday afternoon. He went on duty yesterday morning as usual and remained until noon. Just before leaving, he told one of his comrades that he was not feeling well and intended going to the drug store to procure some medicine. Shortly afterwards he was seen on an east-bound car. It is supposed that he came down-town and purchased the revolver, as he was not known to have previously had one in his possession.

About 6.15 p.m. his daughter came to the fire station enquiring for him. Driver Joseph Spence accompanied her home and found the dead body in a shed in the rear of the house. It is supposed that he fired the fatal shot while seated on an old trunk.

Deceased has been in poor health for some time. He was injured two years ago, being thrown from the hose wagon while going to the McIntosh fire, and again similarly last winter while on his way to the Menzie & Turner fire. Yesterday morning while on duty he was seized with a severe attack of vomiting.

Wireless Stations in the Gulf.

Montreal, May 21.—The Canadian Marconi Company has signed a contract to build seven stations in the Gulf of St. Lawrence and on the Atlantic seaboard. The first stations to be constructed are four in number, and are to be located as follows: Fame Point, Heath Point, Point Armour, Belle Isle. The first is on the Gaspe Coast, Heath Point in on Anticosti Island. Point Armour is on the Labrador Coast, and the Belle Isle station will be located on Belle Isle Island.

Freight Sheds [illegible].

St. Catharines, May 21.—Fire of supposed incendiary origin, at one o'clock yesterday morning, completely destroyed the freight sheds and contents at the station of the Welland division of the Grand Trunk railway on Geneva street. The loss will probably be $50,000.

British Engineers' Triumph.

London, May 21.—The selection by the Egyptain Government of the firm of Sir William Arrol and Company, for the construction of three bridges across the Nile near Cairo, at a cost of about £200,000, is a triump for British engineering.

The oven is a perfect baker and roaster, evenly and quickly heated.

TRICKS OF THE BRAIN.

Experiences Which Physiological Theories Fail to Explain.

An uncle of mine with whom I was walking in a part of Yorkshire near Skipton, where neither of us had ever been before, stopped suddenly to say, "When we turn that corner you will see on the right an Elizabethan house partly surrounded by trees, with a lake or large pond showing through them, and in the middle of the water a little artificial island."

When we turned the corner we saw precisely what he had described, and yet he had never seen or heard or read of the place. The dual brain theory fails here, since neither lobe of the brain had received an impression of the place before we turned the corner.

Jean Jacques Rousseau in his "Confessions" says he foresaw in a reverie while taking a solitary walk all the incidents of the happiest day of his life as they occurred eight years later:

"I saw myself, as in an ecstasy, transported into that happy time and occasion, where my heart, possessing all the happiness possible, enjoyed it with inexpressible raptures, without thinking of anything sensual. I do not remember being ever thrown into the future with more force or an illusion so complete as that which I then experienced. What struck me most in the recollection of that reverie, now that it has been realized, is to have found objects so exactly as I had pictured them. If ever the dream of a man awake had the air of a prophetic vision that was assuredly such."

It is, I think, noteworthy that in all clairvoyant cases of this kind the body is through overwork or ill health or fasting or congenitally in the subdued state to which the Indian mystic and miracle monger reduces his own by maceration. It was so with Scott and Rousseau, and with William Hone when he had the following experience recorded in his memoir. When worn

And from being a pronounced materialist he became a believer in spirits, and, indeed, eventually a profoundly religious soul.—T. P.'s London Weekly.

Disraeli and Bismarck.

At a dinner given in London in 1861 by Baron Brunnow to the Grand Duke of Saxe-Weimar Herr von Bismarck, who was one of the guests, had a long conversation with Mr. Disraeli, then leader of the opposition. He then said that he should shortly be obliged to undertake the direction of the Prussian government; that his first duty would be to reorganize the army; that he would then take the first best pretext to declare war against Austria, to dissolve the Germanic diet, to overpower the middle and smaller states and to give a national unity to Germany under the leadership of Prussia.

"I am come here," he said, "to say this to the queen's ministers." Mr. Disraeli's remark on this extraordinary programme, which was later literally fulfilled, was: "Take care of that man. He means what he says."—"Reminiscences of Lord Augustus Loftus."

The Names of Tea.

We talk glibly about Pekoe, Bohea, etc., but few people have any idea of what these names signify.

"Pekoe" in the dialect of Canton means "white hair," for the tea which bears this name is made from the youngest of leaves, so young that the white down is still on them.

"Soochong" in the same dialect is a quite unpoetic name; it merely signifies "small kind."

"Flourishing spring" is the meaning of "Hyson."

"Congo" signifies "labor." Much trouble and toil are expended in its preparation at Amoy, and these are commemorated in its name.

"Bohea" is called after a range of hills.

THE WAR CORRESPONDENTS.

Everybody, these days, is interested in the war, and they will, no doubt, be interested in the men who supply the war news which comes to us. The enormous cost entailed in securing the said news, and the roundabout way it has to come to us in Canada, has already been mentioned in this paper. Now a few words as to the personnel of the men who send it. Mr. I. N. Ford, a writer of repute, in fact, one of the best-known journalists in the world, says that the London press has sent some of its most experienced men to Japan and Manchuria, including many of the veterans of the Nile and South African campaign. Bennett Burleigh, the war eagle of the Daily Telegraph, was the first man in the field, for he insisted many months ago that hostilities were inevitable, and he took advantage of his early arrival to explore the field in advance and to make a special study of the defences of Port Arthur and Vladivostok. He is the most professional among the English war correspondents, and writes with precision and thorough knowledge for military experts, but while he is a most energetic news gatherer, he has a labored and clumsy style, and is not a good descriptive writer. He is not popular among his colleagues since he is the journalist first and the friend incidentally. He does not like competition, and insists upon having pre-eminence by virtue of his protracted experience, military knowledge and unrivalled reputation. The Standard hesitated for a long time before sending representatives to the Far East, but succeeded in having them on the ground soon after the declaration of war. William Maxwell was in the Soudan campaign and at Ladysmith, and apart from his thoroughness and conscientiousness, he is an excellent descriptive writer, whose mail letters are invariably well informed but serious rather than vivacious. He has taken his handsome and charming American wife with him to Japan, and has as an associate, the author of one of the best among the recent books about that country. C. L. Brownell went from America to Tokio, learned the language while in the service of the university, and obtained by protracted residence an intimate acquaintance with the life and customs of the people. Mr. Brownell loves Japan, and since his return to England has been eager to return to Tokio, and there was no happier man in London than he when he suddenly received his marching orders. Three correspondents who were wounded in South Africa have returned to work in the field. These are Mr. Knight, of the Morning Post, a vivacious writer and indefatigable worker, George Lynch, of the Daily Chronicle, with a talent for eccentric adventure, and a most companionable man, and Mr. Hands, of the Daily Mail, a versatile essayist, with a touch of humor, who has halted temporarily at St. Petersburg, but will probably go on to Manchuria. Mr. London, who is one of the chief workers of the Daily Express, is cultivating the expressionist style introduced by the lamented Steevens and is one of the most promising representatives of the halfpenny journalism. Lionel James, who wrote some of the most dramatic descriptions of operations in South Africa, is also at the front presumably for the Times. Mr. Gwynne, a veteran in the employ of Reuter, and an accomplished and resourceful news gatherer is not in Japan and the service has been managed mainly from Pekin. Melton Pryor is the natural leader of a large corps in the employ of the weekly illustrated press. London has never been so well illustrated by trained observers and writers in a foreign war as in the present campaign, but the censorship has been applied so vigorously that there is only a meagre return for the money expended in the service. Possibly there may be an improvement in news facilities, now that the Japanese War Office has issued permits for work at the front, but the despatches up to this time have been fragmentary and contradictory.

THE WOOLLEN DUTIES.

(Montreal Star.)

Canada, with a population of about 5,500,000, and a woollen duty of 23 1-3 per cent. under the preference, imports yearly woollen goods to the amount of $13,700,000, or $2.49 per capita. The United States, with a population of 80,000,000, and a woollen duty of 90 per cent. imports yearly, woollen goods valued at $19,500,000, or 25 cents per capita. The argument is all contained in those figures.

That high art in the form of circus posters was never so plentiful in this city as at present.

That Belleville's sporting and athletic young men have got the resting habit very bad.

That some of the holes in the Front St. crossings need filling up as badly as the rails need taking up.

That there will be considerable boulevarding to be done on Coleman street when the new sidewalks are finished.

That the blossom time is liable to be here before the Zwick's island water scheme reaches completion.

That it is a shame to see so much good Belleville money going out of town next Tuesday because there is "nothing doing" at home.

That Kuropatkin thank his lucky stars the 15th are going to Kingston next Tuesday instead of to help the Japs in Manchuria.

That the Police Magistrate, when he goes fishing on Victoria Day, will give many a poor sardine a suspended sentence.

That, with so many floating mines about, Mr. O'Flynn's battleship should be guarded as carefully as Ross's majority.

THE BOY OF TODAY.

One View of Him—A New Ideal of Training Suggested.

It is now generally agreed that man is expected to work out his own life problem, the age of miracles and special dispensations being long past. Therefore when the boy, from the highest social grade to the lowest, is found to be the moral inferior of the girl of his own age and station even the least thoughtful will understand that there must be grave fault in training to bring about such a result. That the case may not seem to be overstated, let representative facts be cited. For example, educators in the public schools are at the moment demanding the return of corporal punishment as a disciplinary measure for boys. Asked, "If the law were passed would it not have to apply also to girls?" it was answered that although it would the question was of no moment, as when a similar law was operative a few years ago not a girl had made herself eligible for rod punishment. The agitation is wholly in behalf of boys. Take another example: In Harvard university this term the dean of the Lawrence Scientific school, Professor Shaler, appeared before the 600 students in the geology class and delivered a scathing address on their conduct toward a substitute professor. This had consisted in hurling copper cents, chalk, books and old shoes. At a later lecture the missiles included two eggs. The justly indignant dean stated that during most of the thirty years he had been instructor his audiences had been made up of gentlemen, but that for the last few years classes of loafers had been coming into the university.

Now, to one who disbelieves, as all intelligent persons must, in inherent moral superiority of girls and women there must be some reason for this universal barbarism of the boy, for that is what ails him. The reason is not far to seek, and it is all epitomized in that much quoted and much esteemed maxim, "Boys will be boys." From the time, in his baby days, when he is given a drum or a trumpet or some other ear splitting, noise producing article and encouraged to disregard the rights of others in the matter of reasonable quiet until he passes from parental control he is allowed a license and tolerated in lines of conduct which breed in him a profound contempt for the rights of any whom he may bully or override. At the bottom of all boyish wrongdoing is that indifference to the rights of others. The remedy lies wholly with parents and educators.

Let us hope the time is not far distant when the ideal for boys will be changed from "boys will be boys" (with all the license therein implied) to high chivalry in all things.—Vogue.

TURTLE FLESH.

The Handsomest of the Animals Gives the Worst Meat.

No one really knows how large a turtle may grow, but certainly there does not appear to be much if any exaggeration attached to the statements of Pliny and Strabo, who, describing the chelonophagi of the Red sea, say that they utilized the shells of the turtles they had eaten as roofs to their huts and boats for their feeble voyages.

Strange to say, the handsomest turtle, the hawk's bill variety (Chelone imbricata), furnishes the worst flesh, being so strongly flavored with musk as to be almost uneatable. This peculiarity would seem to point to a diet of squid since these mollusca are exceedingly musky. But it may not be out of place to remark here that turtle flesh, even of the best sorts, is not nice. As Sam Weller's pieman hoarsely whispered, "It's the seasoning as does it." A diet of turtle steaks or of hashed turtle or of turtle soup, au naturel, would soon sicken any one but a savage. For sixpence or its equivalent in most of the West India island towns one can get a heaped plate of turtle steak with bread or jams or sweet potatoes ad lib. But I never knew even a hungry sailor who wanted more than one meal a week of it, for all its cheapness. The fact is that in the cult of turtle soup we are following (a long way off, it is true) the example set by the Chinese, who love gelatinous soups and pay fabulous prices for the nests of the sea swallows, the holothuria, or sea slug, and the sharks' fins because of their gelatinous qualities.—Frank T. Bullen in Leslie's.

Queer Drunken Manias.

An English sheriff who died some years since kept a record of the curious cases of drunkenness that came under his observation. Several habitual cases had developed odd manias. One woman who had been arrested 107 times for drunkenness in twenty-eight years, had a mania for breaking windows when she was intoxicated. An old soldier, suffering from a wound in the head, always stole Bibles when he was tipsy. Another man stole nothing but spades, while one woman's fancy ran to shawls and another's to shoes. A man named Grubb was imprisoned seven times for stealing tubs, although there was nothing in his line of life to make tubs particularly desirable to him.

Industrial Economy.

A locomotive engineer on an eastern railroad said one day to his two firemen, "Suppose you fellows work as if you, and not the company, were paying the coal bills." During six months, merely by careful firing, the men caused a saving in coal, over the average consumption of the engine, equal to almost four times the amount of wages paid the men for that period. The engine was the same; the men worked differently.

He Had a Way With Him.

Jane Seymour was boasting to Anne Boleyn.

"Henry has just asked me for my hand," she remarked.

"That's nothing," retorted the queen, "he has just asked me for my head."

Subsequent events showed both ladies granted the request.

His Sense of Feeling.

Dr. Agnew's Ointment will relieve and cure any skin disease just as surely as it cured this soldier's Erysipelas—the first application kills the "sting."

A druggist recommended Dr. Agnew's Ointment as the quickest relief and cure. He bought a box and found it as good as it promised, and a few applications, to use his own words, "put out the fire and less than a box entirely cured me." Price 35 cts.

Some persons have periodical attacks of Canadian cholera, dysentery or diarrhoea and have to use great precautions to avoid the disease. Change of water, cooking and green fruit is sure to bring on the attacks. To such persons we would recommend Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial as being the best medicine in the market for all summer complaints. If a few drops is taken in water when the symptoms are noticed no further trouble will be experienced.

Cut the trunk, the branches fall of themselves.

For coughs, colds, bronchitis and all lung and throat troubles there is no preparation of medicine can compare with Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It never fails to afford prompt and permanent relief. It removes all soreness and heals the diseased parts. It immediately soothes the most troublesome coughs, and by promoting expectoration, removes the mucous which stops up the air tubes which causes difficulty in breathing, thereby gives relief to that depressing tightness experienced in the chest. Public speakers and singers will find Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup of inestimable value, as it speedily and effectually allays all irritation and huskiness in the throat and bronchial tubes and gives power to the vocal cords, rendering the voice clear and sonorous. If parents wish to save the lives of their children and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness, give the Syrup according to directions.

To Those of Sedentary Occupation—Men who follow sedentary occupations, which deprive them of fresh air and exercise, are more prone to disorders of the liver and kidneys than those who lead active, outdoor lives. The former will find in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills a restorative without question the most efficacious on the market. They are easily procurable, easily taken, act expeditiously, and they are surprisingly cheap considering their excellence.

A Sure Cure for Headaches.—Billious headaches, to which women are more subject than men, become so acute in some subjects that they are utterly prostrated. The stomach refuses food, and there is a constant and distressing effort to free the stomach from bile which has become unduly secreted there. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are a speedy alterative, and in neutralizing the effects of the intruding bile relieve the pressure on the nerves, which cause the headache. Try them.

UNTOLD MISERY — WHAT A WELL-KNOWN COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER SUFFERED, AND HOW HE WAS CURED.—Gentlemen, about five years ago I began to be troubled with Dyspepsia, and for three years suffered untold misery from this terrible complaint. I was at that time travelling for Messrs. Walter Woods & Co., Hamilton, and was treated by some of the best physicians in the country, but to no purpose. I continued to grow worse, one day I was induced to try a bottle of Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, and to my great surprise and joy, I soon began to improve. I continued using this medisine and when the third bottle was finished I found I was entirely cured, and as a year has elapsed since then. I feel confident that the cure is complete and permanent. To all afflicted with this distressing complaint I heartily recommend Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, believing that the persistent use of it will cure any case of Dyspepsia. (Signed)

The Fraternal Societies of Belleville

SHORT SKETCHES OF THEIR HISTORY AND PRESENT STANDING.

THE ODDFELLOWS.

Oddfellowship in Belleville dates back to June 17, 1843, when a lodge was instituted bearing the grand name of "Victoria," which had the distinction of being the first Oddfellows' lodge formed in Ontario—or Canada West, as it was then called. The Brethren of the Three Links were not always so enthusiastic as they are nowadays, and Victoria lodge, No. 6, died an inglorious death in July, 1853. An excellent resume of the early days of Oddfellowship is contained in "The History of Oddfellowship in Canada Under the Old Regime," which was prepared and published by order of the R. W. Grand Lodge of Ontario in 1879. From the volume in question we are privileged to make the following extracts relating to the early history of the order in this district:

In the summer of the year 1843 the Order was established in the Province of Canada West, by Mr. Edmund Murney, of Belleville. This gentleman was initiated in the Queen's Lodge, No. 2, on the 19th of March, 1843, during a visit to Montreal; and, determined to introduce Oddfellowship into his own town. He was a gentleman of high standing in the community and well fitted by his position as well as his abilities to reflect credit on any institution of which he might be a supporter. Born in Kingston November 11th, 1812, he was educated in Upper Canada College, and subsequently studied law in the office of Marshall Spring Bidwell, Esq. Called to the bar in 1834, he commenced practise in Belleville, and soon established an excellent reputation. In 1836 he entered the Upper Canada Parliament as member for Hastings. At the general election for the first Parliament of United Canada he was a candidate, but was defeated bythe Hon. Robt. Baldwin. At a subsequent election, however, in 1843, he again contested the riding, with Mr. Joseph Canniff—this time successfully; and continued to represent the constituency, except for one interval of three years, up to 1857. He then left the Assembly, and was elected to the Upper House as member for the Trent division; and this position he occupied till the time of his death, August 15th, 1861. Mr. Murney was a consistent Conservative of the extreme type—so much so, in fact, that he would not support Sir Allan McNab when that gentleman associated with himself in the Government some of the friends of Mr. Hincks, in 1854. An active politician, an accomplished lawyer, and a sociable genial gentleman, he was well calculated to ensure the success of any undertaking in which he might be engaged. He became an enthusiastic Oddfellow, and was for many years the mainstay of the Order in the Bay of Quinte District.

Bro. Murney soon found other Oddfellows in his locality with whom he could work. Among them were two older in the Order than himself; Bro. J. A. Glassford, initiated in Prince of Wales Lodge, on the 19th of September, 1843; and Bro. Donald Ross, who had joined Queen's Lodge, No. 2, January 8th, 1845. Messrs. Alex. Judd and Adam H. Meyers were initiated in Queen's Lodge, in May; and thus a sufficient number were secured to petition the Grand Master for a dispensation to open a lodge in Belleville.

The application was received in the early part of June, and granted without delay. A dispensation was issued by the Acting Grand Master, Bro. Geo. Matthews; and P. G., David Milligan, of Queen's, was commissioned as Special Deputy for the purpose of giving it effect. On the 17th of June, 1845, Victoria Lodge, No. 6, the pioneer Lodge of this province, was instituted in Belleville, with the following chief officers: Donald Ross, N.G.; E. Murney, V.G.; Alex. Judd, Sec.; P. McAnnany, Treas.

The most important question that came up for consideration in 1846 had reference to the extension of the Order into the Western Province. The subject was not altogether a new one. At the session on December 6th of the previous year, a communication had been received from P. G., E. T. Renaud, urging active measures; and now additional correspondence was reported by the Grand Officers from other parties. Scattered all over Upper Canada were a number of influential persons who were members of the Montreal Lodges. Montreal was now the capital of Canada—commercial, social and political. Here the merchants came to purchase goods; here the legislators came to attend Parliament; here the "aristocracy" came for the balls and festivities at Government House. The Oddfellows' Society was one of the chief social clubs of the city, to which it was fashionable to belong. A visitor had failed to see the lions of Montreal who had not entered the Oddfellows' Lodge. And so numbers whose residences were in the Western Province, especially members of Parliament, had become connected with the Order. Some of these were anxious to have lodges organized in their own homes; and the Grand Lodge was equally anxious to extend the number of its subordinates.

After carefully considering this matter at the meeting on the 7th of February, the Grand Lodge decided to send a deputation westward, on what might be considered a "missionary tour." The brethren chosen for this duty were the D.G.M., Thos. Hardie, and P. G.'s, Geo. P. Dickson and Ed. Murney. Reference has already been made to the character and qualifications of Bros. Hardie and Murney. Bro. Dickson was equally well fitted for the duties devolving upon him. He had been initiated in Queen's Lodge almost immediately after its organization, and had taken a warm interest in the work of Oddfellowship, to whose service he brought talents of a high order, which would undoubtedly have soon secured for him the highest positions in the gift of the fraternity. Unfortunately he left Montreal about six months subsequent to this western trip, removing first to Toronto and then to Richmond Hill. He became a charter member of Home Lodge, No. 21, of Toronto, when it was organized in 1847; but absence from the city prevented his taking any active part in Lodge work; and when Home disbanded he lost his connection with the Order. Bros. Hardie and Dickson were the principal members of the deputation. Bro. Murney joined them at Picton, and gave them able assistance in their work in the Bay of Quinte District.

In order to the successful accomplishment of their mission, the deputation were invested with the most complete powers. The Subordinate Lodges in Montreal gave them a list of all their members residing in Upper Canada, with a stock of blank withdrawal cards, which they were authorized to fill and issue to any who were willing to be petitioners for new lodges; and the Grand Lodge empowered them to make Oddfellows "at sight;" receive petitions; grant dispensations; institute lodges; and in the words of their commission, "do and perform all other acts and things which might be or become necessary for the due and proper fulfilment of the objects and purposes" had in view. If ever Oddfellowship was divested of red-tape it was during the operations of these pioneer "missionaries" in Canada.

The deputation left home on Wednesday, the 4th of March, 1846, for a trip of more than 800 miles—the double journey—by coach, over a road which might be pleasant for a summer ride, but could scarcely be calculated on for comfort during a Canadian spring. The traveller who leaves Montreal on the Grand Trunk Railway in these days will reach Cornwall in a couple of hours; it took the deputation from 11 a.m. to 12 p.m. of their first day's journey.

The first point selected for active operations was the town of Brockville, which was reached about noon of the 5th. Here they obtained the co-operation of Bros. Geo. Sherwood, M.P., of No. 2, Rhynas of No. 1, Morton and Webster of No. 5, and James Gordeve, Esq. In the evening they met at the residence of the latter gentleman, where he was initiated, and in company with Bro. Webster received the Degrees. The petition of the five Brothers having been presented and accepted, Brock Lodge, No. 9, was then duly instituted, with Bro. Geo. Sherwood as first N. G. Three candidates were initiated and appointed to office, and in their journal the deputation made the comment: "Sincere zeal pervades the mind of each member, and indeed the prospects were encouraging." That the zeal of the early members was sincere, and that the prospects were encouraging, is fully borne out by the subsequent history of Brock Lodge.

Kingston was next visited, and though it was nine o'clock at night before the deputation reached that city they lost no time. They were met by Bro. Christie, of No. 2, and afterwards saw Bros. Gillespie and Frazer, of No. 5, and made arrangements for the next day's work. On the 7th they had several interviews with these brothers, and also with Bro. John A. Macdonald, of No. 2. Suitable rooms were secured for the evening's proceedings in Bro. Frazer's "Bachelor's Hall," and at five o'clock they met and initiated Dr. Robert McLean and conferred the degrees on him and Bros. Gillespie and Frazer. Cataraqui Lodge, No. 10, was then instituted—Bro. John A. Macdonald being installed N. G. In the evening Sheriff Corbett and a number of the prominent citizens of Kingston were initiated, and the new lodge started out with fair prospects.

Fortunately for the delegation, the next day was Sunday, and the day was devoted to rest. On Monday morning early they started for the town of Picton, which was reached by evening. Here a number of Oddfellows resided, who were members of Victoria Lodge, No. 6, of Belleville; and here the deputation was met by P. G. Edmund Murney, M. P., and about thirty members of No. 6, who had come over with a full supply of regalia and material. Proceeding to the residence of Bro. D. L. Fairfield, it did not take long to institute Prince Edward, No. 11, with Bro. Henry Corby, N.G.

Here some of the worthy Brethren from Belleville met with a little disappointment. They had been led to believe that the N. G.'s of all the new lodges instituted would be selected from among them; but they were informed that honors could not be distributed so cheaply, and that no one would be installed N.G. of any lodge, unless he was a resident, or would pledge himself to attend a majority of nights in the term. Everything approaching to irritation, however, was allayed by the appointment of P. G. Murney as D.D.G.M. for Canada West. It was midnight when the lodge closed, and snatching a hasty meal the brethren started for Belleville, where they arrived by six in the morning. An hour's sleep was all the rest they were allowed; and then, accompanied by Bro. Murney and four other members of Victoria, the deputation took coach for Cobourg, which they reached in time for supper. It was late in the day to begin operations; and there were only two Oddfellows, members of No. 6, resident in the town. But some preliminary arrangements had already been made, and all parties interested speedily assembled in the office of D'Arcy E. Boulton, Esq., where Messrs. Boulton, Clark and Jackson were duly qualified, and Ontario, No. 12, instituted. It was late when work was finished; and there is no doubt that Bros. Hardie and Dickson made a truthful entry in their journal when they wrote: "Much fatigued, we retired to rest."

Sunshine Furnace

Water-pan

Dry air is light—it lifts and carries dust. Dry air cracks your furniture, gives you a headache, shrivels your skin, parches your lungs.

The water-pan in most furnaces is a pleasantry. It has no serious business in the work of the furnace—it is merely placed there for effect, because a water-pan is a good thing.

And a water-pan is an absolute necessity to your health and comfort, but it must be properly placed to radiate moisture evenly and uniformly throughout the house.

The water-pan of the Sunshine Furnace is the most scientifically arranged water-pan in any furnace in the world.

It does the work a water-pan should, and does it well.

INTELLIGENCER JOB OFFICE

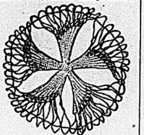
FOR CHEAP AND ARTISTIC WORK.

BRAZILIAN POINT.

FANCY WORK THAT IS NEW, EASY TO MAKE AND VERY USEFUL.

Designs and Instructions For Doing It—It Is Worked Without a Cushion—A Number of Practical Uses. Launders Well on Linen.

Mark on a piece of rather lightweight pasteboard a circle about an eighth of an inch larger than you wish the completed medallion to be. Adjust your sewing machine to its longest stitch and with coarse thread stitch around the circle. Now make a hole in the center of the circle, and you have the frame complete for your wheel. See second cut.

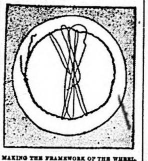


A BRAZILIAN WHEEL DESIGN.

Take a long thread (two or three yards) and pass half through the hole in the center; hold the other end and the frame in your left hand. Begin working by passing the needle and thread through one of the machine stitches, then across to the opposite side, then back again in the alternate stitch, then back again, and so on until all the thread in the needle is used up; then thread it with the under thread, bring it up to the right side and proceed as before until the spokes are all complete. The end of the thread you have been working with is then passed through half of the spokes and tied securely, then tied to the loose end. In case the thread is not long enough to complete the wheel it can easily be fastened to a new needleful with a tight knot. The process, although it may seem complicated in print, will be found to be perfectly simple.

After the frame is made and spokes are all complete comes the pleasant part, that of darning in the pattern. This can be as simple or elaborate as you wish, and there is practically no end to the different combinations. Fifty spokes is a good number to work with, and a very effective wheel may be made by simply tying the spokes around in rows at four different distances from the center.

The wheels are here pictured in about two-thirds the actual size when made with rather coarse linen thread. Making them with finer thread would decrease the size, while if made of crochet silk they would be considerably larger. None of them is difficult to make after the worker becomes accustomed to the darning. The main thing to remember is to draw the darning threads closely and firmly to give a solid look to that part of the wheel, but at the same time one must not draw or pull the work, or it will look uneven. The beginner will find the process described for working with the pasteboard circle a somewhat easier one than that of working on a cushion and using pins, for the reason that the threads are held perfectly firm by the machine stitches until it is desired to rip the completed wheel off, while the pins might possibly be pulled out by one who is not accustomed to this weaving under and over the spoke threads in basket fashion.



MAKING THE FRAMEWORK OF THE WHEEL.

Brazilian point can be used in dozens of ways as fancy work decoration and dress trimming. The wheels when made of linen thread launder beautifully, hence are excellent for trimming lawn or chambray dresses for little folks.

The wheels may also be buttonholed on coarse linen canvas or butchers' linen for the decoration of shirt waists.—Designer.

Decorative Notes.

A pretty lamp shade consists of thin, translucent laminæ of mother-of-pearl set after the fashion of leaded glass.

Hall lanterns grow more decorative each year and come in an endless variety. So also do lamp shades and lamps.

Pretty little wrought iron brackets in Venetian style come for the side wall. From the center of the bracket springs an opalescent lily, serving as flower holder.

Bead fringes in all colors are sold by the yard for the decoration of lamp shades—in fact, beads are very popular this season for decorative purposes and are shown in many styles.

Very handsome lamps, low and squat in shape, are made of glass of a raspberry shade and set in dead finished wrought iron. A shade comes to match. Lamps in yellow glass are also effective.

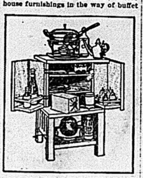
HOUSEHOLD DEVICES.

Cabinet For the Chafing Dish Outfit. Individual Breakfast Set.

An occasional indulgence in some new article for the table or the house adds zest to housekeeping and keeps up one's interest while attending to many tedious and irksome duties, suggests the Boston Cooking School Magazine in illustrating some of these.

A chafing dish cabinet is a convenience in any home where chafing dish cookery is often indulged in, but it will be found of especial delight to the bachelor, man or maid, whose house furnishings in the way of buffet and storage closet are limited. In designing the cabinet the architect planned that every available inch of space be made useful. The doors are admirably adapted to carry out this idea, the shelves with which they are fitted being perforated with holes of suitable sizes to hold the bottles of condiments so necessary to a complete chafing dish outfit. When the doors are closed all food supplies are shut out from sight and from floating dust.



CHAFING DISH CABINET.

The individual breakfast service comes in pretty but inexpensive chinaware or in ware "costly as thy purse can buy." A veritable boon is this service to the hostess discommoded by the presence of a guest at the necessarily early family breakfast. Rare is the guest or member of a family who would not feel himself flattered to be told on retiring that when breakfast was ready it would be served in his room or in the adjoining den or even in the serving room, carefully aired for the occasion. Who would not be glad to escape attendance when the children are being started for school and the adults to town? Who wishes to hear or have others hear the admonitions to Jane or the commissions to John that must be attended to the instant he arrives in town? If the individual breakfast service will simplify matters, by all means let us have it.

Heat and Air In the Dining Room.

The temperature of the dining room should not be as high as that in the living rooms of the house. People lose the relish for their food as much when they are compelled to eat in an overheated room as when it is not ventilated properly. Probably the majority of people would name 70 degrees F. the proper heat for the room, but this is much too high. An authority in these matters says: "Have the room neither too cold nor too warm. The temperature should never exceed 60 degrees. The dining room should be well aired before dinner commences." Those who have suffered from the discomforts of an overheated room are likely to agree with this authority after making a trial of different temperatures. Servants should be instructed to air the room thoroughly just before dinner and lower or raise the temperature, as the case may be, until the proper heat is obtained.

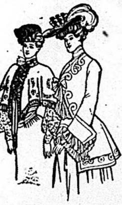
THE NEW COATS.

Picturesque and Modish Little Affairs—The Cut and Color.

Puce color, that delightful old world tone, has been revived. It is a success where the wearer can live up to all the requirements of so distinctive a hue, and it calls up quaint visions of Louis XVI. coats in velvet or cloth enhanced with sleeve ruffles and jabots of old lace. Such a vision is materialized here in the sketch of an early spring coat. Embroidered cloth applique picked out with gold relieves the severity of coat outlines, and the deep cuffs with wide lace ruffles and the Louis jabot add a further softening grace.

The bolero pictured is more than half pelerine, a modish little hybrid affair suitable to either cloth or velvet, and open to any amount of extraneous adornment.

The last word in regard to coats comprises a three-quarter sack, set slightly full from the shoulders, with sleeves modeled Chinese-wise in one with the body, of soft cloth in some one of the new strange apple greens, hussar blues or that inevitable ecru, elaborately inlet at the hem of the coat to the depth of eighteen inches or more with woolen lace, which latter invariably harmonizes with the cloth.



CHIC SPRING COATS.

For a Bruise.

To prevent a bruise on the flesh from becoming discolored apply immediately a cloth wrung out in water as hot as can be borne, changing the cloth as soon as it loses its heat. If hot water is not to be had, moisten some dry starch with cold water and cover the bruised part with the paste thus made.

To Remove Paint From Glass.

In order to remove paint from windows take strong bicarbonate of soda and dissolve it in hot water. Wash the glass with this, and in twenty minutes or half an hour give it a good rubbing with a dry cloth.

The New Style Marquise Ring.

Just when everybody on this side the water is settling down to the conviction that the marquise ring is a bit passe comes the news from Paris, through the Jewelers' Circular that this really elegant and beautiful ring model has taken on new [illegible]e and enjoys the greatest popularity there. It is, however, "a jour" or in openwork, distinguished from the old style solid mass of stones. A superb example is shown. It is of chased matt gold, framed with diamonds, and presents in its center a beautiful design enriched with a large opal and two rubies.

THE LATEST RING.

To Prove what Anti-Pill, the Great System Treatment will do for you, Every Reader of this paper may have A Sample Bottle Sent Free by Mail.

Derangement of the stomach is responsible for much sickness and suffering. Every organ of the body depends upon the stomach for its nutriment and strength—If the stomach is not working right the blood carries to the liver, heart, nerves and kidney tissue imperfect nutrition—They become weak and unable to perform their work—become clogged, diseased, and throw out their distress symptoms. Now you may get stimulative, temporary relief by the taking of a kidney, liver, nerve or heart specific, but the cause remains—The stomach is at fault, and so long as it keeps loading the blood with impurity—waste, so long will the blood transport and deposit disease breeding elements in the weak places—When you feel sick, help the stomach first. A well stomach means a well body. Anti-Pill, the Great System Treatment, is a new discovery that has a marvelous influence in correcting system ailments. The Kidney Pill

BY ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

Author of "Dr. Jack," "Dr. Jack's Wife," "Miss Caprice," Etc., Etc.

Here are some snake charmers, such a exhibited their tricks and horrid pets pon the square of Esbehiyeh, in Cairo. hen comes a merry fakir, known as a ickarrie here, shouting out his wares. ext we have some mountebank athletes, performing wonderful feats in gility, with perhaps a wizard who can ake a tree grow in the middle of the reet, with full-sized leaves and birds nging in the branches; while it is not ncommon to run across a group of owling dervishes, who take the place our New York little German band, aking night hideous in a certain loality, passing the hat around, and then ced to move on by indignant shopeepers, who are glad to buy them off. All of these sights and many more n be seen around the streets of Bomay. Occasionally an elephant looms , but these animals are found more the interior. Of monkeys there is no d. One need not be at all surprised feel his hat suddenly jerked from his ead, and, looking up, see an agile felw climbing to the top of a house with . Then the monkey-police have to be mmoned and various maneuvers rerted to in order to recover the lost adgear.

One wonders why these things are lowed until he discovers that the Hinos, as a class, are believers in theoshy. They look upon these animals unfortunate human beings undering punishment for some past evil.

Thus there are many things going on the time in this strange city. One ed never grow weary with seeing the me sights, since there is a constant riation. The blending of bright cols in the shifting panorama is what eases Sandy most of all, and he is er on the watch for a new variety turban, of which there seems to be endless number.

Mynheer Joe has given Kassee the freedom of the city during their stay, well knowing that the intelligent Hindoo will not abuse the privilege. As Kassee has been informed concerning the baron and his ways, it may be presumed that he will keep a jealous eye upon the Russian. This is what Joe wishes, for he knows that, as a spy, his servant has no superior.

To the surprise of the traveller they discover this same Kassee walking along the street in company with another Hindoo, and both of them seem to be in rather a convivial frame of mind.

The servant happens to catch his master's eye, and makes a rapid hand-signal that gives Joe solid satisfaction, since it tells him that the other is on the alert, and means something by his actions.

Sandy does not see this side show. He is eagerly taking in the sights, and as they have now reached a portion of the grand bazar street where the lights are more plentiful, and the shops present the finest appearance, it is really worth his time to observe these things.

Here is a sannar, or goldsmith, displaying his quaint wares in a most attractive form, and by eloquent silence inviting the passers-by to purchase. Then there are curiosity shops where a thousand and one queer things have been gathered from the four ends of the earth. Perhaps the next place will belong to a mosaic worker, and his shop is certainly a model of neatness.

At a turbanmaker's Sandy stops some time to see the yards of costly cloth twisted in odd shapes, each tuft being afterward pointed with gold or silver cloth. These turbans are the delight of the Hindoos, and the man who has a new shape is the envied of his fellows.

After this comes a variety of shops, from silversmith's down to the durzee's, or tailor's. Our friends take it in, and will never in all likelihood forget the sights their eyes rest upon. The crowd is such a good-natured one and, most delightful of all, does not push and surge as crowds generally do. In their long walk the two friends do not remember having touched but one man, who stumbled against them and then rushed away as if filled with alarm. Sandy, recognizing an old game of the thieves in London and Paris, at once looks to see if his watch is all right, and upon finding it so is relieved.

"Well," remarks Mynheer Joe, at last, "the hour is late. Have you seen enough for one night, old fellow?"

Sandy nods.

"My head is crammed full of ideas, which I must put into some shape before I sleep. This has been a revelation to me, Joe. I never before saw such life as old Bombay presents. Think of the rough sketches I've already drawn—the weird Towers of Silence, that wonderful burial place of the Brahmins—that magnificent statue out on the avenue—the Parsee broker—what's his name?"

"Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy," smiles Joe.

"Drops from your tongue like oil, old fellow. I must practice on these names. About the sketches: I have the harbor, the strange coasting craft you pointed out, a patamar with its two masts, the small rakish manche and the long, narrow felucca with its lateen sails. Besides, I've got glimpses of mosques, that lovely idol and an array of such things, to say nothing of the ideas now in my head which, roughly drawn, will fill pages in the note books. Yes, I'm in clover, Joe, and I—"

Mynheer Joe has left his side, which fact causes the voluble Sandy to turn around. He discovers his companion talking earnestly with a Hindoo, and, looking more closely, recognizes Kassee, whose brown face is very serious, and whose whole manner proclaims that there is trouble brooding in the air for the Americans in Bombay.

CHAPTER XIX.

Sandy chances to be a wise little fellow, and evinces no surprise at the state of affairs. He guesses instinctively that Kassee has made a discovery of some importance, and is now communicating the result of his work to the master he loves so well.

Somehow it seems quite natural that they should get into a tangle, that mystery should crop up around them. They are surrounded by strange scenes, which the human mind could hardly imagine without a positive experience. The very air of India seems to breathe of mystery, as though it were impregnated with it.

He watches Mynheer Joe and the Hindoo with considerable curiosity, while keeping an eye upon the crowd near by, as if seeking to discover whether any one else is interested in them.

Joe now appears to be questioning his faithful servitor, as though he has heard it all and knows that it is serious. At the same time he does not exhibit alarm, for his experience has been great in the past, and he knows how to preserve his mental equilibrium in the face of the most astounding difficulties.

"Ten to one it's all on account of that miserable Russian. I expected to hear from him again. What in the deuce is the sly rascal up to now?" mutters the correspondent, as he twirls his cigar between finger and thumb and keeps his eyes fastened upon his friend.

He sees Joe look around him, as though seeking the danger of which he has been warned. Then their eyes meet. The traveller cannot help but note the eager look upon the face of Sandy. He smiles and beckons to him.

This, of course, means that he is to be in it and as the correspondent usually manages, by hook or crook, to get there, he feels satisfied that matters are shaping themselves all right. It suits him to meet difficulties as they fly. Sandy was never known to turn his back on the foe.

With his curiosity aroused to a most intense pitch, the correspondent, therefore, advances to the fray. He casts a keen glance at the face of Mynheer Joe, but that worthy shows little of the emotions that may lie deeply hidden under the calm exterior.

Thus Sandy draws up alongside of his friend and awaits the communication that is to decide a momentous epoch in their lives; nor is it long in forthcoming.

"Well, the baron has been at work, Sandy," remarks Joe, with a peculiar smile. "I knew he would not be long in Bombay without attempting some manner of evil against us, particularly myself, for whom he entertains no great love, you understand."

Sandy nods his head in that vigorous, thoughtful way of his, more eloquent than words.

"Kassee fortunately has had his eyes open and been able to discover what is going on. Only for that we might have been taken unawares, and serious consequences have resulted."

Sandy pricks up his ears, and his itching hand makes a movement in the direction of the pocket where he keeps his note book, as though this may be some news that concerns the general public; but he remembers in time, and forbears. With a smile at his action, the traveller continues:

"He has had men in sympathy with him right here under the noses of the British officials in Bombay, strange though it may appear to you. Perhaps there is something rotten in the state of Denmark, and England may awaken some day to find a wonderful uprising in the heart of her rich Indian possessions, or I'm no prophet, unless—"

"Well," remarks Sandy, solemnly, when his friend comes to this pause, significant in itself, "unless what, friend Josephus?"

"The conspiracy is nipped in the bud. This can be done by the overthrow of Baron Popoff now."

"By Jove, what a pity you were not a subject of the queen, Joe!" grunts Sandy.

"Why so, old man?"

"Under such circumstances you would have seen your duty clearly; at the time you fought that duel with the baron, your sword could and would have nipped this Russian conspiracy in the bud, by ending the baron on the banks of the Nile. If his body were resting in one of those ancient tombs among the hills of Mokkatam Popoff would not be able to arouse the people of this benighted country to rise against their British masters and throw off the yoke of England in order to assume one much more galling—that of the White Czar."

FOR ALL CHILDREN.

Baby's Own Tablets is a medicine good for all children, from the feeblest infant whose life seems to hang by a thread, to the sturdy boy whose digestive apparatus occasionally gets out of order. The tablets instantly relieve and promptly cure all stomach and bowel troubles and all the minor ailments of little ones. Thousands of mothers have proved the truth of these statements, among them Mrs. Root. Morton, Deerwood, Man., who says: "Baby's Own Tablets have helped my baby more than anything I ever gave him. I can conscientiously recommend the Tablets to all mothers." We give you a solemn assurance that the Tablets do not contain one particle of opiate or harmful drug. They do good—they never can do harm, and all children take them as readily as candy. Sold by medicine dealers or sent post paid at 25c a box by writing the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Concentration, and energetic action, wear out Brain and Nerve, and make the body cry aloud for drugs, unless the waste they cause is made good by foods rich in Phosphates and Nitrogen.
"FORCE" is such a food, consisting of the Phosphates, Nitrogen, and Protein of wheat, malted into quick digestibility with Barley. Served cold, with Cream, it is delicious.

Fashion's Echoes.

The turban in rather small, close fitting form is especially approved.

The tricorne or continental, also in small effects, is a fashionable shape for the street hat.

Dullness of finish is shown upon some new satin foulards and upon many popular suit taffetas.

With a little fine muslin and some bits of embroidery and lace deft needlewomen are carrying on the home fad of making their own dainty stocks, collars and cuffs.

In hair ornaments, bandeaux, wreaths and side effects are equally popular. To a youthful face a dainty wreath or cluster of blossoms tucked behind the ear is appropriate and lovely.

It would be hard to find a modish maid or matron who does not exhibit in her wardrobe some example of that Russian cross stitch decoration for which there is a veritable craze.

It is expected that with dressy light shades of cloth, in fawns, grays, electric blues, etc., for day wear, chiffon and mousseline will remain fashionable. The light froufrou effect is to be retained, and very good news it is.

The Obstacle.

"It's a wonder Mr. Henpeck doesn't stand on his rights."

"He can't. Mrs. Henpeck always sits on them."—Judge.

We Have The Facilities

for doing your painting, graining, paperhanging and decorating. Have the materials, the ideas, the everything, and we do not make mistakes.

Promptness

Is one of our mottoes.

To be on a job the very moment we plan for it is sometimes out of the question, and reasonable people understand that—for sometimes a delay on a previous job occurs to detain an hour or two, sometimes half a day, but our work, we wager, is executed as promptly as any other firm of our stamp in Canada.

So large a staff of workmen and such facilities for promptness and execution and such splendid work as we turn out—appeal to our customers. We prove this from repeated calls.

No decorative house in Canada is better prepared than ourselves to execute superior decorative work.—It all rests with you what money you wish to spend. If you care to spend $1,000 on the decorations of your Hall, we can do it for you. We have done it elsewhere.

If you want hand decorative work on a drawing-room, costing as much, we have also done that elsewhere and can do it here.

There is no limit to decorative possibilities in our hands.

We're in touch with the first decorations of the land, the finest colorists, and can secure you New York or Bostonian Ideas if you are prepared for the price.

Our fabrics, our wall papers, our ideas, our workmanship go hand in hand for your pleasure and our profit.

THE COSSACKS.

A Favorite Camp Story Through Which Generals Are Criticised.

Unlike other Russian soldiers, the Cossacks are very intelligent in military matters and do not hesitate to criticise their generals freely among themselves. They have bitter tongues and a genius for satire. There is a favorite story which has been told in Cossack camps for generations. It is handed down from father to son, the names being changed to fit the military commanders of the day. Freely translated, it runs something like this:

The war god of Russia was asleep in heaven one day when he was awakened by the confused clamor of two hosts in battle on the earth beneath. He shouted to the Angel Gabriel:

"Look out and see what my Cossacks are doing."

"They are fighting the Turks, and Prince Potemkin is leading them."

"Oh, that's all right," said the war god. "He's a good man."

So the deity went asleep again, only to be awakened by another turmoil.

"What's that?" he asked sleepily.

"They are fighting the Turks again under Suwarow."

"He's a fine fellow. They'll do all right."

And so the story goes on interminably around the campfire, each man adding the name of his favorite commander until at last one of them makes the Angel Gabriel mention the name of some general who happens to be regarded by the Cossacks as a duffer. Then the next man makes the war god reply in accents of great alarm:

"Oh, my beloved Cossacks! They must be perishing under that [illegible] It is time I interfered. Hasten, Gabriel, and bring me my long boots, for I must go down at once and save them."

COURTESY OR HANDSHAKE?

The Well Bred Cordiality of the Twentieth Century Hostess.

Whether courtesy or handshake should prevail depends upon the size of the room in which a hostess receives. A series of formal courtesies in a small room are as ludicrous as repeated hand jerks in a big ballroom. The stature and general makeup of a hostess, moreover, have something to do with the appropriate way of receiving. The unhygienic and fatiguing side of handshakes may well develop neuritis, and the constant backward or downward bend of the courtesy is conducive to trouble with the knee.

But, apart from such small irregularities, there is a subtle pervasive atmosphere about both welcomes that a guest feels as soon as she enters a room and to which she unconsciously responds. This atmosphere may either be the aroma of a kindly, loving disposition or the malarial effect of a churlish nature. One can shake hands coldly or courtesy cordially, says Kate Gannett Wells in Boston Cooking School Magazine.

One cannot be a good hostess without sympathetic imagination and the instant intuition to know just how to welcome each guest. There is nothing more snobbish and amusing (with a heartache for the nonsense of it) than a hostess who is indifferent in manner toward her guests of average social quality and full of deferential eagerness toward those who are prominent or distinguished. Yet if she does not indicate in her welcome some sense of values she offends. It is better to be too cordial, to shake hands too heartily, than to be conventional and courtesy at far distances.

For instance, afternoon teas are classed as informal, so no deep courtesies should then be made. If one cannot shake hands all the time, one can slightly bend, as if in deprecation of the bigness of the crowd, which affords neither time nor space to extend the hand. But in a ballroom, where guests are formally presented, a hostess should always courtesy, more or less deeply, in proportion to the welcome to be accorded.

Courtesies and handshakes are parts of etiquette, the best etiquette arising from the best manners, formed by sincerity of heart and grace of bearing. Etiquette is the exchangeable silver coin of society, without which we should all be at loggerheads. It is as much the passport to harmonious family life as to social recognition. It demands social training, mental and moral truth and physical grace.

Now that any one can entertain over an evening chafing dish or an afternoon cup of tea, graceful, well proportioned etiquette invests the economical hostess with as much charm as it does the giver of a fashionable ball.

The bases of etiquette, fair play and sympathy, are great principles hidden in the deferential courtesy or the frank handshake. Cordiality or formality—which? Have both, one to temper the other.

Baked Eggs With Bread Sauce.

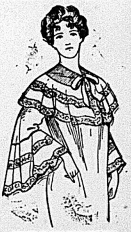
Have ready a heaping cupful of stale bread crumbs, using only the interior of the loaf. Put into a saucepan with a cupful and a half of milk, one-half of a teaspoonful of salt, a dash of cayenne and a half teaspoonful of onion juice, and simmer slowly until thick and smooth, beating several times with a spoon. Pour the sauce into a broad, shallow dish, and break carefully over it half a dozen eggs. Place in a hot oven until the eggs are set, and then send quickly to the table.

Pineapple Sherbet With Milk.

Grate a large pineapple from which the eyes and outside paring have been removed. Add the juice of a lemon and one pint of sugar. Stir till the sugar is dissolved. Then, with one quart of rich, creamy milk, pour into a freezer. Freeze like ice cream.

Dainty Handmade Underclothing.

If any one has not yet appreciated the influence that the latest fashions are exerting upon underclothing she has but to open her eyes to some of the new things of the season in handmade underwear. Here, for instance, is a French handmade nightdress, with finely tucked flat collar, wide filled sleeves and lace in wave pattern. This is far less elaborate than many of the gowns which are masses of lace and ribbon, but it is all the more pleasing to the woman of dainty taste.



FRENCH HANDMADE NIGHTGOWN.

The newest camisole or corset cover has a narrow waistband and short shaped basque. A combination novelty of camisole and knickers is in nainsook prettily trimmed with valenciennes. It is French handmade, has shoulder straps of ribbon and is designed for evening wear.

Weeds.

A weed is a plant that grows in abundance out of desired limits. Any plant may become a weed by escaping from cultivation. Many plants that with us are highly esteemed in other countries grow as weeds, while, on the other hand, our weeds are in other countries sometimes highly prized. The correct use of the word depends altogether on circumstances.

A Waste.

"The train I was on this morning," said little Elsie's papa, "struck a poor cow and cut her head right off."

"My gracious!" exclaimed the little girl. "I suppose the milk poured right out all over the ground."

To endeavor to work upon the vulgar with fine sense is like attempting to hew blocks with a razor.

Do you know why they use yeast in white flour bread?

When white flour is wet it forms a compact mass, and if cooked thus, as in some kinds of pastry, and eaten, the digestive juices would only act on the outside of each morsel and the process of digestion is greatly prolonged. So yeast is used to make it porous. Yeast, however, consumes a portion of the gluten in the flour, which is already greatly deficient, being lost in the bolting.

MEN'S SUITS

The Newest of All.

The more exacting and particular a man may be about exclusiveness in fabrics and patterns, even if he insists on all the advantages he expects from a tailor, then the more these new suits which we are showing for the first time will appeal to him.

He will find in them all the style and satisfaction he would in garments that the best tailors could build to his measure, though they cost a little more than half the tailor's price and the same as he would pay elsewhere for ready-made clothes that would not prove as satisfactory.

Throughout these splendid garments the tailoring will be found to be faultless; it is of the highest character known and if anything a little more exacting and thorough than is found on the tailor's best productions. And of more importance than all, they possess that well bred air the tailor's have a knack of giving to the clothes they turn out.

Needless to say, the styles as they are found here are correct, that is expected, or that a perfect fit is assured in every case—we are more particular about that than you could be.

DON'T GROW CORNS THIS YEAR

People who are wise will not grow corns this year on their feet. Every corn can be removed without pain by using Carple's Corn Cream. At drug stores, or send 15 cents in stamps and get two corn cushions free and a full size box of the Corn Cream. — R. I. Stott & Jury, Bowmanville, Ont.

LARGEST PASSENGER ENGINE IN THE WORLD.

One of the two largest passenger locomotives in the world races each day between Chicago and Bloomington, Ill. This is engine No. 601 of the Chicago & Alton railroad. The other of the two largest engines is owned by the same company, and is used on a Western division. These engines each weigh 219,500 pounds, of which there is carried on the drivers a weight of 141,700 pounds. The water tank has a capacity of 8,400 gallons, and when it is filled and the tender loaded the total weight of the locomotive is 187 tons. The drivers, of which there are six, are eight feet high. These locomotives are used only for pulling the fastest heavy passenger trains.

A NOTED HORSEMAN'S EXPERIENCE.

Antoine Wendling, owner of Home from Their Trip to Holy Land.

REV. DR. POTTS TELLS OF THE JOURNEY TO PALESTINE — DOCTOR IS NOT SAYING MUCH ABOUT HIS DONKEY-RIDING EXPERIENCES.

Toronto, May 20.—Several of the delegates who went to Jerusalem to attend the World's Sunday School Convention have arrived home. The Toronto delegates left this city on March 8th, and at New York embarked on the Grosser Kurfurst, a German liner. There were 811 in all who took in the trip. After a pleasant sail they reached Gibraltar, having touched at Madeira en route. Here Mr. Frizzell, Dr. Potts, Mr. J. W. L. Forster, the artist, and Mr. Wm. Johnson, of Belleville, had an interview with Governor Sir George White, the hero of Ladysmith.

Other places visited were Algiers, Malta, Athens, Constantinople, Smyrna, Alexandria, Cairo, Naples, Rome and Nice. In all, seventeen days were spent in the Holy Land, and all the principal points of interest were visited. There were nearly 1,300 present at the convention in Jerusalem, which lasted three days. A special steamer brought 450 from England.

Dr. Potts Enjoyed It.

Rev. Dr. Potts is looking hale and hearty after his voyage, and is prepared to resume his duties with renewed vigor. Dr. Potts said to-day: "From Funchal we went to Gibraltar, where we found the German Emperor on a visit. We had telegraphed the Governor, Sir George White, that 70 Canadians would be pleased to wait upon him, but on account of the royal visit he was unable to make any definite arrangements. A few of us, nevertheless, had the pleasure of meeting him in his own residence, and were made very welcome. He took us through his garden, and we found him a delightful old gentleman. Mr. Frizzell took a snap shot of the Governor, Mr. Wm. Johnson, of Belleville, and myself.

"We went then to Algiers, where a number of the party visited the Arabic quarter of the city. In the notebook which I carried, I marked this, 'dirty and disagreeable.'

"From Algiers we went to Malta, and, on leaving there, the captain of our boat went out of his way to show us the monument of St. Paul in St. Paul's Bay, where the apostle was shipwrecked.

In Jerusalem.

"We reached Jerusalem on Tuesday, the fifth of April."

"Were you disappointed?" he was asked.

"By no means," said the doctor. "In a visit to the Holy Land everything depends on the spirit in which you go. If the tourist is merely a tourist, and has not a religious interest, he will probably be disappointed, but to a student of the Bible who enters Jerusalem, with the book open, looking for confirmation of the Biblical stories, the district abounds with interest. He will find the Bible illuminated by the land, and the sights of the Holy City and Palestine generally.

Jerusalem Interested.

"I had an idea that the convention would attract little attention from the citizens of Jerusalem, but in this I was mistaken. We were agreeably surprised to note that it had stirred the whole city. The Mayor gave us an address, and we were visited by many of the dignitaries of the district. The convention sermon was preached by Archdeacon Sinclair of St. Paul's, London, and the welcome to the meeting was delivered by the Episcopal Bishop of Jerusalem, together with the American Consul and the Mohammedan officials.

Curious Excitement.

"The reason we attracted so much notice was curious. The Moslems are looking for the return of Christ and the idea got abroad that we came for the purpose of receiving Him. They believe that the signal for His coming will be a cock crowing on Mount Olivet. A rumor spread among the people that the cock would crow on Sunday, for that is the day on which Christ is expected to return. This rumor sprang from the fact that one of the American women of the party had brought a carrier pigeon which she had intended to set free in the Holy Land, many thousands of miles from its home. She was persuaded not to do so, but the result of it all was that thousands of people surged about our tent all day Sunday. We were well guarded by the Mohammedan soldiers and officials, who treated us with great deference and courtesy.

"The most interesting of the several meetings in the Jerusalem tent was a union sacramental service at which 800 persons partook of the Lord's Supper. I conducted the service.

Trouble in Bethlehem.

"At Bethlehem the Church of the Nativity is in constant danger of destruction from riots. The different Christian denominations are continually quarrelling among themselves, and the church is guarded by Mohammedan soldiers.

"On our return, in passing through Naples, we met the French President, Sir Thomas Lipton, and the eldest son of Lord Rosebery. The latter two were then on their yachts."

"Did you have any donkey rides?" was asked of the doctor.

Dr. Potts smiled. "Yes," he said, "but I am not telling much about it. I was induced to mount one of the little fellows, but I got off.

"One of the great things of the convention was the organization of a Sunday School Association in Jerusalem for the whole of Palestine. Until now there has been no regular association such as we have in America. We also organized an association in Italy. While we were in Rome there was a Sunday School congress. The gospels have been translated into Arabic and the translation has received the sanction of the Pope."

Meeting adjourned.

NO ELECTIONS AT PRESENT.

NOT LOOKED FOR BEFORE BY-ELECTION TRIALS HAVE BEEN DECIDED.

The Orange Sentinel, the editor of which, Mr. E. F. Clarke, is a leading M.P., says:

"The provincial government has evidently made up its mind to await the issue of the by-election trials next September before deciding on an appeal to the country, and if the results should in any way appear favorable Hon. Mr. Ross may be trusted to hold on to office until in the usual course a general election must take place. Should the results prove unfavorable, then there can be but little doubt that the province will witness some more manoeuvring and delay in either facing the legislature or the electors. This tension cannot, however, last long, and in a short time the electors will assuredly have an opportunity to express themselves on the state of affairs in the Queen's Park.

"If, as is stated, Sir Wilfrid Laurier proposes going on a trip to the Yukon this summer, then there may not be a Dominion election for some time. The contemplated trip will doubtless be utilized for a good campaign tour going and coming through Western Ontario, Manitoba, the Northwest and British Columbia, so that it will probably be late in September before Sir Wilfrid gets back to Ottawa. To our way of thinking there will be no Dominion elections until work has been fairly started on the Grand Trunk Pacific, and the public thus thoroughly convinced that the road is to be built.

"We have heard all sorts of rumors about the proximity of Dominion and Provincial elections, but weighing carefully all the signs, we cannot see that there will be a general election in the province or for the Dominion in this year of grace 1904. This will insure our harvest being gathered in peace."

A Wandering Boy.

A boy named Patrick Toney, who lives with relatives in this city, ran away on Tuesday last and returned last evening. He was found upon the street by a police officer who took him to his friends. It appears that he is in the habit of running away, often staying away for a week at a time.

BELLEVILLE BOY WRITES FROM FAR-OFF CEYLON.

LIEUT. GORDON B. JOHNSON TELLS OF HAPPENINGS IN THE ISLE WHERE THE SPICY BREEZES BLOW — MADE A GREAT "CLEAN UP" IN THE SAILING RACES.

A letter received yesterday by Ex-Mayor Johnson from his son, Lieutenant Gordon B. Johnson, Royal Engineer, from Ceylon, where he is now stationed, contains some interesting items. He says:

The little monsoon has broken, and the weather will be frightfully hot for a month or two, especially at night, until the real S. W. monsoon breaks.

In my office I have five large photographs on the wall of the principal Russian warships destroyed. The latest one, the "Petropavlovsk," which was blown up by a mine outside Port Arthur, being up only a day or two. The way I get the photographs is that I have a Royal Engineer Corporal here whose business it is to take photographs of all foreign warships which come to Colombo, sometimes 10 or 12 a week. Eighteen copies go to the War Office and the plate remains in my charge.

I have been up at Kandy for a couple of days on duty. The scenery there is magnificent and the weather at night cooler than in Colombo.

In the recent series of races of the Colombo Sailing Club, the boat sailed by Mr. Moore, of Belfast, (residing here) and myself (a Bay of Quinte boy) won the cup. We got four firsts, one second and one fifth. Mr. Moore's father and mother met you and Col. Ponton at the Congress of the Chambers of Commerce in Montreal last August.

While officer of the day recently it became my duty to arrange for a meeting between the General in Command here and the Admiral of the fleet, then visiting Ceylon. I went out to the Admiral's ship in a pinnace in full uniform and in style worthy of the mission I was on. I took the tiller myself and brought the boat alongside the warship in good old Bay of Quinte style, a large number of the officers and men looking on.

TROTTING.

Fast Time on the Local Track.

Mr. W. Moffatt, of Picton, who is about to take up his residence in the city, has been appointed superintendent of the Belleville Driving and Athletic Association track. The gentleman in question is the owner of the celebrated trotter, Sidney Pointer, which has a mark of 2.07 1-4. On Thursday afternoon Mr. Moffatt gave an exhibition here of what his horse is capable of doing. The animal was harnessed to a waggon and was driven on the outside of the track. Two one-eighths of a mile were traversed and each was done in 17 seconds which is equal to a 2.16 clip. The performance was witnessed by a number of interested spectators, who were pleased at the result. It is an evidence that the local track is in excellent shape for the making of good time.

The Les Cellni-Chairons troupe of eccentric dancers are a sensational novelty with Ringling Brothers' World's Greatest Shows this season. There are four men and four women, and their whirlwind terpsichorean specialty is repeating the success for which it was famed in European capitals. The most thrilling achievements of gymnastic heroes are gracefully woven into their whirling dancing performance, with a sympathetic rhythm of motion and bewildering fascination of speed and change it is impossible to picture in words. Every national dance is illustrated in alluring fashion, and new figures involving the supplest agility of the superbly trained athlete are danced with marvellous grace and velocity. The specialty is exhilaratingly novel and forms the greatest exhibition of graceful, difficult and novel dancing ever offered the American public by this greatest circus in the world.

Hairpins.

"We buy hairpins by the hundredweight and sell, in one form or another, about three gross a day," said the foreman of the notion counter in a department store. "A woman with three or four grown daughters buys her hairpins by the pound, and buys a good many pounds in the course of a year at that. Where there is only one woman in the house she buys her hairpins by the package, put up in some fancy and convenient shape. The latter way is the more expensive, of course. Women with hairpins are very much like men with matches. Some shed them as they go and never can find one when they want it. Others keep them where they can find them and usually have to make up for the forgetfulness of their less careful sisters."—New York Press.

No matter how hearty the old folk appear, their digestive organs are on the wane. The stomach and bowels are noticeably weaker. The liver often sluggish. Nature needs assistance.

ABBEY'S SALT is the tonic laxative to keep the old folk in healthful vigor. It is so mild—yet so effective—that it puts the stomach, bowels and liver in perfect order without the least discomfort.

Says Heat Caused By Radium Would Make the Earth Inhabitable For Many Millions of Years—Prof. Rutherford's Statement Upsets All Accepted Theories of the Duration of Life—The Alleged Disgusted Londoners.

London, May 21.—(C. A. P.)—Professor Rutherford of Montreal startled a distinguished audience at the Royal Institute with the theory that, owing to the heat caused by radium, the earth may be inhabitable many millions of years. It further upsets all accepted theories of the duration of life, since a millionth portion of radium only exhausts itself in fifty million years.

Alleged Disgusted Londoners.

London, May 21.—(C. A. P.)—Recently there appeared in The Chronicle's cable despatch a paragraph stating that twelve disgusted Londoners were returning to England. It turns out that the dozen have dwindled to two individuals, named Saunders and Lee, who both declared to Mr. Preston's representative at Liverpool that the stories regarding their complaints have been greatly exaggerated.

THE POPE'S DOCTOR.

AN INTERESTING SKETCH OF A FAMOUS CHARACTER.

How He Differs From His Canadian Colleagues — An Example Worthy of Being Followed.

Dr. Lapponi, the famous physician to the Vatican, whose name has recently come so greatly to the front on account of his unremitting attention to His Holiness the late Pope, Leo XIII., and the high esteem with which he is regarded by the present Pope, His Holiness, Pius X., is a man of commanding genius. But he is something more than that. He is more than a mere man of science. He is a man of original and independent mind. He stands out among medical men of all nations, themselves the flower of the world's intellect, by reason of his fine independent personality. He has had differences with his fellow scientists. But no one has ever disputed for an instant the remarkable nature of his professional attainments or the unflinching integrity of his personal character. He is afraid of no man. But he has a higher courage still. He is not afraid of the bugbear of professional etiquette which frightens even some of the greatest doctors.

As an example of this may be mentioned one very interesting respect in which he has differed from the medical men of this country. The latter are trammelled by medical etiquette. No one disputes their scientific skill or their unselfish devotion to their work. But they are limited in their labors by one remarkable scruple. They will prescribe and experiment with drugs of all kinds sanctioned by the Pharmacopoeia or newly introduced; but where a medical discovery, even when it is the life-work of a regular practising physician, is recommended to the general public by a manufacturer, professional etiquette steps in and frightens them. No matter how overwhelming the evidence of what such a discovery, when sold as a proprietary medicine, has accomplished, they look coldly upon it and will rarely admit that they have used it with success. It would be "unprofessional" to do so! Dr. Lapponi is troubled by no such scruples. For instance, the numerous remarkable cures which have been proved by newspaper reports, independently investigated, to have been accomplished by the medicine sold in Canada under the name of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, must be well known to all Canadian doctors. They have been published far and wide. There can be no doubt of their accuracy. The names and addresses of the men and women cured are freely published. Their statements have been investigated by some of the most important newspapers in this country and abroad. No one has ever attempted to dispute the facts. But Canadian doctors have never cared to admit publicly that they have availed themselves of this discovery. Dr. Lapponi, however, has availed himself of Dr. Williams' discovery, and has, in his own fearless way, had no hesitation in making the fact publicly known. The following letter, with his signature, freely avows the facts and endorses the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills with an authority no one will venture to question.

TRANSLATION.

"I certify that I have tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in four cases of the simple anaemia of development. After a few weeks of treatment, the result came fully up to my expectations. For that reason I shall not fail in the future to extend the use of this laudable preparation, not only in the treatment of other morbid forms of the category of anaemia or chlorosis, but also in cases of neurasthenia and the like.

(Signed) Dr. Giuseppe Lapponi,
Via dei Gracchi 332, Rome

The "simple anaemia of development" referred to by Dr. Lapponi is of course that tired, languid condition of young girls whose development to womanhood is tardy, and whose health, at the period of that development, is so often imperilled. His opinion of the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at that time is of the highest scientific authority and it confirms the many published cases in which anaemia and other diseases of the blood, as well as the nervous diseases referred to by Dr. Lapponi, have been cured by these pills, which it need hardly be mentioned, owe their efficacy to their power of making new blood and thus acting directly on the digestive and nervous system. In all cases of anaemia, threatened consumption, decline, indigestion, kidney disease and all affections of the nerves, as St. Vitus' dance, paralysis and locomotor ataxia, they are commended to the confidence of the public, and now that they have received the emphatic endorsement of so high a professional authority as Dr. Lapponi, the trusted physician of the Vatican, they will be accepted by the medical and scientific world at their true value.

TURRET BAY IS WRECKED

Fourteen Men Drowned in the Ocean North of Cape Breton.

Loaded With Coal For Montreal, She Went Aground on St. Paul's Island—Following the News of the Hibernian, the Wreck Caused Consternation in Halifax Shipping Circles—Steamer's First Trip and Captain's First Trip on a Steamer.

Halifax, N. S., May 21.—A despatch from St. Paul's Island, north of Cape Breton, yesterday, reads as follows:

"A terrible disaster here this morning. The Turret Bay, from Sydney for Montreal, with coal, struck near the southwest lighthouse at 8.30 a. m., during a heavy sea and dense fog. She backed off and sank in deep water, twenty minutes after she struck. We took fourteen men off floating wreckage with boats. Five died before reaching the shore. Survivors are doing well. Will wire later total number lost. The steamer mistook fog alarm for another steamer's whistle."

Consternation in Shipping Circles.

This news, following so close on the wreck of the Hibernian, caused considerable consternation in shipping circles. The Turret Bay left Sydney at 8.30 o'clock Thursday evening with a full cargo of 3,338 tons of coal for the Dominion Coal Company, Montreal. It was thick with fog and along the coast it was literally impenetrable. All went well until between 3 and 4 o'clock, when without a moment's warning the heavily laden vessel crashed into St. Paul's Island. For a few moments she hung on the rocks and then backed off into deep water, sinking in twenty minutes. The Turret Bay carried a crew of twenty-three, and only nine escaped.

Steamer's First Trip.

This was the steamer's first trip of the season up the gulf, having only arrived from England a few days ago. It was Capt. Hayden's first trip on a steamer, he having previously sailed sailing vessels. He is married to a Halifax lady and lives in Limerick. The captain's inexperience is thought to have had something to do with it. The Turret Bay was built on Wall's End-on-Tyne in 1893 and was owned by the Canadian Lake and Ocean Navigation Company of Toronto.

The following were saved: — Mason, third engineer; J. Hacker, John Soderholm, Jacob Kristersen, firemen; John G. Johnson, John Niggust, Jacob Tresmeden, Gustave Gustavesen, sailors; C. Anderson, carpenter. The dead are: — Grey, second mate; the steward, name unknown; Harry Buck, mess-room boy; — Lyindercot, fireman; the donkey man, name unknown.

The missing, as near as known, are: Capt. Hayden, First Mate McCara, Chief Engineer W. H. McAdam, Second Engineer Mathews, Boatswain Johnston, Fireman J. Brown, Sailor Holifirst, cook, name unknown.

Chinamen Burned to Death.

Montreal, May 21.—Two Chinamen, Lee Lung and Lee Hays, are dead, and Pan Long and Lee Moy fatally injured as a result of a fire which broke out in their laundry at the corner of Mount St. Mary avenue and St. Antoine street early yesterday morning. The fire was extinguished within ten minutes of its discovery, but before the firemen effected an entrance the two were dead, and the others badly injured. The laundry was in a small two-storey building, and the damage is consequently very slight.

Drowned in a Fit.

Newtonville, May 21.—William Ovens, farmer, and respected resident, 80 years old, was found dead last evening on his farm. He was subject to fainting spells. He was crossing a small creek and fell on his face. When found life was extinct.

Probably Drowned.

Winnipeg, May 21.—It is reported at Brandon that Steve Hickling, a young Englishman, was drowned in the Assiniboine at Kemnay bridge Thursday night. He is supposed to have gone bathing, as his clothes were found upon the bank.

Lost His Left Leg.

Peterboro, May 21.—At the Nicholl's Hospital Thursday night, William Maxwell, a young man from Irondale, had his left leg amputated above the knee as a result of an accident at Gull Lake. The unfortunate young man was employed with the Dickson Lumber Company and had his leg crushed while working on a boom. The operation was successful, and the patient is doing well.

Hurt While Fishing.

Windsor, May 21.—James Taylor of Windsor met with a serious accident yesterday, which may result in the amputation of both legs. While fishing from one of the spring piles at the Canadian Pacific ferry slip, his legs were caught between the piles by the bumping of one of the huge car ferries, which was just landing. Taylor was removed to his home, where he lies in a very serious condition.

Struck By Lightning.

Cornwall, May 21.—During a thunderstorm Thursday afternoon lightning struck the house of Levi Fyckes, Cornwall Township, ripping the carpet off the floor and setting fire to the furniture in the parlor. The plaster walls were perforated, as if with a Gatling gun. Mr. Fyckes threw the burning furniture outdoors and extinguished the blaze.

Automatic Rifles.

London, May 21.—The forthcoming Bisley prize meeting includes competition of automatic rifles with novel conditions attached.

Helped to Go West.

Ottawa, May 21.—The Italian colony at Montreal has sent a deputation composed of Signors Mariotti and Pittelti to interview the Government with a view of obtaining relief for the 5,000 of their fellow-countrymen who have landed at Montreal this spring and have failed to realize their anticipations of finding employment. Mr. Sifton expressed the readiness of his department to place all the departmental machinery at the disposal of those who desired to go to the West and take up land.

TROUBLE IN THIBET.

Danger in British Advance and Retreat Would Raise Yellow Peril.

London, May 23.—The Thibetan affair offers fresh illustration of the feebleness of the Chinese Government and the inconvenience and risks to which England is exposed. The British expedition is surrounded with a superior mobile force, and is compelled to remain defensive until it can be strongly reinforced. Chinese influence is paralyzed, and apparently the British must choose between a hazardous advance to Lhassa and an ignominious retreat to the Indian frontier. The moral effect of a retreat is naturally dreaded in these days of Oriental revival, when the imagination of Asiatics is inflamed by victories over western civilization. Lord Curzon, luckily, is at hand, to give the British Government advice on this most difficult question.

NEWS OF THE WAR IS NOW EXCEEDINGLY SCARCE.

No Change Has Taken Place For Past Ten Days,

Correspondent With Japs Headquarters Heard From, But the Location is Kept Secret—Reported Sortie of Russians From Port Arthur Not Confirmed—Rumors of Japanese Advance—Russians Fought Vigorously.

Tokio, May 23.—It is stated on good authority that the Japanese have captured Kaiping, and are driving the Russians back in the direction of Yinhow. Kaiping is on the railroad about fifty miles south of Newchwang.

DYING FROM PLAGUE.

Russian Soldiers Take Disease to Which Japs Are Immune.

Paris, May 23.—A despatch from Moscow to The Matin says that one of the first horrors resulting from the war in the Orient is a new disease, known as the "green plague," which is spreading among Russian soldiers who are quartered in Chinese houses. Undoubtedly the bacteria of this disease are always present in these houses, but the yellow race is immune to them, while Caucasians are easy victims. The first symptom of the plague is an affection of the eyes. Then the sufferer has frightful sweats and his body becomes covered with green spots. The army surgeons are totally at sea concerning this new disease and the soldiers are dying like flies.

That the Japanese do not boast in face of their successes is winning the praise of the French press. The newspapers would scarcely believe that the Japanese were capable of such restraint and self-effacement.

The newspapers, too, point out that neither combatant is operating on home territory, and that the attitude of the Coreans and Manchurians toward the belligerents is bound to have much to do with the result of the struggle. Everything indicates to-day that Japan is the favorite both in Corea and Manchuria, and, it must be remembered, the Manchus are the most self-reliant of all the Chinese family.

Russia's Financial Standing.

The continental newspapers are paving the way toward a new Russian loan by publishing pictures of the Czar's treasure vaults bursting with gold. Financiers, knowing that the Russian gold reserve must, by law, equal in value half the issue of currency—which is 600,000,000 rubles—and that, above this amount, the gold reserve must equal the currency, dollar for dollar, estimate that Russia has enough cash to last six months. And this, calculating the expenses of the war at 400,000,000 rubles monthly.

Japs Are Great Spies.

Tomsk, Siberia, May 23.—The melting of the ice on the Siberian rivers has yielded yet further evidence as to the completeness of the preparations made by the Japanese for damaging Russia's line of communications.

A boatman at Omsk, noticing something protruding from an ice floe, summoned his companions and towed the floe ashore. A huddled human form was then dimly perceived through its glassy covering.

When the ice was hacked away there was discovered a little yellow-faced man, with an agonized expression in his protruding eyes. Although dressed in Russian clothing, the boatman suspected that he was a Japanese, and carted the body to the police office.

A search showed that the dead man was a Japanese secret agent. Under his shirt were found a number of Japanese documents, and a letter from his wife in Kioto addressed to Nagasaki, counselling him to be cautious in the perilous enterprise he was undertaking.

It is assumed that the spy, while attempting to blow up the railway bridge, fell into a hole in the ice and was drowned.

Bogatyr's Fate Uncertain.

St. Petersburg, May 23.—Private advices from Vladivostock confirm the report that the cruiser Bogatyr ran on the rocks. Officials claim that they have no intimation regarding the incident, and it is not known whether or not the ship has yet been hauled off.

Shell Killed 25 Japs.

Tokio, May 23.—During the reconnaissance of Port Arthur, made by Admiral Togo on Friday of last week, a shell hit the torpedo boat destroyer Akatsuki, killing one officer and 24 men.

Russian Soldiers Loyal.

St. Petersburg, May 23.—Gen. Kuropatkin on Saturday sent the following telegram to Emperor Nicholas:

"To-day, in the presence of all the troops here, forming the chief force of one of our divisions, a thanksgiving service in honor of St. Nicholas, the miracle-worker, was celebrated.

"After a te deum, I thanked the troops in behalf of Your Majesty for their valiant, self-denying services, and personally communicated to them the tenor of Your Majesty's despatch of May 20. The troops replied with a hearty cheer to the wishes I expressed for Your Majesty's health and long life.

"The newly-created knights of the military orders and all of the wounded officers and men of the regiments present were then called out, and the troops, headed by myself, marched past these brave men."

Russians Probably Stayed in Port.

London, May 22.—A despatch from St. Petersburg to Reuter's Telegram Co. says that the report of a sortie by the Port Arthur garrison has not been confirmed. It appears, says the despatch, to have originated in the receipt of Lieut.-Gen. Stoessel's report of the fight at Kinchau. This, together with the fact that Gen. Stoessal commands at Port Arthur, gives rise to the rumor that the garrison had made a sortie.

Positively No Change in Situation.

London, May 23.—The Daily Telegraph this morning prints the following despatch, dated May 19, from its correspondent at the Japanese headquarters, which the despatch does not locate. There has been no change in the position here for the past ten days. Our advanced division is in touch with the enemy near Maotien Pass, where the Liayang road traverses the defile. The Russian line extends from Haicheng to the west of Maotien Pass.

Russians Fought With Vigor.

Tokio, May 23.—(5 p.m.)—A supplemental report was received here yesterday, covering the opposition encountered by the Japanese force, which landed at Takushan on May 20. The Russians consisted of a squadron of the independent Trans-Baikal Cossacks. They vigorously resisted the Japanese advance and only retreated after one officer and nine men were killed and a number of men wounded. One Russian officer and four men were captured. The Japanese lost one man killed. The Russians retired in the direction of Hsiuyen and Shalichai.

Rails Found Displaced When His Train Was About to Start.

St. Petersburg, May 23.—The rails were displaced on the railway just outside the town of Kremenzug when the Emperor was about to leave it Saturday in the course of his southern trip. The danger was discovered before the Imperial train started. Another train was upset. The official account says that four persons were injured in the accident.

Men's Trousers

Youdon't very often have an opportunity to buy stylish serviceable trousers at the remarkably low prices we are offering just now.

These belonged to coats and vests that were burned in the warehouse of a Toronto Clothing House in the recent fire—the trousers were away in the factory, being made at the time. Instead of retaining the odd garments they offered them to us at exactly Half Price.

The materials are the New Dark Stripe and Scotch Tweed effects, and are made after the most favored shapes worn this season. You'll be agreeably surprised with them. All sizes at

ANIMAL STOWAWAYS.

On Ships and In Cargoes They Often Cross the Ocean.

New York has for many years received numbers of destitute aliens of the animal world from the holds of the banana ships. The trade in bananas is an enormous one, and many of them come from sources at no great distance, whence the fruit can be brought without cold storage. The big clusters of bananas are peculiarly adapted for harboring "stowaways." Among these are enumerated numbers of small, harmless snakes, lizards of various kinds, occasionally, it is [illegible], a young iguana and large and particularly venomous spiders. But real pests which survive and increase in a new country are fortunately rarely transported accidentally. The one serious instance is the chigo, or "jigger." It is said to have been transported from Central America to the East Indies.

The Colorado beetle has never succeeded in making a home in England, though mosquitoes of a peculiarly ferocious though nonmalarial kind are said to have appeared in English hotels. Several corn beetles, a very destructive type of insect and among the greatest enemies of those who would like to create an "emergency" store of corn, have been "dumped" in England with foreign grain and have established themselves.

Bird "stowaways" on ships are very numerous in the narrow parts of the Mediterranean during the migration. They also frequently alight on ships when these are near the coast, being then very much exhausted and glad to find "a rest for the soles of their feet." Golden crested wrens sometimes descend in a storm on some North sea smack on a migration night and even alight on steamers by day. It was confidently stated that a golden crested wren was seen to fly from off the back of a short eared owl when the latter came in from the sea and alighted near a jetty on the east coast.

The belief that some little birds come as "stowaways" on the backs of larger ones was held in reference to the Canada geese by the North American Indians and by the Turks of Cyprus, who alleged the same of the crane and stork. That some birds must travel great distances on ships crossing the Atlantic seems probable. The American bittern and two American cuckoos have been found in England, the first rather frequently. It is conjectured that they can only have crossed the ocean by traveling on the masts and yards of ships, probably steamers, as otherwise they must have died of starvation.—London Spectator.

The easiest way to outwit a liar is to tell the truth.

Willing to Overlook It.

"Dear sir," the general manager of the fire insurance company wrote to the local agent, "a few weeks ago your negligence in failing to notify the owners of a large office building that their insurance was about to expire, and to solicit them to reinsure, lost us a customer, and we gave you a month's notice to find another situation. Inasmuch, however, as that building was burned day before yesterday, we have decided to recall the notice. We will overlook the offense this time, but don't let it happen again."

Laborers of the Andes.

The majority of the laborers in the mountains of Peru are Cholos, or Indians born in the Sierra. They are found incapable of doing efficient work on the coasts or in the warmer altitudes without a long course of acclimatization. If gangs of these Cholos have for special purposes been taken down suddenly from the Sierra to work at altitudes of from 2,000 to 5,000 feet sickness and fever have resulted from the change.

TIMELY TOPICS.

They sang the National Anthem in the churches yesterday, and somehow or other it came natural to us old-timers to say "God Save the Queen." The old order changeth, but habits formed in a lifetime are not so soon forgotten, and as people sang there came crowding back on many the long years gone by, when dear old Queen Victoria ruled this goodly pleasant land and made the Victorian era a beneficence to and the admiration of the whole world.

* * *

The wise, gentle and loving old lady has gone to her fathers, but her memory is still with us, and always will be till we ourselves shake hands with old Charon and take a seat in his boat for a free ride across the Styx. Canadians, great and small, take a back seat for nobody when it comes to respect and admiration for King Edward the Peacemaker, whom God preserve. But on the 24th of May we cannot forget that we are celebrating the birthday of his mother, Victoria, R.I., the Widow of Windsor, the worthy mother of a worthy son, for whom Britons everywhere were ready to fight and die, if need be, and whose memory will ever be green in the Land of the Union Jack.

* * *

Will we ever forget the day when good old Queen Victoria was buried; the day of which Bret Harte wrote:

When your men bowed heads together
With hushed lips,
And the globe swung out from gladness
To eclipse;
When the drums from the equator
To the pole
Carried 'round it an unending
Funeral roll—
When your capitals from Norway
To the Cape
Through their streets, and from their houses
Trailed their crape;
Still the sun awoke to gladness,
As of old;
And the stars their midnight beauty
Still unrolled.
For—the glory born of goodness
Never dies,
And its flag is not half-masted
In the skies.

* * *

So to-morrow, though our rejoicings may be tempered with sadness, let us keep high holiday and "whoop things up," in good old Canadian fashion, in honor of the day. Put out your flags and banners and don your best attire. Don't stint the boys in the matter of fireworks, remember we were boys ourselves once. May the day never come when the sons and daughters of this fair Dominion, on the 24th of May, forget the memory of good Queen Victoria or become lukewarm in their loyalty to her son. God Save the King!

* * *

Good luck and a pleasant day to all Bellevillians who are to-morrow going out of town to enjoy themselves. We're only sorry they can't stay at home and do it.

* * *

O, dearest May
You're weeping all the day
Do please dry up to-morrow
And let Old Sol have full sway.

* * *

The man on the next block is becoming convinced that Miss May is a prohibitionist.

* * *

It was a pity the police could not have put a stop to the fire cracker nuisance on Front street last Saturday night. It is a miracle there were not several runaways.

* * *

A fellow might have thought, from the fusilade which was going on, that he was listening to the Japs peppering the Russians in Manchuria.

SOME GOOD ADVICE.

(Toronto Telegram.)

Toronto is full of old countrymen—English, Irish and Scotch—who have made their way to high places in the life of their adopted country.

These old countrymen did not travel to success by taking side trips into the newspapers with their complaints about Canada and Canadians.

The lonely Englishman is confronted by no prejudice which he cannot conquer.

Englishmen are not all Solomons and not all fools.

Canadians are not unanimously inspired or idiots. There are fool Englishmen and fool Canadians. They are few compared to the Englishmen and Canadians who improve on acquaintance.

Speaking of young Marshall, the chess expert, the Kingston News and Times says: "Marshall played against the late Rev. Mr. Rayson at the Y.M.C.A. in Kingston a few years ago, with Belleville, in a game with the local club."

The Montreal Herald claims that Marshall, the chess man, is a native of Montreal, and says he was born in Point St. Charles. The clever young man may soon have as many birthplaces as Homer.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"ARE YOU A MASON?"

"Are You a Mason?" one of the brightest farces offered to the American public in years comes to this city on Wednesday next, May 25, at the Carman Opera House. Leo Dietrichstein, author and adapter of at least a dozen recent successes in the big cities, is responsible for the manuscript. It is considered one of the best efforts, and for real scintillating bon mots and deep shafts of satire easily takes front rank in the humorous offerings of out times. Repartee abounds and seemingly inextricable difficulties are overcome by Amos Bloodgood in his efforts to convince his wife that he has joined the Masons, when he has not. By various pretexts he keeps up the hoax until very near the end of the play. Much against his will, he is induced to attend a lodge social by a bona fide Mason, and there before his wife and friends follows his undoing. The plot adjusts itself naturally, and the final curtain finds him a candidate for Masonic orders.

"REUBEN IN NEW YORK."

Continuous and genuine fun is promised on the night that Manager John Curran presents "Reuben in New York" at our local playhouse. As laughter is the only true tonic of the soul which alone drives away carking care and really rests the mind, so every one given to a fit of the "blues" should not fail to witness the presentation of this rollicking farce, which we are told will surely fresco all melancholy faces with many smiles. The troubles of "Reuben" as portrayed by a company of pretty girls and funny men should effectually banish all care from the minds of every one of its beholders. If pretty costumes, gorgeous scenery and novel mechanical effects can aid in rendering its witty dialogue, ludicrous situations, pretty songs and exquisite dances more merry, then Manager Curran will have reached the acme of irresistible and unqualified success. At the opera house on Monday, May 30.

THE INTELLIGENCER is printed and published for The Intelligencer Printing and Publishing House (Limited) by CHARLES JAMES BOWELL, of the City of Belleville, in the County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, at their Office, No. 403, Front Street, Belleville, Ont.

Nothing so suddenly obstructs the perspiration as sudden transitions from heat to cold. Heat rarifies the blood, quickens the circulation and increases the perspiration, but when these are suddenly checked the consequences must be bad. The most common cause of disease is obstructed perspiration, or what commonly goes by the name of catching cold. Coughs, colds, sore throat, etc., if attended to in time are easily subdued, but if allowed to run their own course, generally prove the fore-runner of more dangerous diseases. Nine-tenths of the consumptives date their affliction from a NEGLECTED COLD, and the diseases that are caused by wet feet, damp clothes, or exposure are more numerous than are generally supposed. One of the most efficacious medicines for all diseases of the throat and lungs is Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It promotes a free and easy expectoration, which frees the lungs from viscid phlegm by changing the secretions from a diseased to a healthy state.

Only 900 people in 1,000,000 die of old age.

Dr. J. D. Kellog's Dysentery Cordial is a speedy cure for dysentery, diarrhoea, cholera, summer complaint, sea sickness and complaints incidental to children teething. It gives immediate relief to those suffering from the effects of indiscretion in eating unripe fruit, cucumbers, etc. It acts with wonderful rapidity and never fails to conquer the disease. No one need fear cholera if they have a bottle of this medicine convenient.

Few men realize what large dividends they can draw on kindness.

How to Cleanse the System.—Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are the result of scientific study of the effects of extracts of certain roots and herbs upon the digestive organs. Their use has demonstrated in many instances that they regulate the action of the liver and kidneys, purify the blood, and carry off all morbid accumulations from the system. They are easy to take, and their action is mild and beneficial.

Cut the trunk, the branches fall of themselves.

Always on Hand.—Mr. Thomas H. Porter, Lower Ireland, P.Q., writes: "My son, 18 months old, had croup so bad that nothing gave him relief until a neighbor brought me some of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, which I gave him, and in six hours he was cured. It is the best medicine I ever used, and I would not be without a bottle of it in my house."

A tailor made woman is one of the noblest works of man.

Messrs. Northrop & Lyman Co. are the proprietors of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, which is now being sold in immense quantities throughout the Dominion. It is welcomed by the suffering invalid everywhere with emotions of delight, because it banishes pain and gives instant relief. This valuable specific for almost "every ill that flesh is heir to," is valued by the sufferer as more precious than gold. It is the elixir of life to many a wasted frame. To the farmer it is indispensable, and it should be in every house.

A self made man has his private opinion as to what is the noblest work of God.

Give Holloway's Corn Cure a trial. It removed ten corns from one pair of feet without any pain. What it has done once it will do again.

Look out for the man with an imagination strong enough to draw a dollar out of your pocket.

A Wonderful Cure. — Mr. David Smith, Coe Hill, Ont., writes: "For the benefit of others I wish to say a few words about Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery. About a year ago I took a very severe cough, had a virulent sore on my lips, was bad with dyspepsia, constipation and general debility. I tried almost every conceivable remedy, outwardly and inwardly, to cure the sore, but all to no purpose. I had often thought of trying Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, so I got a bottle, and when I had used about one half the sore showed evident signs of healing. By the time that bottle was done it had about disappeared and my general health was improving fast. I was always of a very bilious habit and had used quinine and lemon juice with very little effect. But since using three bottles of the Vegetable Discovery the biliousness is entirely gone and my general health is excellent. I am 60 years old. Parties using it should continue it for some time after they think they are cured. It is by far the best health restorer I know."

The truthfulness of what a man says doesn't always depend on the amount of noise he makes in saying it.

It does not seem as though there were as many as thirty-one days in any month, the way rent day rolls around.

Some second thoughts occur several minutes later.

Business men should see our envelopes. A number of different grades to select from.

The Beautiful House

The woodwork of your house, the furniture, the lacquered, japanned and enameled iron work, may be new, but if you will use "Liquid Veneer" it will become sparkling in brilliancy and attractive as a diamond. And if the same is faded, scratched, or if the varnish has gone the way of all flesh, "Liquid Veneer" will resurrect the whole scheme. It will take that half sick furniture and put a new face on it that is as brilliant as the sun. It is not a "furniture polish," it is not sticky, never catches the dust; it is easily applied in a few minutes with a cloth, no rubbing is necessary. It is a cleaner, disinfectant, then imparts a most bright and finished surface. Try a sample bottle only 5c, 1-2 pint bottle 50c. For sale only by

Chicago Canadians to Celebrate.

Chicago, May 23.—Everything is in readiness for the Canadian Veterans' banquet to be held at the Victoria Hotel, corner Michigan avenue and Van Buren street, May 24 (Queen's Birthday evening). The president, Dr. J. A. McGill, and his secretary, Joshua Hill, reported to the meeting of Veterans Saturday night that the program had been completed and that well-known vocalists will sing popular airs, including "The Soldiers of the Queen," "Tommy Atkins," "The Maple Leaf Forever," "Rule Britannia," and speeches will be delivered by prominent men.

For Judgment Guarantee.

Montreal, May 23.—It is understood that as soon as preliminaries are attended to a request will be made for a judgment guarantee of a bond issue for the construction of the Canso bridge, the cost to be $6,000,000. U. C. Ross of Sydney, who has been in Ottawa to secure the time for completion extended this year, says that a precedent has been established in one case of the Quebec bridge. He also announces that the steel superstructure, which will represent more than half the total cost, will be manufactured at the Sydney Steel Works. He adds that Waddell & Hendricks of Kansas City are the men completing the working plans.

COLLECTIVE NAMES.

Old English Terms For Groups of Persons and Animals.

In a book on British sports, written in the eighteenth century, Joseph Strutt gives the old English terms for groups of various beasts as follows: "When beasts went together in companies there was said to be a pride of lions, a lepe of leopards, a herd of harts, of bucks and of all sorts of deer; a bevy of roes, a sloth of boars, a sownder of wild swine, a drift of tame swine, a route of wolves, a harras of horses, a rag of colts, a stud of mares, a pace of asses, a baren of mules, a team of oxen, a drove of kine, a flock of sheep, a tribe of goats, a skulk of foxes, a cete of badgers, a richness of martins, a fesynes of ferrets, a huske or a down of hares, a nest of rabbits, a clowder of cats and a kyndall of young cats, a shrewdness of apes and a labor of moles."

Similar terms were applied to gatherings of human beings. Strutt gives them as follows: "A state of princes, a skulk of thieves, an observance of hermits, a lying of pardoners, a subtiltie of sergeants, an untruth of sompners, a multiplying of husbands, a safeguard of porters, a stalk of foresters, a blast of hunters, a draft of butlers, a temperance of cooks, a melody of harpers, a poverty of pipers, a drunkenship of cobblers, a disguising of taylors, a wandering of tinkers, a malpertness of pedlars, a fighting of beggars, a rayful—that is, a netful—of knaves, a blush of boys, a bevy of ladies, a nonpatience of wives, a gagle of women, a gagle of geese."

In the old days the word "leash" was applied to three greyhounds, while two were "a brace." On the other hand, two spaniels or harriers were called "a couple." A number of hounds went under the term of "a mute of hounds," while it was correct to speak of "a kennel of raches, a litter of whelps and a cowardice of curs."

WHY THEY ARE POOR.

Their ideas are larger than their purses.

They are easy dupes of schemers and promoters.

They reverse the maxim, "Duty before pleasure."

They have too many and too expensive amusements.

They do not think it worth while to save nickels and dimes.

They have risked a competence in trying to get rich quickly.

They allow friends to impose upon their good nature and generosity.

They try to do what others expect of them, not what they can afford.

They prefer to incur debt rather than to do work which they consider beneath them.

They think it will be time enough to begin to save for a rainy day when the rainy day comes.

They risk all their eggs in one basket when they are not in a position to watch or control it.

Helping Him Out.

Mrs. Hoyt, wife of Charles Hoyt, the playwright, added much to the enjoyment of a Lambs' club banquet in Chicago by her sharp and witty tongue, always ready for a home thrust. Mr. Hoyt was second on the list of speakers and was badly frightened. He concluded that he would plunge quickly into his speech when called upon, and, with this idea, he arose briskly when announced and started in: "Ladies and gentlemen, I feel honored, I'm sure, by this request of the toastmaster, but it is so unexpected I really had no time to prepare—a—I really had no time to prepare—a"— And he stopped. Every one felt sorry for him, but Mrs. Hoyt seemed in no way disturbed. When she noticed his predicament she turned toward him suddenly and called out, "Why, Charley, you did it perfectly this morning!"

Reading and Thinking.

The things one merely reads about never stick. Those on which one thinks become permanent acquisitions; hence the man who is not afraid of thinking and who does not dread "that cursed hour in the dark" is at a distinct advantage on every ground. He passes the time without being bored, and he strengthens his mind. To say this may no doubt sound slightly priggish, but it is none the less true. The man who can enjoy and make use of his own thoughts has a heritage which can never be alienated. Even blindness for him loses some of its terrors.—London Spectator.

An Eye For an Eye.

"My cook, an old darky, informed me one morning: 'Miss Annie, I's goin' to be married tonight. Is you got a present for me?'

"'But, Maria,' I said, 'you've got a husband alive and haven't been divorced. It would be bigamy!'

"'Well, Miss Annie, I don't care; he's done bigotted fust.'"

Getting Out of Debt.

"What was it your husband wanted to see me about?" inquired Mrs. Newliwed's papa.

"I think he wanted to borrow a couple of hundred dollars from you," she said. "He's so anxious to get out of debt."

Not Needed Below.

"This is a funny ship."

"How so?"

"They have no clock in the cabin."

"Oh, no! But they always keep a watch on the deck."

Cutting Him.

"It's cruel of you to snub him. He's a good sort, if he is a rough diamond."

"That's the reason he needs cutting."—Judge.

THE SICKROOM MIRROR.

You Must Be Discreet In Allowing the Patient to Use It.

The looking glass, whether a plus or minus quantity, plays a more important part in the sickroom than most nurses and physicians give it credit for. The patient who is allowed to look into one is likely to be frightened into a relapse at sight of his cadaverous appearance, while the one who is not allowed to look is similarly affected by the refusal, which he attributes to the fact that his face is too much for his nerves.

"All things considered, I think it a good plan to give a sick person a chance to look at himself occasionally," said a doctor. "Of course the indulgence must be granted with discretion. If a patient is really looking seedy a turn at the looking glass is equivalent to signing his death warrant, but if taken at a time when braced up by some stimulant or a natural ebullition of vital force a few minutes of communion with his own visage beats any tonic I can prescribe. It thrills the patient with new hope. It makes him feel that he isn't quite so far gone as he had thought and that possibly a fight for life is, after all, worth while.

"Being thus sensitive, a persistent withholding of a mirror convinces the patient that he must be too horrible for contemplation, and he promptly decides that the best thing for him to do is to give up the ghost and get out of the way. That is one mistake hospitals were apt to make up to a few years ago. When I was a young fellow, getting my first practice after graduation, I served on the staff of several hospitals, and in all, especially in the free wards, those aids to vanity were strictly forbidden. The deprivation went hard with many of the patients, particularly the women, and when I came to have a little authority among doctors and nurses I advised a judicious application of looking glass treatment. I still advise it both in hospital and private practice, for I find that a little reassurance as to the state of the complexion and the appearance in general goes a long way toward effecting a cure."

NUT VALUES.

Chestnuts are starchy and take the place of potatoes.

Brazil or cream nuts are very rich in fat and should be blended with pecans, English walnuts or hazelnuts.

Black and white walnuts as well as hickory nuts contain nitrogen and oil, but no starch. Blend with rice or potatoes.

Cocoanuts contain very little nitrogen, but are rich in oil. The fiber is difficult of digestion. The cream and milk are excellent for salads and sauces.

Peanuts are very rich in nitrogen and contain considerable starch and oil. When boiled and mashed they are much better than when roasted and ground.

Almonds are really digesters or appetizers. They are too expensive to be used alone in large quantities. Four or five thoroughly masticated at the end of a meal will frequently aid in the digestion of other foods.

The Man and the Match.

"Show me two men with unlighted cigarettes, and if I watched them for a minute I can tell you correctly whether the one who has the match is from Philadelphia, Boston or New York."

The speaker was a person of some observation, and his friend naturally asked:

"How can you tell?"

"In this way," said the observant man. "If the man is a Philadelphian he will strike the match, hold it for his friend to get a light, then take a light himself and throw the match away. If he is a Bostonian he will light his own cigarette first, then hold the match for his friend and after that throw it away. If he is a New Yorker, however, he will strike the match, light his own cigarette and throw the match away."

Spencer and Music.

Mr. Herbert Spencer cultivated what he called the "receptive sense" in respect to music and was wont to speak with more than a little bitterness of the general desire to be a performer. One performer who had been chosen to play Beethoven for him was thunderstruck on arrival at Mr. Spencer's residence at being asked to render an extract from one of Sullivan's operas. Light music had a charm for the philosopher which light literature never had.

An Apt Pupil.

Teacher—James, you were late yesterday morning. Pupil—Yes; but, as you were saying to the class today, we should let bygones be bygones. Teacher—But have you no excuse to offer? Pupil—In that same talk you said that one who was good at excuses was usually good at nothing else. Under the circumstances I think it better for me not to do anything that will lower me in your estimation.

A Reminder.

Mother—Johnny, on your way home from school stop at the store and get me a stick of candy and a bar of soap. Father—What do you want of a stick of candy? Mother—That's so he'll remember the soap.

No Chance For Him.

"Come on; have a game of poker!"

"I don't believe in games of chance."

"That need make no difference. Come on and play."

Journalism.

Reporter—Senator Bilkins has absolutely nothing to say. Editor—Well, boil it down. We are terribly crowded tonight.—Puck.

True to His Friends.

An answer to an advertisement for a school assistant "capable of teaching the classics as far as Homer and Vergil" makes one of the best stories in the dean of Bristol's book, "Odds and Ends."

"Sir," the answer ran, "with reference to the advertisement which were in the Times respecting a school assistant, I beg to state that I should be happy to fill that situation, but as most of my friends reside in London and not knowing how far Homer and Vergil is from town, I beg to state that I should not like to engage to teach the classics farther than Hammersmith or Furnham Green, or, at the very utmost distance, farther than Brentford."

He Understood the People.

One of Jay Gould's campaigns as a dealer in railways was with the Wabash system of railroads. He got control and after effecting a reorganization which increased the capital stock and also the bonded debt sold them out. It is related of him at this time that an associate said to him, "Mr. Gould, don't you think you are bonding this much higher than the property will stand?" "That may be," answered he, "but the American people are mighty partial to bonds."

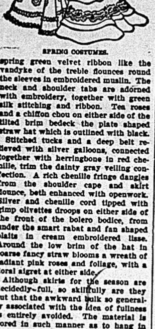
FRESH FASHIONS.

THE NEW DECORATIVE DETAILS ARE MANY AND FASCINATING.

Tucks, Ruchings, Frills and Folds All In Favor—Silver Braid and Chenille Cord and Fringe to Be Used. The Skirt of the Season.

Tucks, tucks, everywhere tucks, also ruchings and a new narrow, corrugated frill. A sort of crossway fold outlined with braid is another novelty. Braids, especially silver braid, in spring costumes are to be used by miles, and chenille cords and fringes are introduced in great quantities. Some of these decorative details are well shown in the two lovely spring toilets here illustrated. A shell pink etamine is set off with old fashioned ruches edged with spring green velvet ribbon like the vandyke of the treble flounces round the sleeves in embroidered muslin. The neck and shoulder tabs are adorned with embroidery, together with green silk stitching and ribbon. Tea roses and a chiffon chou on either side of the tilted brim bedeck the plate shaped straw hat which is outlined with black.

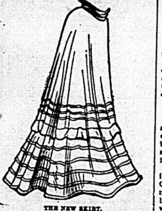


SPRING COSTUMES.

Stitched tucks and a deep belt relieved with silver galloons, connected together with herringbone in red chenille, trim the dainty gray veiling confection. A rich chenille fringe dangles from the shoulder cape and skirt flounce, both enhanced with openwork. Silver and chenille cord tipped with gimp olivettes droops on either side of the front of the bolero bodice, from under the smart rabat and fan shaped plaits in cream embroidered lisse. Around the low brim of the hat in coarse fancy straw blooms a wreath of radiant pink roses and foliage, with a floral aigret at either side.

Although skirts for the season are decidedly full, so skillfully are they cut that the awkward bulk so generally associated with the idea of fullness is entirely avoided. The material is gored in such manner as to hang in heavy but graceful folds from the waist to the hem.

The present sketch is designed for light cloth, serge hopsack or cashmere, and is indeed suitable for practically any and all the fashionable fabrics. It is cut the accepted length for town walking wear, just clearing the ground, and bears as trimming many rows of ribbon.



THE NEW SKIRT.

This same ribbon represents one of the most up to date forms of decoration and is employed equally in the satin and taffeta varieties, run simply to the skirt at the upper edge and left unattached at the lower.

AMY VARNUM.

Fashion's Echoes.

Shades just "off" the pure white, as oyster, ivory and cream, have become very popular for wedding gowns.

Serviceable coats and skirts are made up in light tweeds or serges.

The ostrich pompons and aigrets give a touch of smartness to new hats.

Disks, round spots, from a pin point to the expanse of a silver dollar, are the hall mark of latest gown fabrics—silks, voiles, gauzes, tissues, grenadines and the like.

Colors this season run from medium to light pastel tints. Glaring or eccentric hues have no vogue.

Taffeta suits are great favorites, trig and correct, in pin points, checks, etc., and all sorts of small figures.

An increase of flounces and ruffles on full skirts is very noticeable in latest Parisian models.

The linen shirt waist suit makes the smartest dress for morning and general wear. Robin's egg blue is a favorite color.

Hand embroidery and fancy stitching appear extensively on washable gowns.

Lawns, dimities, chambrays, ginghams, linens, batiste, madras and all the old time favorites appear among wash dress fabrics for the season.

The toque pointed more or less at the front leads in millinery.

Boers For Bisley.

Lindsay, May 23.—(C.A.P.)—A public subscription is being raised in the Transvaal to send a team of Boer shots to Bisley. The team is sanguine that it will capture the King's prize.

Presbyterian Controversy.

Buffalo, N.Y., May 21.—The business session of the Presbyterian General Assembly was very brief Saturday. Adjournment was taken until Monday morning. The absorbing topic among the commissioners is the proposed union with the Cumberland Church, which has been isolated from the parent body since 1890. It is the opinion of many that the battle is going to be between the leaders and college professors on the one hand and the rank and file on the other.

The question involved has no relation to the position of the Presbyterian Church of the south, which became isolated in 1861 at the outbreak of the war, and with which overtures for peace are just taking form.

It is claimed by some that the confession of faith as revised a year ago now admits of union with the Cumberland branch. Others believe differently.

Labor Convention in Berlin.

Berlin, May 23.—The second annual convention of the Labor Educational Association of Western Ontario, which was organized in Woodstock on July 1, 1903, will convene in Berlin on Victoria Day.

This will be an important gathering of the labor leaders of Western Ontario, to discuss the labor movement. Some of the matters coming before the meeting will be the advisability of sending labor representatives to Great Britain to stop the importation of laborers and mechanics into Canada; also that of enlarging the scope of the association so as to embrace the whole province. About fifty delegates will attend.

Follow Blake's Advice.

London, May 23.—(C. A. P.)—The annual convention of the United Irish League in Great Britain on the proposal of Hon. Edward Blake, M. P., abolished local home rule in the affairs of the League. The proposition was vigorously opposed, but was carried by a small majority on the second vote. T. P. O'Connor, the president, declared that the League by its action in the Gateshead bye-election saved England from Chamberlainism.

Held By Police.

Kingston, May 23.—Samuel Norris is held by the police while a series of thefts of recent and remote dates are being looked into. He had jewelry on him when arrested that aroused suspicion, and he said a woman gave it to him. The woman denied, but said Norris stole it and then associated his name with other mysterious robberies, which the police are investigating.

Popular Presbyterian Preacher.

Ottawa, May 23.—Rev. Norman MacLeod, who will be inducted as pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Brockville, on Wednesday, preached his farewell sermon in Mackay Church here last night. He is exceptionally popular, and there is great regret at his removal.

Will Become Premier.

Montreal, Que., May 23.—It is now quite understood that Hon. Horace Archambault, attorney-general of the province, will succeed Premier Parent at the close of the session, as the present leader of the Government will accept the chairmanship of the G.T.R. Railway Commission.

THE MESSENGER FROM KHARTOOM

BY ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

Author of "Dr. Jack," "Dr. Jack's Wife," "Miss Caprice," Etc., Etc.

Mynheer Joe thoughtfully rubs the end of his nose, as though by that operation he might arouse his thinking faculties. Then he turns with a smile upon his friend.

"I begin to see you were right, my dear boy. That mistake may cause me no end of trouble, and yet something held my hand when I had the chance to finish the baron. It is beyond me to explain the feeling that came over me. I only know it existed. You've seen just such periods in your own life, when a power controlled your actions. Let that go. What I want to tell you now concerns us both, since you appear to be in the same ship as myself. In ten hours the Russian has formed a plan of action to bring about our destruction. We are in the web!"

He says this as coolly as though asking for fire on account of a neglected cigar; not the least trace of emotion can be detected in his voice. One would not imagine that he refers to their lives being in jeopardy through this plot of the baron's.

As for Sandy, he shows that he can take the matter just as coolly. Even if the enemy be near, advancing on the double-quick, so to speak, that is no reason a man of nerve should be rattled and lose his presence of mind.

"Ah! Couple of foolish flies, eh? The bloated old spider has managed to spin a web around us while we've been taking in the sights of Bombay. Is that the trick, Joe?" he remarks.

"Something in that strain, you'll find, friend Sandy. I haven't been quite able to make it out myself yet; but, all the same, it's as plain as the nose on your face that this shrewd old chap has been working while we were playing, and in that way has stolen a march on us nicely. Listen now, and you shall have some particulars."

Mynheer Joe casts a glance around, as though he would use at least all ordinary caution. Then he gives the eager war correspondent the benefit of his late interview with faithful Kassee.

Sandy's manner is something of a thermometer, indicating his feelings. When the story grows warm, he restlessly fingers his cigar, twirling it between his thumb and finger. As a quiet portion of the recital is reached, he puffs unconcernedly at the weed or else idly flips the ashes from the end.

All the while he imbibes the facts which fall from the lips of Mynheer Joe. Sandy is much of the nature of a sponge. He greedily sucks in all he can reach, but means to give it out agains upon the least pressure. That is his business in life—to take and give, retaining nothing. If what issues from his pen is garbed in a new dress, so that it can hardly be recognized as the same impression that he received, that is the nature of things and only to be expected; for Sandy himself is the wonderful machine that grasps the rough material, and with its magic breath transforms it into the daintiest of fabrics.

It can be readily set down, therefore, that the active little newspaper man is a good listener. His memory is astonishingly tenacious for one so accustomed to making notes, and he will not forget a word of what has been said.

It is a thrilling narrative Joe gives him, and would even be so were it any other than themselves thus placed in danger. At the same time, Joe makes no rhetorical flourishes in his narrative, but gives it in a plain, every-day style, such as appears to be a part of his nature.

Perhaps their unique surroundings have something to do with lending the story color and making it appear more romantic. This is clearly possible, because the bright costumes, the strange language, the bizarre contents of the shelf-like shops where the proprietors sit cross-legged, smoking calmly and awaiting the advent of customers. All these things, seen and heard under the numerous colored lights that make Bhendy Bazar Road seem like a glimpse of fairyland, must have their effect upon the sensitive nerves, and cause one to look upon the affair in quite anther humor than might be the case were it all done under the garish light of day and amid other less powerful surroundings.

What the full text of Mynheer Joe's narrative may be does not concern us just at present. In good time its nature must be laid bare, and all its details discussed, as the anticipated thunderbolt falls upon our friends.

Sandy feels that the situation is grave and realizes his position in the matter. Before he can give an expression to his feelings, however, the traveller steps on his foot. It is no accident, but an intentional dig that carries a warning with it, and quick to heed these things the little man bubbles out with a laugh that causes the last of the serious look to fly from his face.

"Capital joke, that of yours, Joe. Ah, you sly dog, always working in your little pun! It's a beastly shame to impose on an unsophisticated Yankee like myself. Never mind. I'll have my eye-teeth cut if I remain long in such disreputable company, I warrant you."

While thus delivering himself Sandy is casting his eyes around in the hope of discovering the cause of Joe's sudden new departure. What enemy has approached near enough to give the wary explorer alarm?

The first discovery Sandy makes is that Kassee, faithful Kassee, no longer stands near the elbows of his master, but has vanished as completely as though the earth has opened and swallowed him. Of course, it is not a very difficult task for a native to mingle in the crowd and lose himself, but a white man would have much more trouble, as he must be one among dozens, and his identity can be detected even some distance away.

Looking further Sandy believes he can place the threatening danger. As if by mere accident, several ugly-looking Hindoos are near them. They do not move with the crowd but linger in that one spot, which in itself seems to indicate an intention to do mischief.

Sandy has not had any actual experience with the dreaded society of Thugs in India, but he knows much of their past history and his imbibed numerous stories concerning their evil deeds. He is also aware of the fact that although Great Britain has dealt very severely with all members of this dreaded society, whenever their guilt could be proven, her strict laws have had little effect in intimidating the bravos of cord and creese. As a general rule, their work is carried on among the people of their own nationality, but there have been times when foreigners have come under the ban, although the secret order is chary of indulging in such pastime, as it always results in additional energy on the part of the government to stamp out the Curse of India.

It strikes Sandy very broadly, as he notes the presence of these fellows, that they are standing upon the brink of a precipice, where it will not require much of an effort to hurl them over. At such a critical time, it is wonderful what confidence he has in the magnetic man beside him. With Mynheer Joe to hold up the other end of the log, it does not seem as though he need fear all the combination of evil that can be brought to bear against them. Joe is a natural-born leader, and needs nothing beyond the occasion to develop his powers.

"Keep close at my side, Sandy; we have here an enemy somewhat different from any you may have met—certainly as unlike the cowardly Arabs who tackled you in the dark streets of Cairo, as day is from night. Of course, you are armed—don't answer, simply nod. That's good. I feared you might have overlooked the little gun. If the worst comes, remember we are marked men, and let every bullet find its billet. In plain words, Sandy, shoot to kill. Savvy?"

The other grunts a response that seems to satisfy Joe, who continues in the same low voice:

"I am in hopes that I may be able to ward off this threatened attack. Much depends upon the branch of the secret order these Thugs belong to. At any rate, be ready to do your duty. I must fire the first shot, and when that sounds, let go all. When these fellows get ready for business, you will hear a peculiar call loud and shrill. That cry is known by every Hindoo, and means that if they know what is good for themselves and families, they will keep shy of the spot and leave the worthy Thugs to carry out their own sweet will. Hence you see, Sandy," removing his cigar for a moment in a nonchalant way, "we need expect no assistance from this crowd."

"Luckily, I hadn't counted on it, Joe," remarks the other, in something of the same humor.

"It will be a sight worth looking at when the signal is given. Keep your eyes open, friend. You will receive a sensation—that being perhaps the first man for whose benefit the signal has been given and who lives to tell the tale."

This is enough in itself to arouse Sandy's hopes. Wide-awake he generally is, but just now his eyes seem popping out of his head with eagerness.

They saunter slowly on, while their body guard—for such the ugly looking squad of Thugs appears to be—keeps them company. At the same time, their number increases. Sandy can, with only a casual glance, count a dozen men wearing the same peculiar style of turban. There is something odd and and even grotesque about it to him, now that he notes the fact that every one of the Thugs wears one. Other turbans he has noticed, but there seems to be a peculiar significance about this one, which can only be explained by the fact that he knows the nature of the society that appears to have adopted it.

Why does not the critical moment come? Are the Thugs waiting for a certain spot to be reached where the blood of the foreigners shall drench the soil?

It is a sensation to remember, this walk along the bustling Bhendy Bazar Road, with its peculiar sights and sounds and odors, all the while attended by a select body-guard from the picked members of a secret society of assassins, the ramifications of which extend eevn beyond the limits of India's wide borders.

The most interesting part of the business comes in just here: This body guard has not their good at heart and does not thus convoy them in order to ward off danger. On the contrary, each and every individual member of it has been bound by his oath to effect the death of the two Americans. Their orders come from headquarters, and they obey with the blindness that generally marks the actions of these children of destiny. How are they to know that it is the Rusisan's gold that has bought their leaders? Little they care, since their oath binds them to blindly obey.

It is coming soon. Sandy notes that numbers of the people have already edged away. When their eyes note the strange turbans worn by these men and count the number, the fatal thirteen, they exhibit all the signs of sudden fear, and, turning, hasten from the spot in undisguised alarm.

Still Mynheer Joe shows no alarm himself, strange man that he is. What can he be made of to thus calmly face a death that most men shudder to contemplate? Really the fellow must have been born without nerves, he has such remarkable control over himself.

They have by slow stages reached a point on the road where the bazars are thickest, and ordinarily here can be seen the most interesting of all the sights Bombay offers to the curiosity-seeker.

"Listen," says Joe, suddenly, "it is coming!"

He tosses the remnant of his cigar away, as if tired of smoking. Sandy hastens to follow suit, for he wants his vision to be as clear as his other faculties are at this moment.

Mynheer Joe has not made a blunder in the matter of time. At the very moment Sandy relieves himself of his cigar there rises above the babel of voices, a startling sound. Sandy has never heard anything like it before, and, please Heaven, he does not want to again, since he knows what it signifies.

The effect is astounding. A dead silence reigns where before all was bustling confusion. People appear to shrink away, so quickly do they get their bodies out of sight. This is part of the business that amazes Sandy. He sees the eager tradesman stop in the midst of a sentence and no longer attempts to sell his wares. It would be useless anyway, since his late customer has apparently merged into space, the spot that once knew him knowing him no longer. Thus it is with all—they melt away as does the snow on an April morning when the sun rises.

Perhaps Sandy can count thirty while this change is taking place around them, or it might be he will be able to cover only half of that number, so speedily is the metamorphosis accomplished.

In one particular there is no change. The fatal thirteen Thugs still surround them. Not an avenue of escape has been left open. Plainly, if they live through this night it must be because they are able to meet the assaults of the enemy, with not only a bold front but weapons that lessen the number of the odds against them at every discharge.

Sandy has produced his revolver, but he clearly remembers his companion's explicit instructions, and will not fire until Mynheer Joe gives the word, even though these fierce bravos of Bombay advance to the attack and smite them hip and thigh.

CHAPTER XX.

There is another factor in the game, however, which Sandy has not suspected. Knowing Mynheer Joe as he does, he fails to sound the full depth of that strange man's powers. Although the traveller has also produced a revolver and shows an entire willingness to use it should the occasion arise, he still holds back.

There is a method in his madness. For Sandy thinks it borders on this, not to begin operations upon the enemy at once, so they may in a measure paralyze their attack.

Mynheer Joe knows what he is about. From his lips there suddenly issues a strange sound unlike anything Sandy ever heard. It is undoubtedly a signal of some sort. His amazed eyes are glued on Joe. He sees him make a peculiar pantomime gesture with his hand—the one which has not been occupied in grasping a weapon.

This must mean something. Sandy knows it is not intended for him, and hence he turns his attention upon the enemy to discover a solution of the mystery.

Whether he can find this out or not, the effect of Joe's action is speedily manifest in the actions of the Thugs. He hears their exclamations of amazement, sees the look of wonder which they cast upon the traveller. Instead of a forward rush to annihilate him and his friend, there is a shrinking back on the part of the thirteen.

What can this mean? Mynheer Joe continues to wave his hand in that strange manner, and the thirteen terrible foes retreat slowly but surely in every direction.

Sandy is forcibly reminded of a certain picture in the pantomime where a good spirit appears upon the scene and the evil workers retreat in dismay, endeavoring to shield their eyes from the dazzling light that nearly blinds them, for everything that is evil hates the light.

He is bewildered by what he sees, and yet, although the cause is a perfect blank, the effect is plainly evident—even he who runs may read: These Thugs fear Mynheer Joe.

Sandy's admiration for the man takes an upward bound. He realizes that much as he has known of the other, Joe possesses qualities which he has never even suspected as existing.

In less than half a minute after the traveller has uttered that strange sound, the thirteen Thugs have backed out of sight. The coast is clear and gradually the people resume their interrupted trade relations—the merchant calls attention to his stock, the customer takes it upon himself to buy.

As the people come thronging back upon the road of the bazars, it can be

PUSHING AHEAD....

Everyday finds us steadily advancing and requiring more and more men to do our work.

And we get the workmen—workmen of the best type, too. Just the kind you want to do your work, that's the style of men we are looking for.

We Have The Facilities

for doing your painting, graining, paperhanging and decorating. Have the materials, the ideas, the everything, and we do not make mistakes.

Promptness

Is one of our mottoes.

To be on a job the very moment we plan for it is sometimes out of the question, and reasonable people understand that—for sometimes a delay on a previous job occurs to detain an hour or two, sometimes half a day, but our work, we wager, is executed as promptly as any other firm of our stamp in Canada.

So large a staff of workmen and such facilities for promptness and execution and such splendid work as we turn out—appeals to our customers. We prove this from repeated calls.

No decorative house in Canada is better prepared than ourselves to execute superior decorative work.—It all rests with you what money you wish to spend. If you care to spend $1,000 on the decorations of your Hall, we can do it for you. We have done it elsewhere.

If you want hand decorative work on a drawing-room, costing as much, we have also done that elsewhere and can do it here.

There is no limit to decorative possibilities in our hands.

We're in touch with the first decorations of the land, the finest colorists, and can secure you New York or Bostonian Ideas if you are prepared for the price.

Our fabrics, our wall papers, our ideas, our workmanship go hand in hand for your pleasure and our profit.

A Question That Rid President McKinley of a Beggar.

No one asking assistance was ever turned away empty handed from the McKinley door, and many were those who applied. One day a rather old man, with every appearance of belonging to the species hobo, called and asked for aid. He was given a small sum of money and, evidently thinking he had struck a soft spot, returned the following day and from then on went back every few days until finally, on what proved to be his last visit, the president came out while he was talking to a member of the household and, learning the man's errand, entered into conversation with him.

The man stated, in reply to the president's question, that he was a naturalized American citizen, but was born in Switzerland. The president asked if he had ever been in Berne, and he said he had lived there. The president then asked if he had ever seen the bears. This question rather stumped the old man, and he stammered that he could not understand. The president merely smiled and passed on.

Now, as every one who has any knowledge of Switzerland knows, the coat of arms of the city and state of Berne is a bear, and in a pit in the center of the city a number of live bears have been kept for years out of memory and are likely to be so kept for years to come, frequent bequests having been made for their comfort and many thousand francs being deposited in the banks of Berne for their maintenance. The old man, not knowing these facts, certainly could not have been from Berne and was a self convicted disciple of Ananias, and as he disappeared from the neighborhood it is to be supposed that some one must have shown him the joke.

Repetition.

"There was a time when animal worship prevailed in civilization."

"Well," answered the man who reads everything that is published, "judging from the dog and elephant stories turned out by popular writers, I should say we are getting round to it again."—Exchange.

Very Touching.

"Don't you think, after all, that woman's femininity touches and appeals to man?"

"Gracious, yes! My wife is always asking me for something."

ODD KOREAN HABITS

TEAR BASKETS AND HEART CLOTHS AND THEIR USES.

"Secret" Mourning That Every One Knows of and Respects — The Quaint Toilet of a Masampho Belle. A Strange Headdress For Women.

There is a great deal of poetry about all Koreans. This does not make the visitor in their country love them less.

"Why do you shake your husband's gown so ferociously every morning?" the writer said to a hostess in Seoul. "Are you afraid a spider may be weaving in it?"

"Oh, no, moonface," was the reply. "He must be in Japan now—so far it is—and his spirit comes every night to this gown. So tired must he be in the morning to go back so far into his body again."

And she wept copiously, dropping each tear very carefully into a metal lined little basket hung from her waist. If her husband had died on his journey the basket would have been nearly full by this time; every one who has any regard for her would have added a drop or two, and her mourning would have been as intricate a performance as a case in international law. Even as it was the tear basket was steeped in incense and many heartbreaking songs and proverbs wailed over it. Weep flowers—that is, any sort of bloom that withers soon—may be pressed and strung around the basket. The wing of a wounded bird may decorate one side; a motherless child may imprint a kiss upon it for the good of the spirit.

"Do men ever wear the tear basket for women?" I once inquired.

"Oh, moonface, you are curious so much," was the reply. "Women never go away from men in Kowli."

"But they die."

"Yes, and then verra often the good men wear the tear basket in secret mourning."

There is much secret mourning in Korea, and it is like the Irishman's secret—everybody knows it and respects it. A woman who has loved the wrong man may wear secret mourning clothes for him and don the tear basket filled with tears of persons who have not deigned to speak to her in the lifetime of the loved one. At certain hours she may wail round his grave and leave the best of everything to eat on his tomb for his hungry spirit. The worldly mate of the departed looks on, and often it seems she is flattered by the performance. A slave may mourn secretly for the queen, and anybody who wants to may sympathize without hurt for a beheaded criminal.

Next to the tear basket the heart cloth is the quaintest symbol of Kowli emotions. One is never permitted to know of this precious ornament unless it is worn for his or her sake. In old Korea it was placed over the heart of the beloved before being worn in any other breast. One heart cloth often does for a whole family, being worn by different members in turn. Characters representing poetic sayings are appliqued upon it, such as:

"Without thee I dwell with the spirit of the withered tree."

"My heart beats only to thine."

"Ahu—peace."

"The sun will come again."

In some parts of the country heart cloths are placed over the body of the dying and then given to the shanggoo, head male mourner, and the joofoo, leading female mourner.

Masampho is a quaint and picturesque town, nearly as much so as Fusan, from which it is not far removed. One of the sights of Masampho is her shopping district, which consists of innumerable mats spread out on the ground, upon which are exhibited the wares of their owners, who squat beside them.

But the chief joys of Masampho are her deliciously strange little women—the never to be forgotten Masamphonese, wild eyed, glossy haired dumplings, with cherry lines for mouths, who waddle around and about, quacking in fascinating tones.

The Masampho belle's toilet is worthy of the time she spends upon it. Her face is washed with honey oil instead of water. Sometimes she sifts a fine powder scented with her favorite flower over it.

She may stain her complexion to suit her fancy, but generally she prefers it to be the natural color, which is a beautiful ecru. Though she may never be seen by man, save husband or father, during curfew time or women's hours—8 p. m. and 3 a. m.—she may go out freely visiting friends and relatives. Her hair is brushed with a fragrant bunch of switches and glued into many different forms. Sometimes it makes a butterfly or a tortoise and at other times a lot of leaves or a little sampan.

When it is properly shaped, big jade or glass pins are stuck in. The only cap she ever wears has no crown. Its back is shaped like a helmet, and there are two long tassels hanging from the forehead and neck brim. Her cotton trousers are as full as a divided skirt and become narrow at the ankles, where they meet little socks made of grass and picturesque shoes. Her skirt is very full and shirred at the top into an eight inch band. This fits tightly around the chest and under the arms. The jacket worn is not over seven inches in length and runs the gamut of Korean blues and greens, which are somewhat the tints of the peacock's tail.

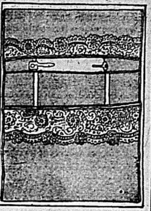
If of the common people, she may allow her small feet and ankles to show, but if of noble blood her skirts must sweep the streets. All women carry with them a long cape, so that if by any possibility they should meet a man they may throw it quickly over their heads, leaving only a slit in front for the eyes.

TRAVELERS' TRIFLES

CONVENIENT LITTLE NOTIONS FOR THE COMFORT OF THE WANDERER.

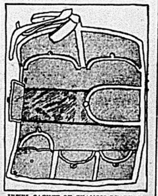
A Case That Keeps Handkerchiefs, Gloves, Veils and Other Small Toilet Adjuncts Always at Hand—Safety Sachet For Jewels.

There are a number of little devices insignificant enough in themselves that add immensely to the comfort of the wanderer away from her own home and its conveniences. First of these is figured the traveler's sachet. It can be made in simple merino lined with sateen or in brocade lined with satin. The two materials are laid together and measure forty-one inches long and sixteen inches wide. Fold over the two ends so that one forms a pocket eleven inches deep and the other eight inches, leaving a space of four and one-half inches between the two. Across the deeper pocket make a division in fancy stitching toward the center. This will give two pockets, one for handkerchiefs and the other for lace, ties, ribbon, bands, etc. The pocket at the other end of the sachet is for gloves, while two straps of half inch elastic placed at distances down the center are for veilings. Before turning over and sewing round the edge the length of material forming the narrow pocket cut a second piece, fix it and then turn over and sew it at each side. This forms a second long pocket, into which other things, such as soiled or cleaned gloves, can be put. A pincushion eight inches long by one and a half wide, composed of wadding, in a silk case, is sewed to the flap forming the upper pocket and is intended for hatpins and smaller ones. Thus everything that one can want in the way of small dress adjuncts is at hand, and the whole rolls up, with a ribbon tied round. A narrow cord edges the whole, about four yards being required.



THE TRAVELER'S COMFORT SACHET.

A jewel sachet for carrying ordinary articles of jewelry in daily wear is made with sash ribbon, lined with soft chamois leather. A pretty effective ribbon eight inches wide and twelve long should be selected; lay the piece of leather on it and cut it to the same size. Cut other pieces of leather to form pockets, with overlapping flaps. These flaps are stitched on first, then the long pieces, divided by narrow white binding ribbon neatly stitched on. There are three pockets at one end of the leather foundation, each one being three inches square, and two at the other end, three and a half inches deep and four inches long. Each flap is bound with the white ribbon and has a loop on it to fasten it to the small pearl buttons sewed on to the pocket. A piece of canvas is attached to the back of the wash leather to render it firmer. Down the middle of the sachet is a narrow piece of the fancy ribbon padded with wadding two inches wide, over which fold two flaps sewed on at each end, joining by a button and loop, and matching those over the pockets. This is for fancy pieces of all kinds. When all this work is finished lay it on the length of fancy ribbon and bind all round with the narrow white ribbon. It folds up in three divisions and is secured by a ribbon passed round it. Nothing can fall out.



JEWEL SACHET OF CHAMOIS LEATHER.

Watch and jewelry keep in their respective places, and remain bright by contact with the fine leather for any length of time. This jewelry sachet has the additional advantage of looking like a housewife and so does not attract undue attention.

MEN'S SUITS

The Newest of All.

The more exacting and particular a man may be about exclusiveness in fabrics and patterns, even if he insists on all the advantages he expects from a tailor, then the more these new suits which we are showing for the first time will appeal to him.

He will find in them all the style and satisfaction he would in garments that the best tailors could build to his measure, though they cost a little more than half the tailor's price and the same as he would pay elsewhere for ready-made clothes that would not prove as satisfactory.

Throughout these splendid garments the tailoring will be found to be faultless; it is of the highest character known and if anything a little more exacting and thorough than is found on the tailor's best productions. And of more importance than all, they possess that well bred air the tailor's have a knack of giving to the clothes they turn out.

Needless to say, the styles as they are found here are correct, that is expected, or that a perfect fit is assured in every case—we are more particular about that than you could be.

CHURCH CHIMES OF YESTERDAY.

Fifteenth Regiment Had Church Parade to St. Thomas' Yesterday Morning.

Bishop Hoffman, of the R. E. Church, Held Impressive Confirmation Services.

Rev. Dr. Morrison Describes the Missionary Needs of the Great Northwest.

The Fifteenth made a brave appearance yesterday morning as, with spick and span new uniforms, they paraded to St. Thomas' Church for divine worship. There was an excellent turn-out of the men, the streets being lined with interested spectators. The parade was formed in the skating rink, and, headed by the two bands the Regiment proceeded direct to the church which was well filled. The services were conducted by the Rector, Rev. G. R. Beamish, M.A., who preached an able and appropriate sermon. The Rev. gentleman is at present acting as Chaplain of the Regiment. Previous to announcing the text the Rector spoke a few words of cordial greeting to the Regiment, and referred to the Chaplain who was at present away and suffering bodily pain. His prayer was that he might be spared, and receive strength and healing. The text was taken from one of the lessons read, namely, Judges, 7th chapter, 5th, 6th and 7th verses.

The Midianite host was about to confront Gideon and his army at the river Jordan. The former was a formidable army, composed of 130,000 men, whilst Gideon had but 30,000 men. Gideon was called upon to beat back the invaders and the call was unanimously responded to. His army was, however, too numerous, and the men had to be tested—two-thirds of the force is taken away, leaving but 10,000 men and the odds is wonderful, yet there is still too many. Gideon leads them to a spring as a testing point, and, as the words of the text implies, those who lapped water as a dog were to be set apart for the warfare. But three hundred did this, and they were the tried and true men who were ready for any emergency. They were equipped with the necessary weapons and were led on to victory by Gideon. In the middle of the night they appeared in the midst of the Midianites with the blowing of trumpets and blazing torches. The Midianites were dumb-founded and slaughtered. It was a battle of courage and was no doubt blessed by Almighty God. It would appear that God did under certain conditions sanction and bless wars. In Holy Writ it says that nations shall war against each other, and brother shall be against brother. Christianity came into the world to redeem it as it found it. It was not in an ideal state, and Christianity could not ignore the state of the world. Even among Christianized nations war is adopted as the settlement of disputes, and it seems necessary to resort to this means. The South African war was an example of the necessity of war to settle an injustice. If war can ever cease it will only be when Christ comes to earth again to reign. The Rev. gentleman in speaking of military matters said the national expenditure for warfare was a judicious expenditure, as military training was of great worth. It is the establishment of obedience and self control. Whilst they recognized obedience to the King of the Empire, so they should recognize and be obedient to the King of Kings, the ruler of the world. Whilst they are soldiers of the King they should also be soldiers of the Cross, and thus be true soldiers in every sense.

The lessons for the service were read by Lieut.-Col. Halliwell, commander of the Regiment. After the sermon and previous to the last hymn and prayers, the National Anthem was sung.

Confirmation at Emmanuel R. E. Church.

The congregation of the above church were highly favored yesterday in the presence of their good Bishop, Right Rev. H. S. Hoffman, D.D., of Philadelphia, who preached morning and evening to very large congregations. His sermons, grandly inspiring efforts, will dwell long in the memory of those who heard them. The morning text was:

"Not by might nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts."

It was not always the church with a large membership which was most successful in doing the work of God; sometimes the presence of numbers proved a detriment; neither was the wealthiest church always the greatest power for good, for sometimes wealth bred strife and worldliness in churches as in other places. But the smallest and humblest congregation, which had been blessed with faith and a fervent desire to serve the Lord, would find limitless opportunities for doing good and glorifying the name and work of their blessed Saviour. At the evening service a confirmation service was held. The Bishop preached from St. Mark, 8th chapter, 34th verse:

"And when he had called the people unto him with his disciples also, he said unto them, Whosoever will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow me."

There was, the preacher said, no religion like Christianity. The Saviour, in addressing his followers, showed the dark side of the picture first. It was characteristic of worldly leaders that, when laying a plan before their followers, they put the bright side first. Jesus Christ invited men not to ease, but to self-sacrifice. This system was altogether different to what man would have planned, showing that it came from Heaven and not from earth. The text stated the conditions of discipleship, which were four in number: First, we must come to the Saviour of our own free will. No one was forced into the Kingdom. Man was approached as a reasoning being, and the final destiny of the human soul was left to man himself. The second condition was one of renunciation; every disciple must deny himself. We must renounce all reliance in ourselves and cast ourselves upon the Saviour. As in worldly schools all depended upon the pupil practising obedience and application, so in the school of Christianity all depended upon our obedience to the laws of Jesus Christ and in making his will supreme. The third condition was that we take upon ourselves the badge of Christianity; we must take up our cross and follow the Saviour. The cross told of Christ's trials and sorrows, and there was a cross for each of us. Everyone had his or her cross to bear; if it had not come yet it would surely come, for all in this world were subject to pain and sorrow. The Saviour himself was made perfect by suffering, and so would we be if we wanted to. The preacher said he believed that Christians are given trials to bear because they are Christians, because it was better for them to take their punishment now, in this world, than in eternity. The last condition of discipleship was "And follow me." How often the Saviour said "follow me." Not follow Moses, or Abraham, or Elias, but "Me." We as Christians must aim high, take no human being for an example, but try to be like the Saviour himself. We must have love for our fellow men—what deep interest Christ took in all humanity! So would we if we gained any of his blessing. He was patient with all; so must we be if we claimed to be followers of his. Then, when life's warfare was over and the gates of pearl were opened, we would see him face to face and be forever with the Lord.

At the conclusion of the sermon the candidates for confirmation were presented. There were six winsome girls, four boys and three men, 13 in all. The confirmation service was a deeply impressive one, and the congation listened in reverent attention to the address given by the Bishop to the class. They had now publicly vowed allegiance to the Master, who would help them to live as became his followers if they would only try to walk in his ways. He implored the blessing of God on them all.

During the services the choir, assisted by Mr. Harry McKay, rendered three anthems in fine time and tune. The morning anthem was "I Will Extol Thee," and the evening anthems "Praise Ye Jehovah" and "Blessing Hands."

Bridge Street.

At the morning service the Rev. R. N. Adams preached and in the evening Rev. Dr. Morrison, who is connected with the Manitoba conference, preached, his discourse being on "The Missionary Problem of the Northwest." His text was from Deuteronomy, 10th chapter, 18th and 19th verses. In the course of his remarks the Rev. gentleman said that of all the problems to solve, none exceeds the missionary problem of New Ontario, Manitoba, and our great Northwest. While our Government will provide 160 acres for the settlement of each family of foreigners, they do not provide for their spiritual welfare. This work of educating and Christianizing the foreigners must be done by the church of the living God, and done now. The work was great as there were 32 different nationalities in the west. In referring to the Doukhobors, he said he had found noble specimens of Christians among them, but a large proportion were not Christians. They needed Canadianizing and educating. When this is done the 32 nationalities and tongues will be assimilated and the strongest race mentally and physically the world has ever seen will populate our great Northwest. Let us pray and work so that the great Anglo-Saxon race and its Christian proclivities may predominate; let us do our part in sending them the Gospel, fitting them for this life and for the life beyond.

During the service Miss Vermilyea sang a solo, entitled "Thy Will be Done," very sweetly.

Christ Church.

The Rector, Rev. W. B. Heeney, last evening preached a missionary sermon relative to Christianity in Japan, and what is being accomplished in that country. The text was from Acts, 1st chapter, 8th verse:

"But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come unto you; and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth."

John Street.

The Pastor, Rev. A. H. Drumm, preached at both services to good congregations. In the evening his text was from 2nd Kings, 4th chapter and 44th verse:

"So he set it before them, and they did eat and left thereof; according to the word of the Lord."

Whilst the offertory was being taken up Mrs. A. G. Parker sang a solo, entitled "Come Unto Me," in her usual finished manner.

Holloway Street.

At the morning service the Pastor, Rev. J. R. Real, officiated and preached. In the evening Miss Morton, an evangelist from Toronto, preached to a large congregation. Her discourse, thoughtful and convincing, was much appreciated. The text was from Judges, 3rd chapter, 15th verse.

During the service a duet, entitled "O For a Closer Walk With God," was nicely rendered by Miss Kathleen McMurray and Mr. H. Wrightmyer.

The steamer will arrive at Kingston at 10 a.m. The Regiment will form up immediately on landing and proceed directly to the exhibition grounds, where they will take their position in brigade ready to march off at 10.45 a.m.

Major Pope will command the 15th till further orders, which will be promulgated by the C. O. in person.

Before leaving the boat the men will be served with 3 rounds each of blank ammunition.

Such additional orders as may be necessary will be issued by Major Pope.

The C. O. trusts that each officer and man will remember that the little things which are often considered unimportant are the very things that are most likely to be observed.

We are called citizen soldiers. Let us all try to show the world that the 15th is made up of "gentleman soldiers."

THE CHEESE BOARD.

PRICES HAVE ADVANCED IN THE LAST FEW DAYS.

At the Cheese Board on Saturday afternoon 1,820 boxes of white and 285 boxes of colored were boarded. Of these, Kerr procured 810 at 8 1-4c, Magrath 215 at 8 3-16c and Watkin 200 at 8 3-16c.

During the meeting Mr. Dennis Hanley moved, seconded by Mr. Jas. Balcanquel, that in the opinion of this Board it is wise to recommend that in this province, in the interests of the cheese industry, the time of making cheese should be limited to six months, from May 1st to November 1st.

The motion, after a brief discussion, was lost, but four voting for it.

WHAT IS CATARRH?

It is an inflammation of the mucous lining of the throat, bronchial tubes and nasal passages, excited by germs that can only be destroyed by fragrant, healing Catarrhozone, which is breathed direct to the seat of the disease, and has never yet failed to cure. Pleasant to use, absolutely certain to cure. Catarrhozone always gives satisfaction. "I suffered from nasal catarrh so badly that I couldn't breathe through my nostrils," writes G. K. Wilmot, of Meriden. "I used Catarrhozone for a few minutes and was relieved. It cured in a short time." No other remedy just like Catarrhozone—it's the best. Two months' treatment $1.00; trial size 25c.

TROTTING.

A Match Proposed.

James Timlin, a horseman well known in this city, writes as follows to the Hastings Star: "I have been informed by good authority, that the man handling Dr. Holcroft's horse, "Jim's Pointer," made an assertion that he could beat "Prince Charlie" for one or two hundred dollars on any track with two weeks' notice. If the doctor wants to gain a reputation for his horse, now is the time. My money talks, and I don't allow any man to talk down my horse."

Lou Dillon in Fine Form.

Memphis, May 20.—Lou Dillon, C. K. G. Billings' queen of trotters, signalized her debut in public this year by stepping a handy mile at the matinee racing at the driving park yesterday in 2.12. She was driven by her trainer, Millard Saunders, to sulky, and horsemen expressed surprise at the easy manner in which she accomplished this time. Saunders intended rating Lou Dillon a mile in about 2.17.

Cement Works News.

The first great rotary kiln for the cement plant was delivered at the works this afternoon. It took two flat cars to carry it. This is a special design of kiln, designed specially for this plant by Prof. Carpenter, and it may be said that there is only one rolling mills plant on this globe capable of rolling out iron for kilns designed like this one. In addition to the kiln one car of structural steel from Hamilton, with a car of machinery from the Smart Turner Co., of the same place, a car of machinery from Buckley's, of New York, were received. Yesterday afternoon the sloop Peruvian, with 77,000 feet pine lumber and ties, also tied up at the company's docks, and is being unloaded to-day.

To-morrow being a holiday in town, will afford the citizens a good opportunity of visiting the plant and seeing what is doing.

Messrs. English and Griswold, the engineers in charge, will be at the works all day, and will take pleasure in showing visitors the uses to which the different buildings will be put when the plant is constructed.

The boiler and structural steel erectors have arrived, and are engaging their assistance to complete the erection.

"NOT IF IT COST TEN DOLLARS A bottle would I be without Polson's Nerviline," writes J. A. Ruth, a farmer living near Trenton, Ont. "Nerviline is the best household liniment I know. We use it for stomach troubles, indigestion, headache and summer complaint. I know of nothing better to take in hot water to break up a cold, or to rub on for rheumatism or neuralgia." Every farmer should keep a few bottles of Nerviline handy and have smaller doctor bills. Large bottles 25 cents, at druggists.

RAILWAYS AT WAR.

Canadian Northern Opposed to C.P.R. Building Sudbury Line.

Montreal, May 23.—"Mr. Mackenzie is all wrong in this matter. We have looked into the legal aspect of the question and our right to construct branch lines is quite perfect. We have not, in fact, asked for Parliamentary authority to build from Toronto to Sudbury, simply because we have already secured this right. Our legal authority did not expire in 1891, as Mr. Mackenzie alleged; as a matter of fact we have already started work of construction."

The above statement was made yesterday by A. R. Creelman, chief solicitor of the Canadian Pacific Railway, who was seen last evening in connection with the contention of the president of the Canadian Northern.

William Mackenzie, who left here yesterday for a trip over the Halifax Southwestern Railway, announced that the contract for the Toronto and Sudbury section of the James Bay Railway would be given out almost at once, and that active construction would be begun in July. He held strongly to the theory that, as the time for completing the C. P. R. expired in 1891, and as the Toronto and Sudbury branch was included in that charter, no legal authority had since been obtained by the C.P.R. for its construction.

In the meantime, the Canadian Pacific have started active operations on the Sudbury end of the line, and some time ago they asked tenders for the building of sixty miles, and the tenders were to have been opened Saturday. In the meantime, 800 men had been set to work at different points, and the Sudbury end is being rushed forward, intimating, indeed, that a very serious conflict is on between the C.P.R. and the Canadian Northern.

A Modern Crusoe.

London, May 23.—The land of Cocas has not revealed any hidden treasure to the explorers who set out in full hope on the steam yacht Santa Maria last November. The latest of these explorers, who have just returned on the royal mail steamer La Plata, said they discovered the island some 300 miles southeast of Costa Rica, near the Galapagos group.

Search revealed none of the treasure, which is said to have been buried in the days of Drake, and to be worth nearly $6,500,000. But the expedition performed one good act. It found on the island a solitary inhabitant, an aged German trader, who had spent a dreary existence. He was taken on board and landed at Panama.

To Fight Consumption.

Ottawa, May 23.—At a meeting of the executive council of the Canadian Association for the prevention of consumption and other forms of tuberculosis, the following items of general interest were resolved upon. A committee was appointed to take steps to secure the co-operation of municipalities, of the Governments of the several provinces, and of the Government of the Dominion for the establishment of one large sanatorium in each province for the treatment of consumptives.

A TERIFFIC EXPLOSION

A Fire Works Factory Blown Up on Sunday.

Seven Persons Known to Have Been Killed and Many Injured—Only Thirty Were at Work While the Usual Staff Was Over 200—Not a Wall Left Standing—Windows in Findlay Shattered By the Shock Which Was Felt For Miles.

Findlay, Ohio, May 23.—As a result of an explosion in the two drying-rooms of the Lake Shore Novelty Co.'s plant here Saturday, seven persons are known to be dead, five are so seriously hurt that recovery is probably impossible, and twelve or fifteen are injured badly. From reports of the physicians, ten of the less seriously injured may die as a result of blood poisoning from the potash that was driven into their bodies.

Two employes are missing and are supposed to have been blown to atoms.

The Lake Shore Novelty Works' plant covered nearly ten acres in the southwest part of the city and employed about 200 men, women and children. Railroad torpedoes and Fourth of July explosives were manufactured. Owing to a rush of orders, the officials of the plant requested the employes to report for duty Sunday. About 30 complied.

Yesterday morning two magazines in separate rooms at the Novelty Works let go simultaneously with terrible reports. The exact cause of the explosion is not definitely known.

It is surmised that one of the Sherwood brothers, who were the only persons in the drying room, dropped a large box of torpedoes, but this story cannot be confirmed.

The explosion occurred shortly before the employes assembled for duty.

Human forms were strewn considerable distances apart on the factory site. The remains of the Sherwood brothers were found in drying room No. 1, mangled and almost unrecognizable. Their clothing was blown from their bodies, save a stocking on the right foot of Jay Sherwood.

The body of Edith Dillon was picked up 200 yards from where the explosion occurred.

The news of the catastrophe spread rapidly throughout the country, and every train and interurban car that has arrived in the city for the past ten hours was crowded. The large plant was shattered, not one single wall remaining. Windows throughout the city were shattered, and the concussion was felt for miles.

Tablet From Gezer.

London, May 23.—The secretary of the Palestine Exploration Fund announces that the excavators of the site of the ancient Levitical city of Gezer have discovered part of an inscribed tablet written in cuneiform characters on both faces. Impressions of thirteen lines on one face and five on the other have been taken and are on the way to London for decipherment. The previous discoveries at Gezer included remarkable evidences of human sacrifices and prehistoric occupation. The tablet is the first written document that has been found Brantford Doctor Dead.

Brantford, May 23.—Dr. Henwood, one of the best known physicians in Ontario, died here yesterday. Deceased was 76 years of age and came from England in his youth and removed to this city fifty years ago. In 1882 and 1883 Dr. Henwood was mayor of Brantford. He was an Anglican in religion, took a prominent part in Masonic circles and was a stout Conservative in politics. He is survived by three sons, Dr. A. J. and Edward of this city, and George of Victoria.

King Still a Diplomat.

London, May 23.—Many people find in the week's incident fresh reason for wishing success to King Edward's coming visit to Kiel. The King sees that French friendship being secure, the German Emperor's personal sympathy would immensely assist whatever pacificatory measures the European Governments have found it possible to suggest. Out of the Kiel visit some first approaches towards an armament agreement may very well come.

This is the season of the year when Scott's Emulsion does some of its best work. Fortifying the system against the ravages of winter is one of the most effective uses of Scott's Emulsion; it builds up the strength of the whole body and puts one in a healthy, vigorous condition.

Weak lungs, throat troubles or bronchial affections get more positive help and relief from Scott's Emulsion than from any other source.

Cod liver oil itself is very scarce just now; cheap adulterations and mixtures of inferior oils are offered everywhere.

This is why Scott's Emulsion should be insisted upon. It never varies from the high quality and absolute purity that has made it the standard for thirty years.

ACHAN'S FATAL COURSE

HIS HEART COVETED RICHES AND HE STOLE WHAT WAS GOD'S.

AND ALL ISRAEL STONED HIM

Powerful Sermon on the Sin of Covetousness, Which the Preacher Says Is Not Confined to Achan's Time—Its Genesis, Logical Progression and Culmination—A Type of the Sins of Every Age.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1904, by William Baily, of Toronto, at the Dep't of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 22.—The present sin of covetousness, its genesis, logical progression and culmination, is to-day the theme of the preacher. The text is Joshua vii, 25, "And all Israel stoned him with stones."

Few people have any adequate conception of the wealth and the luxury of the ancient peoples of the east. Ever and anon in our own day the newspapers contain accounts of the foolish extravagances of the scions of wealthy famailies, who show even greater genius in their ability to dissipate and scatter their enormous fortunes than their ancestors did in the accumulation of their wealth. By frequent repetition so prosaic and commonplace have these accounts become that special trains, private yachts and banquets costing ten and even twenty thousand dollars for a few selected friends attract the readers of the many newspapers hardly more than a passing notice.

Extravagant were the ancients in the matter of personal apparel. Pliny the elder makes mention of an instance he knew of a bridal dress which was made entirely of the most precious kind of pearls, which were strung together, costing over 40,000,000 sestertii, or about $1,720,000 in American coin. Among the famous collections of personal apparel exhumed from the buried cities of the east by Dr. Heinrich Schliemann, the noted German archaeologist, we find that the ancient peoples of Troy and Mycenae once wore waistbands of gold, necklaces of gold and tiaras of precious stones, which glittered like the stars of midnight.

Extravagant were the ancient people of the east in their menu, as well as in the adornments of their banquet halls. Caius Suetonius Tranquillus, the Roman historian and biographer, makes mention of one supper given in honor of Vitellius, where there were served up to the guests at one sitting 2,000 most delicate fishes and 7,000 birds, while one immense dish, called the "shield," was composed entirely of the brains of peacocks and parrots.

The traveler in the Far East as he roams through the ruins of ancient cities realizes how costly those ancient palaces must have been, even as from a broken column of the Alhambra you can infer how beautiful must have once been the palaces of the Spanish Moors. So in imagination you may picture the costly vases of myrrhine, the priceless robes of silk, the heaps of Damascus rugs centuries old, the sword hilts jeweled with diamonds and other precious stones, the garments woven out of thread of gold and the emptied treasure vaults, with their countless prizes scattered about the palace halls in untold profusion on the day that Jericho fell. Jericho was always noted among the ancients as a city of fabulous wealth.

But, though the wealth of this captured eastern capital was prodigious, yet not one atom of gold, not one yard of silk, not one rug, not one diamond, was to be taken by the Hebrew soldiers for their own use. God told Joshua he would give this city into his soldiers' hands, but all the spoils of war of this city were to be God's and God's alone. But the night after the battle one Hebrew soldier, instead of staying in his own company and doing what he ought to have done, allowed his sinful curiosity to get the better of him. He went out among the ruins on his own account and began to explore. Then, as he saw the piled up heap of wealth, his heart began to covet what was not his, but God's. When he thought no one was looking, he stole a beautiful Babylonish garment, 200 shekels of silver and a wedge of gold and went and hid them in his tent. After many days this theft was exposed. Swift condemnation followed, and "all Israel stoned him with stones."

What interest can that ancient crime be to us of the twentieth century? It concerns us as a type of the sins of every age. Trace the progression of evil in Achan's time, and you will find the four stages by which sin still comes to culmination in the lives of the criminals of our day. From its inception to its tragic close it is ever the same, and, though in this world it sometimes escapes detection and punishment, in the end it incurs the righteous judgment of God.

The first stage in Achan's fatal course was what the apostle describes as "the lust of the eye." Achan's curiosity was excited. He wanted to see the wonderful treasures which were to be consecrated to the Lord. His first step in the downward path which ended in his destruction was taken when he rose from among his sleeping comrades, and, slipping past the guards, he wended his way among the shattered walls of the captured city. It was one act for Achan with sword and spear and shield to fight his way into that doomed capital, swarming with enemies, but it was another act, after the battle was won, for this brave soldier to arise at night and crawl past the sentinels and begin to examine the spoils which were not his and by right never could be his. It is one act, and a commendable act, for a young physician at the call of duty to go down to the place of evil resort in a large city to help some sufferer prostrated by physical infirmity. It is another act, and a very dangerous act, for a young man or a young woman, actuated merely by an idle curiosity, to join a slumming party to look upon vice and gloat over it as a spectacle. Sometimes temptations come to man in the ordinary walks of life, but in nearly every case, as with Achan, temptations to sin most successfully assail a man when that man is idling in a place where he has no business to be.

Let me illustrate my thought from an old scene in the Bible. How often has the downfall of David been the subject of the pessimist's diatribe! How he exults over the spectacle of the shepherd boy who conquered Goliath and climbed to the throne of Israel, yielding to his infatuation for a woman! "Yes, yes," he says, "men are all alike; the best of men are vile at heart. Here is the sweet psalmist of Israel, the perfect specimen of noble manhood, the man after God's own heart, so enslaved by his guilty passion, for another man's wife that he slays the husband to get possession of her. No man is to be trusted."

Is that your idea of men? Then, my brother and sister, you have not read human nature aright. All men are not bad. But all men will be bad if they do not stick scrupulously to the work God has given them to do. The reason David sinned was not because he looked upon "Bathsheba, the wife of Uriah, the Hittite." The reason David sinned was because, like Achan among the Jericho spoils, he was idling at home instead of being with his army. In the first verse of the eleventh chapter of II. Samuel we read the secret of the whole sinful story: "And it came to pass after the year was expired, at the time when kings go forth to battle, that David sent Joab." That sentence means simply this: When the time of military campaign came—the time when David ought to have taken the field and led on his own troops to battle—he sent a substitute and stayed at home. The beginning of his danger was not in looking at Bathsheba, who was the wife of Uriah, the Hittite, but in being, like Achan, among the Jericho spoils, in a place where he had no right to be.

My brother, when God calls you to do a work, he will always give you strength to resist the sinful temptations incident to that work. But when you go to a place where you have no right to go, you are liable to experience that lust of the eye which may be the beginning of a long succession of other sins.

Young man, beware of the temptation to absent yourself from the post of duty. Beware, when Sabbath day comes around, if your minister does not see you in the house of God. You may say you are tired. You may say you will stay at home and read the Bible and have your devotions in your room, but beware. In coming to a large city, do not let your new made friends entice you into a saloon, just to look at the beautiful pictures upon the walls, and the expensive mosaics on the floors, and the gorgeous rugs and the fine set banquets in the gambling halls. Sin so often begins in the looking on temptation that the safest course for every one is to avoid the spectacle of it as far as possible.

Achan's "eye step," in the next place, was followed by his "covetous step!" We say that the sin of covetousness is only one step beyond the first sin. But the second step of Achan's sin is even more dangerous than the first stage. The lust of the eye is nearly always accompanied by hesitation and timidity. You can see that fear in the flushed cheek of the young man who stands upon the street corner debating within himself whether or no he will enter the place of evil resort to which his dissipated friends are persuading him. When the mind has taken the second step and desire is aroused, the hideous deformity of sin disappears, and longing sees in it only what is attractive and enjoyable. The second sin, the sin of covetousness, is blind to the scorpion's sting or the adder's hiss or the tiger's claw or the shark's threatening fin lifted like the black flag of the pirate over a threatening sea of green. The "sin of covetousness" is a summer stroll through woods filled with the aroma of wild flowers. It is the soft couch under the shadows of the overhanging tree branches, over which the satanic spiders are spinning a few beautiful silken threads which in time may become as strong as links of steel.

Ah, Achan on that fatal night may not have gone forth with the premeditated idea of stealing that goodly Babylonish garment and the 200 shekels of silver and the wedge of gold, but after his eyes had rested on the gold and the silver and the goodly garment desire was awakened, and his longing to possess them became irresistible. "Oh," he said to himself, "I wish I had that garment! How beautiful it would look hanging from my shoulders! I wish I could have that lump of gold. It would protect me against poverty all the days of my life. And why should I not have them? There are so many spoils of war here these few treasures will not be missed."

Is not Achan, going to the place of execution, the history of almost every sinner? "Eye sin," first step; "covetous sin," second step. What we would like to do nearly always precedes what we will ultimately do if we get the chance. My brother, like Achan of my text you and I can trace the degeneracy of our lives, if they are degenerate, by our evil thoughts, which always precede evil actions. What we think, we will ultimately speak; what we desire, we will ultimately do.

Oh, the evil sin of covetousness! Beware! Beware! Evil thoughts are only a step from evil actions. Are we not all in danger of the covetous sin? Would you tell a lie for 10 cents? "No," you emphatically answer. "No, of course not—of course not." Would you tell a lie, just one little lie for $100? "No," you answer again, but not so emphatically. Would you tell a lie for $10,000—a lie which in one sense would not hurt anybody? You look at me in a quizzical way and say, "Please don't ask me." Well, I do ask you. I ask you, not for the purpose of giving you the offer, but of finding out what is the condition of your thoughts. Achan coveted 200 shekels of silver and a wedge of gold which must have been worth at least $10,000 in our money. He coveted them, without the idea of hurting any one else, yet for that sin of covetousness, which was the forerunner of other sins, Achan had to die. Beware, O man, how you allow your evil thoughts to live. Achan's "eye sin" was followed by Achan's "covetous sin." Evil thoughts will ultimately be the parents of evil actions.

But now, in following the four fatal stages of Achan's sin, we find that his third step—the "finger step"—changes him before the world from an honest into a dishonest man. No sooner does Achan hide that Babylonish garment under his soldier's cloak and hug that wedge of gold and bag of silver under his arm than before man, as well as God, he becomes amenable to human law. Once he was a criminal at heart, but not a criminal in act—in his own consciousness and in God's sight a thief, but before his fellow man an honest, upright man. No one knew that under that fair and respectable exterior there lurked the plunderer.

It is an awful catastrophe when a man by direct sin of commission ruins the long record of what the world has regarded as an exemplary life. In the old Strassburg Cathedral there is a famous clock. There not only the time of day is told, but the eclipses of the sun and moon are calculated for all time. There you can see the twelve apostles bowing before the Saviour and hear Peter's cock crowing, after the fisherman apostle had denied Christ thrice. There are the symbols of childhood and youth and manhood and old age. It is a wonderful clock—wonderful in all its various mechanisms. But history tells us that this clock was in ruins for many, many years. It was in ruins up to 1842. Why? After the first mechanic had constructed it, in a fit of rage he completely destroyed it because the magistrates of Strassburg were going to put out his two eyes so that he could not build another clock like it for any other city. Thus, like the old clock builder of Strassburg, many and many a man by one sinful act, can destroy all the usefulness and the work of a lifetime. Achan's first sin was his "eye step." Achan's second sin was his "heart step" or "thought step." Achan's third sin was that which drove him at once out of brotherly fellowship with man. It was his "finger step" or his sin of commission. Cannot you read the stages of progression in the words of the human tragedy, "I saw;" "I coveted;" "I took?" Perhaps we can translate it in even a better way: "I looked;" "I desired;" "I did."

But now, after the "finger step" has been committed, comes the fear and the horror. Aye, the "covetous step" may lead through an embowered garden. The buzzards may there be feathered in the gorgeous colors of a yellow breasted, black tipped oriole. The "finger step" may be a leap, a jump, an impulsive bound, but no sooner is that fourth step taken than comes the "foot step," or the stealthy fugitive step. As soon as Achan, the thief, got possession of this gold and silver and this Babylonish garment he did not know what to do with them. He could not wear the cloak; he could not spend the money; so, like a coward, he skulked away and went and hid them in his tent.

Sin nearly always makes a coward out of a man. Achan did exactly what our first ancestor did in the garden of Eden after he had sinned. No sooner was that forbidden fruit eaten than for Adam the heavens seemed to be overcast. He not only slunk away and hid in the thickets as a cowardly hyena would run away from the hounds, but when God called him forth he did even a meaner act than that. He turned and tried to throw the blame upon the woman by his side as he said, "Yes, I did eat, but the woman whom thou gavest to be with me, she gave me, and I did eat." Oh, my friends, the criminal unconsciously reveals himself. The accusing voice of his conscience saps his manliness and robs him of his open demeanor. If there is not an honest heart in a man, his face and his bearing will not be honest. The lowered eyelid, the trembling hand, the shuffling foot—all reveal the error of his past. A despicable sin always makes a coward out of a man—without an exception, always, always. Sin by its very nature is only another name for cowardice. No sooner did Achan take the gold than he ran away and hid it; no sooner do you sin against God, then, like all other sinners, you try to get as far as possible away from God.

Shall we follow on and see the end of this human tragedy? Shall we stop and watch the twitching limbs of the Hebrew apostate, who is being stoned to death by his late comrades in arms? No, I would not for one minute have you look at the death agony and the eternal despair. Death by execution is too terrible for any human eyes to witness, unless it is our duty to witness it. To-day, I would not lead you forth to where Achan is uttering his moans; but rather would I close this sermon with this thought: Terrible as sin is in its nature and its effects, there is a divine remedy for it. God, in his infinite pity, has had compassion on the sinner and has stretched out his hand to rescue him from his ruin and his despair. Not only does he offer pardon to the sinner, but deliverance from the power of sin. "Sin," he says to all who put their trust in Christ, "shall not have dominion over you." Though, like Achan, you may have fallen under its power, if you come to Christ and put your faith in him, you shall be saved. There is salvation for you, and peace for you, and eternal life for you, through the blood of Jesus Christ who loves you and who has given his life for you in order that you might live.

A COCKING MAIN.

County Constable Takes 14 Birds and Names of Participants.

Hamilton, May 25.—County Constable Nichol yesterday morning "got wise" to the fact that a cocking main was in progress in Barton township, on the mountain, and his blood boiled at this daring outrage of law and decency. Without waiting for a body-guard he set out for the scene of the bird conflict, which was on Gerrard's farm, and he made a very good haul. He discovered about 150 men in the barn, and, nothing daunted by the great superiority of numbers, Constable Nichol started in to make things interesting for the gang. One of the number objected to this rash intrusion, and a "scrap" ensued. The officer came out on top, and then he proceeded to take into custody fourteen birds, two pairs of spurs and one pair of scales. It is understood that prosecutions will follow, as Constable Nichol has the names of a number of the men present. It is said a number of well known citizens were in the party.

What Will He Do?

Montreal, May 25.—There is a row here in Liberal circles over Colonel J. P. Cooke's position as Crown prosecutor. It was whispered that, following the recent trial in the King's bench, the colonel would be retired, but he appears to have secured the support of the Attorney-General, and may hold on. He asks for a commission to read over the trial in question, and believes he would be vindicated. Premier Parent wants Cooke to resign, but the latter is supported by several Ministers, and the fight has become most interesting.

Librarian John Kenrick Dead.

Hamilton, May 25.—John Kenrick, librarian of the public library died in the City Hospital about 11 o'clock last night. He had been in the hospital for several weeks, having gone there suffering from pneumonia and nervous prostration. He was about 68 years of age. His wife predeceased him by several years. The deceased was an ex-alderman of this city. For several years he was on the public library board.

GREATEST BATTLE OF THE WAR WILL BE FOUGHT AT LIAOYANG.

Kuropatkin's Determination to Check The Japs There.

Japanese Land Operations Against Fort Arthur Meeting With Little Success, According to a Daily Telegraph Correspondent—Japanese, However, Are Fighting With a Stubborn Determination Almost Unknown to History.

London, May 25.—A Russian transport is moving from Liaoyang in the direction of Mukden, but it is not known whether this means a retirement of the army or merely the removal of winter clothing, which no longer is needed. The movements of war correspondents, the despatch says, are limited to a radius of a mile and a half from Fengwangcheng.

The Battle of the War.

The Daily Telegraph's Newchwang correspondent declares that General Kuropatkin is determined to check the Japanese at Liaoyang, where probably the greatest battle of the war will be fought. He adds that the Japanese land operations against Fort Arthur are meeting with little success and that Lieut.-Gen. Stoessel and Maj.-Gen. Fock continue to make well-directed, but desperate sorties against the advance of the Japanese who are fighting with a stubborn determination almost unknown in history. Sveral hundred Japanese have been killed during the past few days. Japanese reinforcements are arriving daily from Pitsewo and Polandien, according to this correspondent.

Japs Besiege Kinchau.

The Seoul correspondent of The Daily Mail says that Kinchau is being besieged by the Japanese and its surrender is momentarily expected.

Included in a score of rumors is one sent by the Shaghai correspondent of The Morning Post to the effect that the Russians have been defeated near Kingkau, abandoning 50 guns and that Gen. Kuropatkin has been advised by Viceroy Alexieff to retreat to Harbin.

Russian Officers All Killed.

Tokio, May 25.—Gen. Kuroki reports that a section of Japanese infantry encountered and defeated two hundred Cossacks at Toutao-Kou, eight miles northeast of Kuang-Tien. The Cossacks fled to Ai-Yuang-Pienmen, leaving twenty dead. The Japanese sustained no losses.

Additional details of the fight at Wang-Chiatun, near Taku-Shan, May 20, indicate that the squadron of Cossacks was almost annihilated by the Japanese infantry, which surrounded and completely routed the enemy. All the Russian officers were killed, wounded or captured. Natives report that some of the Cossacks escaped on foot, abandoning their equipment. Many killed or wounded were found on the battlefield.

Russians Destroyed Anju.

Mukden, May 25.—The Russians on May 16 made a sudden attack upon the town of Anju, Corea, from the village of Haitchien, and captured the town, destroying it. The Japanese garrison set fire to the houses and stores and retired in perfect order.

What the Russians Surmise.

St. Petersburg, May 25.—The prevailing opinion at the headquarters of the general staff is that the withdrawal of the Japanese from Fengwangcheng means that the enemy has decided to devote himself primarily to operations against Port Arthur.

Disembowelled Himself.

Liaoyang, May 25.—A Japanese officer, who was a prisoner here, committed suicide yesterday, according to the ancient Japanese custom, by disembowelling himself.

Continual Skirmishing.

Liaoyang, May 25.—There is continual skirmishing between the Russian cavalry and the Japanese. Cossacks are harrassing the Japanese in the hills and by roads, generally driving them back. The general plan of the Japanese has not been divulged. They are apparently marking time, awaiting the arrival of reserves from Corea, that have been delayed owing to the impassability of the roads. The Chinese report the destruction of another Japanese battleship off Port Arthur, but the report is unconfirmed and is not credited.

JEWS AGAINST WAR.

Carried a Banner: "Down With the War," in Russia.

Gomel, Russia, May 25.—A band of 50 young Jews made an anti-war demonstration in the streets here Monday night. They carried a red banner bearing an inscription reading, "Down with the war!" and scattered an inflammatory proclamation. The police interfered in the interest of order.

To Send Man to Britain.

Berlin, Ont., May 25.—Fifty delegates, representing nine Trades and Labor Councils and twenty-one local unions, attended the second annual convention of the Western Ontario Labor Education League in Berlin yesterday. The most important action taken was the pass of this resolution: "That this convention take up the discussion of the advisability of a movement of some description to send a representative to Great Britain to counteract the indiscriminate advertising throughout the country for labor in Canada." Messrs. Fred. Todd, J. Laughlin and J. Heintzman, Stratford; H. Clark and J. Marks of London, were constituted a committee to raise funds towards sending the delegate.

Lynched a Negro.

Vance, Miss., May 25.—A negro, name unknown, has been lynched at O'Neill, ten miles north of here, on the charge of murdering Robert Logan, a saw mill man. Another negro suspected of complicity in the crime is being hunted for and will be lynched if caught.

And the quietest holiday ever seen here.

Barring the fire crackers the boys set off, there was "nothing doing."

Every little two by four place around us had a celebration, and Belleville money went to help to make it successful, instead of the reverse, as used to be the case when your uncle was a boy.

But wasn't the weather worth the whole price of admission? Couldn't have been nicer if laid down according to our specifications.

But oh! dear. Don't these one day holidays make you feel as though there was precious little in life, after all? The time a fellow needs a holiday the worst is the day after he's had one. And that's no joke.

Only the fellow who gets an occasional holiday can appreciate the beauties of regular work.

Mr. Thomas takes exception to the views held by the Rev. Mr. Stratton that the yelping of dogs and the visiting them on the Sabbath is a desecration of the Lord's day. Mr. Thomas and Mr. Stratton are, in this free country, at liberty to think and express their individual views upon this point whenever and how they please. Whatever differences of opinions may be held upon the question of Sabbath breaking, it is doubtful whether there is any upon the question of the snarling and yelping of dogs. We have no inclination to enter into the controversy. As "dogs delight to bark and bite," why, let them "growl" away.

A prominent apple grower says there will be a small crop of fall and winter apples this year, but the crop of early apples will be a very good yield, which means that we will have plenty of apples before Christmas, but few afterwards. Asked for the reasons why, the gentleman explained that as there was an unusually large growth last year, it would be impossible for the trees to bear heavy this year. "I have grown apples for thirty years," he said, "and, in my experience, I have learned that trees require one season for the growth of the wood and one year for fruit."

A telegram from Montreal says the Canadian Pacific has already 800 men at work on the Toronto and Sudbury branch of their system. When this is completed it will be the shortest and most direct route from Ontario to Winnipeg and render the C.P.R. entirely independent of the G.T.R.

Canada has a Minister of Railways in the person of the Hon. Mr. Emmerson. He draws a Minister's salary, he signed the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway contract, he knows nothing of the merits or demerits of that bargain. To hide his ignorance he "slinks like a coward" of the House whenever the question is discussed. Never in the history of any self-governing country was ever such an humiliating spectacle presented to the people. "Emmerson the silent" will be a historical figure hereafter in Canadian history.

"A Citizen" writes us follows to Timely Topics:

"Were not all our Public School buildings provided with flagstaffs and national ensigns in order that the latter might float to the breeze on national holidays? In strolling about the city yesterday I observed that there were at least three schools over which the Union Jack was not displayed. Can you tell me why such was the case?"

• • •

In reply to our inquisitive correspondent, we might say that, from what we have been told, the flags of certain schools were borrowed by the Board of Education on the occasion of Lord Minto's visit, and never returned. What the grave and reverend seigneurs of the B. of E. have done with them is a dark and inscrutable mystery. But one thing is sure—they should have been flying from their several staffs yesterday, in honor of the memory of the best Queen the greatest Empire in the world ever knew.

Congratulations to the officers and men of the gallant Fifteenth, A.L.I., who yesterday went a-visiting, stacked up against pretty fast company and held their own in good old Bay of Quinte style.

A decided improvement in street crossings is being made under the directions of the present Chairman of Public Works. The marvel is that cement crossings were not thought of before.

• • •

A little attention to the wooden sidewalks on the south side of Bridge street might save accidents and lawsuits. There are a number of only half-rotten planks now being removed from some of the walks which are being renewed with cement that might be utilized for repairs.

GOLF CLUB'S GALA DAY.

SUCCESSFUL COMPETITION FOR DR. FARLEY'S CLUBS HELD YESTERDAY.

The Belleville Golf Club had yesterday probably the most successful day in its history, the occasion being the finish of the handicap competition for the clubs presented by Dr. Farley, which began on Monday. There were many competitors and the interest was keen. Miss Hulme won the lady's club and Mr. Williamson the gentleman's.

About seventy-five guests responded to the invitations to the ladies' tea from three to six. Credit is due the young ladies who decorated the club house with flowers, making a most delightful place for a cup of tea after the play and stroll about the links.

In the evening the ladies gave the caddies a supper under the trees near the club house, which was much enjoyed by the boys.

THE INTELLIGENCER is printed and published for The Intelligencer Printing and Publishing House (Limited) by CHARLES JAMES BOWELL, of the City of Belleville, in the County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, at their Office, No. 408, Front Street, Belleville, Ont.

Nothing so suddenly obstructs the perspiration as sudden transitions from heat to cold. Heat rarifies the blood, quickens the circulation and increases the perspiration, but when these are suddenly checked the consequences must be bad. The most common cause of disease is obstructed perspiration, or what commonly goes by the name of catching cold. Coughs, colds, sore throat, etc., if attended to in time are easily subdued, but if allowed to run their own course, generally prove the fore-runner of more dangerous diseases. Nine-tenths of the consumptives date their affliction from a NEGLECTED COLD, and the diseases that are caused by wet feet, damp clothes, or exposure are more numerous than are generally supposed. One of the most efficacious medicines for all diseases of the throat and lungs is Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It promotes a free and easy expectoration, which frees the lungs from viscid phlegm by changing the secretions from a diseased to a healthy state.

Only 900 people in 1,000,000 die of old age.

Dr. J. D. Kellog's Dysentery Cordial is a speedy cure for dysentery, diarrhoea, cholera, summer complaint, sea sickness and complaints incidental to children teething. It gives immediate relief to those suffering from the effects of indiscretion in eating unripe fruit, cucumbers, etc. It acts with wonderful rapidity and never fails to conquer the disease. No one need fear cholera if they have a bottle of this medicine convenient.

Few men realize what large dividends they can draw on kindness.

How to Cleanse the System.—Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are the result of scientific study of the effects of extracts of certain roots and herbs upon the digestive organs. Their use has demonstrated in many instances that they regulate the action of the liver and kidneys, purify the blood, and carry off all morbid accumulations from the system. They are easy to take, and their action is mild and beneficial.

Cut the trunk, the branches fall of themselves.

Always on Hand.—Mr. Thomas H. Porter, Lower Ireland, P.Q., writes: "My son, 18 months old, had croup so bad that nothing gave him relief until a neighbor brought me some of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, which I gave him, and in six hours he was cured. It is the best medicine I ever used, and I would not be without a bottle of it in my house."

A tailor made woman is one of the noblest works of man.

Messrs. Northrop & Lyman Co. are the proprietors of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, which is now being sold in immense quantities throughout the Dominion. It is welcomed by the suffering invalid everywhere with emotions of delight, because it banishes pain and gives instant relief. This valuable specific for almost "every ill that flesh is heir to," is valued by the sufferer as more precious than gold. It is the elixir of life to many a wasted frame. To the farmer it is indispensable, and it should be in every house.

A self made man has his private opinion as to what is the noblest work of God.

Give Holloway's Corn Cure a trial. It removed ten corns from one pair of feet without any pain. What it has done once it will do again.

Look out for the man with an imagination strong enough to draw a dollar out of your pocket.

A Wonderful Cure.—Mr. David Smith, Coe Hill, Ont., writes: "For the benefit of others I wish to say a few words about Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery. About a year ago I took a very severe cough, had a virulent sore on my lips, was bad with dyspepsia, constipation and general debility. I tried almost every conceivable remedy, outwardly and inwardly, to cure the sore, but all to no purpose. I had often thought of trying Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, so I got a bottle, and when I had used about one half the sore showed evident signs of healing. By the time that bottle was done it had about disappeared and my general health was improving fast. I was always of a very billious habit and had used quinine and lemon juice with very little effect. But since using three bottles of the Vegetable Discovery the billousness is entirely gone and my general health is excellent. I am 60 years old. Parties using it should continue it for some time after they think they are cured. It is by far the best health restorer I know."

The truthfulness of what a man says doesn't always depend on the amount of noise he makes in saying it.

It does not seem as though there were as many as thirty-one days in any month, the way rent day rolls around.

Some second thoughts occur several minutes later.

Business men should see our envelopes. A number of different grades to select from.

The Beautiful House

The woodwork of your house, the furniture, the lacquered, japanned and enameled iron work, may be new, but if you will use "Liquid Veneer" it will become sparkling in brilliancy and attractive as a diamond. And if the same is faded, scratched, or if the varnish has gone the way of all flesh, "Liquid Veneer" will resurrect the whole scheme. It will take that half sick furniture and put a new face on it that is as brilliant as the sun. It is not a "furniture polish," it is not sticky, never catches the dust; it is easily applied in a few minutes with a cloth, no rubbing is necessary. It is a cleaner, disinfectant, then imparts a most bright and finished surface. Try a sample bottle only 5c, 1-2 pint bottle 50c. For sale only by

EAGLE AND STURGEON.

The King of Birds and King of Fish in a Death Clinch.

We had been camped for a few days at a point on the upper reaches of the Pic river, waiting for a few of the party who were running a side line. A source of amusement was watching the descent of a large baldheaded eagle in the eddy back of the point.

He would strike the water with great force, coming down from an immense height. At times he would dive under the surface to reappear a moment or two later generally with a fish clutched in his claws, when he would fly (freighted with his fish) to a very high mountain, on the overhanging crest of which the nest with his mate and young were quite visible to us with our field glass.

I had noticed his success and journeys to the nest for two mornings. On the third morning a shadow coming across the sun's rays caused me to look up and there was the great bird at his usual hunt to supply the young eagles with breakfast. With his keen eye piercing the river depths he poised over a particular spot for a few moments and then shot down with the velocity of a cannon ball.

The waters parted and the eagle was lost to view. I watched and waited to see him emerge with his prey, but moments lengthened into minutes, and minutes into a quarter of an hour, but the surface of the water remained undisturbed.

What could it mean? Even if he had struck himself against some hidden rock and been killed the body would have floated to the surface. It passed my reasoning powers to solve the result of that plunge. Then far down, fully a quarter of a mile off, I saw the great bird struggling, either to carry off a heavy burden or to free himself from one. The waters were lashed into foam and the bird again disappeared, and all was still.

This lashing of the water and disappearing were repeated again and again, each time farther downstream. A bend in the river prevented my seeing the final result. Calling one of our men from the tent, we embarked in a canoe and started down the river to view the strange proceeding closer. When we had doubled the point below I saw lodged against the beach in a small bay something that did not look natural to the place. We paddled down and found it was my eagle fast fixed to a sturgeon fully six feet long. Both were motionless. The king of fish and the king of birds had met death.—Forest and Stream.

A Cold In the Head.

A hydropathic treatment of a cold in the head is more reliable than any other. It is as follows: In the morning after rising and at night before retiring wash the feet and legs as high up as the knees in cold water, then rub them with a rough towel and massage them till the skin is red and glowing. In addition to this cautiously snuff tepid water up the nose frequently during the day and sip with a teaspoon a glassful as hot as can be borne an hour before each meal and at bedtime. A few days is often quite sufficient for simple cases and obstinate ones yield if the treatment is prolonged. No medicines are required. If taken in the first stages of the disease a cold is broken up which might otherwise become a severe case of bronchitis, lasting many days or weeks.

A Substitute For Latin.

In an English school recently a certain boy was regularly absent during the hour in which Latin was taught. The teacher called upon the boy's father, at whose instructions it had been learned he remained away, and asked for an explanation. The father said: "It is all right. During the Latin hour I am teaching Jimmy something that he will find far more useful than Latin in his progress through life." The teacher was interested and asked what this subject might be. The father replied, "I am teaching my son how to shave without a looking glass."

Ate Their Gods.

The gods of most South American tribes of Indians are generally looked upon as sacred, but when the gods become a nuisance it is time to put an end to them; at least, that is what a certain tribe along the Zabari river think. They worship the iguana and monkey, but as soon as the iguana started eating chickens they thought it time to stop worshiping him and to eat him in place of the chickens he had eaten. This they do, and they prefer iguana stew to chicken fricassee.

The Elect of Boston.

I can remember when it was jocosely said of some families of Massachusetts that they claimed to have had, in the time of Noah's deluge, a boat to themselves, and I can recall, on the other hand, when a social aspirant in Boston asked, "Who belong to the really old families, grandmamma?" and when that relative shook her weary head and said, "Mostly no one, my dear."—Thomas Wentworth Higginson in Atlantic.

Amusing the Children.

Mrs. McShantee (triumphantly)—I see ye are takin' in washin' again, Mrs. McProudee! Mrs. McProudee (whose husband has lost a paying job) —Sure it's only to amuse th' childer. They wants th' windies covered wid steam so they can make pictures on them.

A Pessimist.

"Don't you suppose it is possible for a man to go through the world without telling a lie?"

"I doubt it. Almost every man has been in love at some time in his life."

Better heresy of doctrine than heresy of heart.—Whittier.

"HONEST INJUN."

How the Chickasaws Were Taught the Meaning of the Expression.

Among the earliest comers to the Hatchee country, in western Tennessee, was a Mr. Barnes, a blacksmith, who became a friend of the Chickasaw Indians and often mended their guns without charge. Barnes was a poor man, but obtaining on credit a donkey named Moses, which was valued at a considerable sum, he imported the animal and stabled it at the smithy, says the Youth's Companion. It was the first in that region. One morning he found the door open and Moses gone. He followed a trail to the bank of the river and lost it. The stream was in flood, and he believed his valuable animal was drowned. Unless he found some way to raise the money to pay for it he was a ruined man.

Two months later a trading scow came down the Hatchee from Bolivar, and on the roof, spread out in the sun, was the hide of Moses, unmistakable in its soft and handsome grays. Barnes related his story to the trader and received the skin, which had been bought at Bolivar from a trader there. As no white man would have shot a donkey Barnes concluded that the Indians, who had never seen one, but who were then hunting on the Hatchee, were the offenders.

To trap them he tried a little stratagem. He organized a shooting contest and offered as a prize "the handsomest skin ever taken on the Hatchee, the pelt of a beautiful animal."

A Chickasaw brave was the winner of the contest and claimed the prize. Barnes brought forward the skin of Moses and spread it on the ground.

"There is your prize," he said.

"Me shoot um! Me shoot um!" cried the winner, running to the skin and pointing to a bullet hole. Then he told how he had been wandering down the river bank and had seen this strange wild animal, like nothing he had ever seen before, breaking through the cane. He had shot it and sold the hide at Bolivar. He was delighted to get it back.

This was what Barnes had hoped for. Standing, he addressed the Chickasaws.

"My brothers," he said, "you know me. I am a poor man, but I am a friend to the Chickasaw. I mend his gun for him and deal fairly by him. This animal was my white man's pony. I bought it far away and brought it here. It cost me much wampum, the price of many Indian ponies. To lose it will lose me all. It escaped me and went to the woods, and there a Chickasaw killed it.

"When I am in Chickasaw country, I obey Chickasaw law. When Chickasaw is in white man's country, he should obey white man's law. White man's law is that whoever kills my pony must pay me for it. What will Chickasaw do?"

The Indians had listened attentively. When he had finished, they went to their ponies, tethered near by. The whites watched them meanwhile with intense interest. The Indians untethered their ponies and brought them up.

"Take um," they said. "Indian have only ponies. Give um all."

"How many?" asked Barnes.

"You say how many."

Barnes appointed an appraiser, who selected a number of ponies equal in value to the donkey. These the blacksmith sold to his neighbors.

The Indians gave up their hunt and went back to their villages, poorer, but satisfied. They had maintained, for their tribe at least, some claim to the title, "Honest Injun."

Follow Your Dreams.

"To compel our thoughts to follow the memory of dreams and on no account to revert to any subject of waking thought, pleasant or otherwise"—that is a woman's formula for sleep.

"If we have already slept in the night," she says, "we should, in trying to sleep again, recall the dreams of the previous sleep and carry them on. If we have not slept, then it is necessary to go back to old dreams, which is rather more exertion and less certainly successful. But even this is far better for sleep than allowing the memory to revert to any waking thoughts or to the familiar old devices of counting a hundred or picturing sheep, etc."

Just the Thing.

Mr. Goodheart—Regarding those kittens, my dear, the president of our society says the most humane way to drown kittens is to put them in an ordinary earthen flowerpot and then suddenly turn the flowerpot upside down in a pail of lukewarm water. Mrs. Goodheart—Why, yes; that is a good idea—isn't it?—because you know there is a hole in the bottom of the flowerpot for the poor little things to breathe through.

Approved of the Idea.

Mr. Ferguson (in wrath)—If you're going to bring a lot of club women to this house to spend the day, you'll have to entertain them yourself. I wash my hands of the whole affair. Mrs. Ferguson—Well they look as if they need it.

Consequences.

Freddie—What are these consequences you are always talking to me about? Cobwigger—Consequences, my boy, are the debts we incur for the fun of having our own way.

The Consultation.

"They have called two doctors in for consultation."

"And do the doctors agree?"

"I believe they have agreed upon the price."

A tree that has been a hundred years growing can be cut down in a couple of hours, but it takes another hundred years to replace it.

DROWNING IS QUICK.

Man Cannot Live Under Water More Than Two Minutes.

"The story frequently repeated about professional divers who have been able to remain under water for over two minutes is silly," said a doctor. "No one can remain under water that long without drowning, whether he is a trained diver or not. At Navarino, where the sponge divers are reported to be able to remain under water three and four minutes, tests were made recently and resulted in conclusively proving that none of them remained down as long as a minute and a half. Ninety seconds seems a very long time to the watcher on shore, and it is about the limit of a diver's endurance under water. At Ceylon, where time tests were also made among the famous pearl divers, it was ascertained that few of them remained below the surface as long as a minute, and other tests made on the Red sea among the Arabs proved that a minute and a quarter was the longest they could endure without a fresh breath.

"On the coast of England several years ago a diver, a trained diver, one of the best on the coast, renowned for his endurance, went down and was pulled up so slowly when he gave the signal that he was under water about two minutes and five seconds. He was drawn out of the water insensible, with blood flowing from his nose and ears, and it was only after long and arduous work that his recovery from the effects of that two minute stay under water was assured. Drowning is a quick death. Even though the water is kept out of the lungs, insensibility will ensue in one minute and complete unconsciousness in two. The stories of people who have been in the water five minutes being resuscitated are generally mistakes or untrue. A man could not be in the water five minutes without coming to the surface several times and be restored to life."

Where She Had Felt.

"See here!" exclaimed Mr. Clubb upon discovering next morning that all his "change" was gone. "During your talk to me when I came in late last night I believe you remarked among other things that 'woman feels where man thinks.'"

"I did," replied his wife. "You have no feeling, and"—

"Well, I merely want to say you're mistaken if you suppose I do my thinking in my pockets."

Prodigal Father's Intention.

The prodigal son had just come home.

"I really meant this reception to impress your mother," confided the old gentleman. "My welcome when I came home from the club last night was very different."

Satisfied with having set a fine example for the future, he turned his attention to the veal.

Mistake of a Blind Boa Constrictor.

A boa constrictor that was nearly blind was once found to be contentedly swallowing a blanket for dinner instead of a rabbit, which was also within reach, and it was only with great difficulty that it was forced to disgorge this singular article of food. A snake's tongue is therefore not an organ of taste, nor is it, as many think, a sting; it is more probably a delicate organ of touch.—Chambers' Journal.

Where She Felt Worst.

A little girl came to her mother one morning and said, "Mamma, I don't feel very well." "Well, that's too bad," said mamma. "Where do you feel worst?" "In school," was the prompt reply.

Easily Acquired.

Hyker (reading)—A physiognomist says that men who are impulsive and aggressive usually have black eyes. Piker—That's right. They are reasonably sure to get 'em sooner or later.

Colonel Anstruther Thomson, an aged Englishman, says in a volume of reminiscences that at a school which he attended as a boy the students were regularly dosed twice a year. "We were marched up to Carmalt's desk two and two. Two glasses of a horrid compound of bark were on the desk, and an usher stood on each side. We had to drink the dose, turn to the usher and put out our tongues to show that we had swallowed it! This was charged in our account: 'Wine, 5 shillings.'"

Widows In China.

According to the laws of good society in China, young widows should not remarry. Widowhood is therefore held in the highest esteem and the older the widow grows the more agreeable her position becomes. Should she reach fifty years she may, by applying to the emperor, get a sum of money with which to buy a tablet on which her virtues are named. The tablet is then placed over the door of the principal entrance of her house.

A FAMOUS SOCIETY.

Where London's Famous Preachers and Teachers Gathered.

The closing decades of the last century comprehended the palmy period of a distinguished little society in London which might have been described as a club for the teachers and preachers of their age, secular or religious. Such indeed was the Metaphysical society. Its organising spirit had perhaps been James Knowles. If its most famous member were found in W. E. Gladstone its leading spirits, who took the most active part in its discussions, were Cardinal Manning and Richard Holt Hutton, the editor of the Spectator. James Martineau, Matthew Arnold and William George Ward, the erewhile mathematical tutor of Balliol, as well as the poet Browning, may sometimes have been of the company, but the chief figures were those already mentioned. In his earlier days Hutton, like so many reflective men of his day, was the disciple of F. D. Maurice. Then among his associates were J. M. Ludlow and Thomas Hughes, the author of "Tom Brown's School Days." Afterward R. H. Hutton's mental master would have been recognized by him in his brother member of the Metaphysical society, James Martineau.

The great incidents in its proceedings at this time were the high speculative arguments wherein different sides were taken by teachers of their generation so mutually opposed and so individually distinguished as Manning and Martineau, upon very rare occasions, it may be, by Gladstone, Browning and, I rather think, once or twice by Tennyson himself. The extraordinary magnetism exercised by Martineau over his personal following was perceptible in his manner with casual acquaintances. As such, it was realized very many years ago by the present writer when, as an exceedingly young man fresh from college, he was concerned in preparing some examination questions, in which his venerable seniors, Maurice and Martineau, with one of two more, were to have a voice.—T. H. S. Escott in Chambers'.

He Was Awful Homely.

One day while on a hunting expedition in the Alps Victor Emmanuel met an old woman gathering brambles. She inquired of the stranger whether it was true, as she had heard, that the king was in the neighborhood. If so, was there any chance of seeing him?

"Yes," said his majesty, "he is about. Would you like to see him?"

The old woman declared that few sights would give her more pleasure.

"Well, mother, I am the king."

She stared at him for a moment and broke into a grin.

"Get out with you, jester! Do you think a nice woman like the queen would marry a chap like you, with that hideous mug?"

The king was not offended. Perhaps the compliment to his wife mollified him. He gave the woman a piece of money, with which he was always free, and passed along.

Lightning Roasted Duck.

An extraordinary effect of lightning is reported from Lake Grandlieu, in the Nantes region. A violent tempest burst over the lake, with vivid lightning and thunder. A number of boats were on the lake, and while they were hurrying to bank there was a tremendous peal of thunder. Almost immediately there fell among the boats the dead bodies of a large flock of wild ducks, some of them roasted to a nicety, and some charred to a cinder. Roast duck cooked by lightning reads like a novelty, even in the freaks of meteorology. If it could only be adapted to the "quick lunch" system!

Didn't Want the Family.

He had at last summoned up sufficient courage to "ask papa," when, to his astonishment, the blustering parent demanded, "Are you capable of supporting a family, sir?"

"No, sir," he replied with great firmness. "My father tackled that job and has had his wife's family on his hands ever since. I only want your daughter, sir, not the family."

One Obstacle Only.

Scholar—Professor, your mnemonic system is wonderful, and I am sure that any one, after mastering the rules, can learn to remember anything. But I am handicapped by one difficulty. Professor—What is it? Scholar—I can't remember the rules.—Town and Country.

More Important.

"With your daughter as my wife, sir, I can conquer the world."

"But that isn't the question. Can you make enough money to keep yourself in clothes?"—Life.

A BABY'S BIB.

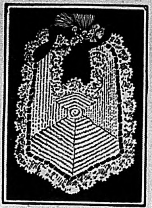
A Neat, Pretty and Serviceable Affair Crocheted In Cotton.

Tidy cotton No. 14 was used for this design, one ball being a little more than enough for two. This bib may be made more fancy by drawing a delicate ribbon through the spaces. To make the bib more serviceable a cord should be drawn through the neck spaces.

Start in the center with a hexagon. This is worked in ribbed stitch. Chain 3 and join. Into this work 1 ch. and 12 singles. Join on the first single.

Second Row.—Turn; 1 ch. on the stitch where joined, work 2 s. c. for a corner, 1 s. c. in the next stitch; 2 s. c. in next for corner, 1 s. c. in next; 2 s. c. in next for corner, and so on until 6 corners are started; then one more single and the row is taken up. Join on the first single, not on the 1 ch.

Third to Eleventh Row.—All are worked in the same way, except that in every row 1 stitch is increased. Always start at a corner and join on the first single. This makes the joining almost invisible.



BABY'S CROCHETED BIB.

Twelfth Row.—Do not turn, but chain 25 from the joining. (This is for one side of neck.) Now turn and work back over the chain, also the hexagon, to the second last corner, making increases only on the three corners between. There chain 25 for the other side of the neck. Turn and work back and forth around the whole bib to the other side of the neck until there are three and one-half ribs to the side. Where the bib ties on the back make the ribs round, or they may be left square if preferred.

Now work back and forth and on each beginning of a row stitch over 4 stitches and work to within 4 stitches on the other end. Do thus until at least 4 ribs (not rows) are made. Now add to it as many ribs as you wish it in length, running them over the lower two sections, decreasing 1 stitch in the beginning of a row to keep the edge in line with the rest. Work all around with 1 chain spaces and finish with fancy scallops.

Here the scallops are made by working around the bib twice, first with 6 double crochets into a double over the spaces, then fastened to the next, then 2 chain and fasten on the next double; then repeat all around, except around the neck. There finish the scallop with a 3 chain picot between the doubles and do not leave the space between scallops.

Second row of scallops: Work 2 doubles with a picot of 3 chain on every double space of scallop. Fasten down on the space between scallops. This makes the outer and last row full like a little ruffle.—Delineator.

NEW YORK STREETS.

HOW SOME OF THE OLD ONES GAINED THEIR NAMES.

Trinity Church Had More to Do With Bestowing Them Than All Other Authorities Combined—The Reason Broadway Killed Hudson Street.

The churchwardens of old Trinity church had more to do with naming the streets in the lower part of old New York than all other authorities combined. To be sure, the quaint burgomasters, before the first Trinity church was built, after hearing the pros and cons of landowners, found names for many streets significant of certain established facts, for streets and byways below Maiden lane on the easterly side of the Heere straat, afterward changed to Great George street, in honor of King George, by the authorities of Trinity. Then our patriots ignored the name and called it Bloomingdale road and then the Broad way, simplified into Broadway.

The present Trinity church, at the head of Wall street, is the third edifice of that name, the two preceding structures erected upon the same ground having been burned, but the first was one of the first churches erected in this city, and Trinity has always been the wealthiest corporation, patronized by the richest and most influential families for ages. The churchwardens of this church had their own way about naming the streets from the church to what is now Twenty-third street, west of Broadway, along the Hudson river front, because they owned that immense property.

In the olden time Queen Anne of England owned what was known as the Queen's farm, which covered the land commencing at St. Paul's church and extending to what is now Twenty-third street, bounded by Broadway on the east and the Hudson river on the west.

Vestry street was so styled by Trinity because the church had a vestry in that street between Hudson and Greenwich streets. Church street was so called because it bounded the west side of St. Paul's churchyard. Rector street was honored by the residence of the rector of Trinity. Barclay and Vesey streets were named after two clergymen of the church.

Trinity's officers determined that the main artery of the city should run through its land, and, grounded in their belief in their ability to carry out their intention, Hudson street was laid out. St. John's park and many other improvements were offered as inducements to purchasers of land, and St. John's chapel was erected and finished in 1803, one of the handsomest pieces of church architecture in the city. Trinity counted without an expression of the majority of the people and failed in its endeavor.

The arrogance of the church fretted the good people, and more to spite the churchwardens than because Broadway was nearer the center of the city Broadway acquired the preference, and the glory of Hudson street departed, never to return.

It has been remarked that the streets laid out by Trinity on the farm are all perfectly straight, while many in the lower part of the city are wonderfully crooked. The explanation of this lies in the fact that scarcely a small hill existed on the farm, while below there crooked lanes and byways, to say nothing of cow paths, were turned into streets, which ran in devious ways around hills, valleys and swamps. Many streets were named after the owners of property adjacent to or through which the ways were laid.

Moore street was originally the line of the first wharf erected in the city. Colonel Moore was formerly a large owner of the lots when first built upon. John street was named after John Harpending, who resided in Broadway, and John street when first laid out passed through his garden. Cortlandt, Dey and Beekman streets were carried through the property of the men after whom they were named. Ann street was named after Ann Beekman. Vandewater, Roosevelt, Rutgers, Gouverneur, Harrison, Lispenard, Bayard, De Lancey, Rivington and Willett streets were so designated because they passed through the property of people bearing these names.

Hester street was named after one of the Bayard family and Catharine after Catharine Rutgers. Henry street was named after a son of the Rutgers family, and Jacob street bounded the Jacob Leisler estate. Frankfort street was also a boundary of the same estate. Leisler was a native of Frankfurt. James street was named after a member of the De Lancey family, as was also Oliver street. Batavia lane was so called because the Roosevelt estate, through which this street was run, was called New Batavia.

Division street was originally the division line between the De Lancey and Rutgers farms. Leonard street was named after one of the Lispenards, and Orchard street was cut through the orchard of the De Lancey farm. Sheriff street was called after Sheriff Willett, through whose estate it was carried. Mangin and Goerck streets were named after the two city surveyors who laid out the river line.

The first mayor of New York after the Revolution, a true patriot, was James Duane, who was honored by the naming of Duane street after him.

Elm, Orange and Mulberry streets were laid out through public property in the vicinity of the Collect pond and owe their names to the peculiarities they suggest. Cherry street was originally run through "the road by the cherry trees" and named accordingly.

Rogues differ little. Each began as a disobedient son.—Chinese Proverb.

THE CASPIAN SEA.

One of the Remarkable Physical Features of the Globe.

One of the most remarkable physical features of the globe is the deep and wide depression in the hollow of which stands the Caspian sea and near to it the sea of Aral. The Caspian is nearly as large as France, and its surface is eighty-four feet below the level of the Black sea. The sea of Aral is nearly as large as Ireland and is very little over the sea level. Within recent geological times the vast expanse in which these lakes are found was sea. Its floor has been gradually raised, and the waters filling the depressions are all that is left of an ancient Mediterranean. A strange feature of both bodies of water is that although they receive large rivers, especially the Caspian, into which the Volga, the Ural river and scores of streams from the Caucasus flow, both have for many years been getting shallower. Evaporation, for they have no outlet, exceeds the inflow. But, for some climatic reason probably, the sea of Aral and its neighbor, Lake Balkhash, have since 1891 been increasing in depth. Whereas the Caspian, like the Dead sea, is very salt, owing to the rate of evaporation, Aral and Balkhash are brackish only. These remnants of what was once a great sea opening into the ocean, as the Mediterranean does now, still contain marine fish and seals. Some of the latter survive in the Aral and Baikal lakes, having gradually become fitted for their habitat, though it is no longer salt, but merely brackish, and, in the case of Baikal, actually fresh water.—London Telegraph.

A Back Action Joke.

The traveling men of Maine are noted for the jokes that they are always springing on the public, but recently one of them got into trouble in an unexpected way. His parents celebrated their golden wedding, and the drummer had long planned to spend the day with them. But when the day arrived he found that he was too far from his old home to get back to it, so he sent a telegram to his father. He thought that it was a good time to get off a joke on the old man, so he merely sent the message, "Is marriage a failure?" He was somewhat taken aback when he got the reply, "Marriage is not, but the results sometimes are."

THE MESSENGER FROM KHARTOOM

BY ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

Author of "Dr. Jack," "Dr. Jack's Wife," "Miss Caprice," Etc., Etc.

noticed that they cast anxious glances around them. They seem to expect to look upon something lying hither or yon—something that is apt to fill their souls with horror, and yet which possesses a deep attraction.

Sandy notes these glances cast around, and being a bright-minded chap, intuitively guesses their meaning. They are looking for the victims of the Thugs, and upon failing to discover one or more bodies lying upon the road, with life rendered extinct through the agency of cord or creese, cannot but feel the greatest amazement.

Then their looks turn upon the two Americans, as though they have guessed that these worthies are the ones against whom this uprising of the secret society took place. It must have been some mistake after all. Philosophically they determine this, and return to their various pursuits, though glances full of wonder greet Mynheer Joe and his companion at every turn.

As for Sandy himself, he follows the other along the street in a half-stupified way. It seems to him Joe can do anything. If the Hindoos were about to place them both upon one of the funeral pyres along the ghauts bordering the river, Sandy believes Joe is wizard enough to change the fire into ice, and cause the vengeful destroyers to fall upon their knees in humble servitude. After this exhibition, he will not doubt Joe's power to accomplish any wonder. So they pass along, and by degrees enter among a new lot of natives, who ignorant of the event that has so recently transpired, do not view them in that strange way. Sandy is burning with deep curiosity. By nature he abhors mysteries, and it just as curious as any woman could ever be.

Plainly, then, he puts the question to Joe, begging to know by what spirit of necromancy the other managed to dissolve the dark clouds that hung so threatening over their heads.

"It's all as simple as falling off a log. The whole thing lies in knowing how to do it," he remarks, whereat Sandy adds:

"A second Columbus making the egg stand on end? Suppose you illustrate matters, my dear fellow, and show us how the thing is done."

"Perhaps you saw me make a signal, and the rascals obey. You wonder what that could mean. Truth to tell, Sandy, I am a member of the very organization which our unscrupulous enemy, the baron, has subsidized in order to complete our downfall."

At this intelligence, the newspaper man loses his head and looks silly. His ideas even become confused, and he wonders whether Joe is not giving him a little chaff. Up to the present he has believed himself too old a bird to be caught in this way; but such strange things have occurred of late that he stands ready to take almost anything as gospel truth.

"Oh, you're a full-fledged Thug, eh?" he manages to murmur.

"Not only that, but an officer in the organization. It was as such I gave the sign that threw those fellows into a fever."

"How do you come to belong to such a lovely crowd?" asks Sandy.

"Ah, my dear fellow, that is a story you shall hear some day! Really, it is worth telling, since it is founded upon strange incidents such as only a Haggard could use with credit. For the present, let it suffice to say that this ancient order has more about it than the general world knows. It is not organized for murder, as you and other people believe, although the Thugs of India, like the Nihilists of Russia, do not hesitate to remove anyone who runs against their will.

"A series of strange adventures threw me into the midst of them some years ago, and to preserve my life I was obliged to join the order, attaining a high place of honor before the opportunity came to quit India's shores.

"I can now see very plainly why that same thing occurred to me, for you and I must have fallen victims to the fury of the mob only for my power."

"By the way, Joe, have you any more of these little bombs hidden away? If so, put them to good use, man. There's no telling when we may need them in this country. Bless my soul! I have a strange feeling all the while as though invisible danger was hanging over our heads. What can it mean?"

"When the baron ceases to annoy us, you will get over that, Sandy. The truth of the matter is you have fallen into the habit of feeling his presence near you. These men of evil seem to exale a something that impresses itself upon those they hate, even as might the rattlesnake when charming a victim. Once the serpent is trampled under foot, and all that uneasiness vanishes."

"You've changed your mind, then, and intend to make way with the baron?" says Sandy, quickly.

NO DIFFERENCE.

No distinction is made as to the kind of Piles that Hem-Roid cures.

The names Internal, External, Bleeding, Blind, Itching, Suppurating, etc., are simply names of the different stages through which every case will pass if it continues long enough.

Piles are caused by congestion or stagnation of blood in the lower bowel, and it takes an internal remedy to remove the cause.

Dr. Leonhardt's Hem-Roid is a tablet taken internally.

It is a permanent cure and no case of Piles has ever been found it failed to cure.

"Well, it becomes more evident every hour that it is a desperate case of Greek against Greek. Unless I demolish the baron he will down me."

"Eureka! That's my policy to a dot. The question is how it shall be done."

"That will come out all right, old man."

"I give myself no uneasiness with regard to it. Poor old Popoff! He'll carry out the name to a letter presently. But since he's shown himself to be such a consummate rascal, I no longer feel pity for him. Let him go. The king has commanded it; the decree must be entered," and Sandy makes a royal sweep with his arm that would cause many a monarch to turn green with envy, could he see it.

Mynheer Joe looks beyond, and sees things that a wise Providence screens from the eyes of impulsive fellows of Sandy's stripe. He knows that the life of the baron is exceedingly precious to the Russian authorities, and that they will make a searching investigation into matters in case he is downed; it may even be considered a casus bellum, and the two great countries be embroiled in a terrible conflict.

Thus Mynheer Joe, feeling the responsible nature of his position, resolves to do nothing rash. He desires to consult with some one who has a long head, and knows of no person more competent than Mr. Grimes. Sandy is all right when it comes to action, but he does not make the best adviser in the world, as Joe has learned before now.

It is high time they turn their steps in the direction of the hotel, as the hour is getting late.

Through the crowds they pass without any fear of violence, since they hold the good will of the great secret society of India.

"Ah! There's the baron!" says Sandy. And Joe catches a glimpse of the Russain's face among the dark ones just beyond.

He reads surprise and baffled rage upon it, as though Popoff had already begun to understand that again his plans have been defeated by circumstances over which he has no control.

Mynheer Joe cannot help showing something of his feelings in his expression. The look is not a contemptuous one; for he has considerable respect in the direction of the shrewd baron. At the same time, he despises a man who will descend to the methods practiced by this agent of the czar.

If Joe chooses, he can meet him on a level, and, employing the same methods, influence the secret order of Thugs against the Russian, for he has power behind the throne. This does not happen to be his way. If the baron will not enter into another duel with him, he must employ some other honorable means for accomplishing his end.

They finally bring up at the hotel. The hour is not so late for those who make day out of night, but with travellers weary from a long sea journey and sight-seeing all day, it is an entirely different matter.

All have retired, and Joe is compelled to let the matter lie over to the morrow or else wake Mr. Grimes. This latter he would be tempted to do, as he believes the case requires prompt attention, only that he remembers the pseudo silver king complained of a headache as well as a lame ankle.

So he dtermines to let matters rest until the morning. If all goes well, they can then discuss the affair with clear brains and decide upon the best course to pursue.

The day dawns upon the city of Bombay, and, as is usual, all soon becomes bustle and confusion. As the hour grows nearer noon, this enthusiasm will gradually die out and leave a sort of lethargy in its place, common to all warm climates.

Mynheer Joe is early on foot, and awaits the coming of his friend. When Mr. Grimes finally shows up he is greeted with a wink and a beckoning finger that draws him over to a retired spot, anxious to learn what new deviltry is in the wind.

Rapidly Joe sketches the adventure of the preceding night. The lapse of time has not changed his mind with regard to things, and he sees matters in just as serious a light as when the events occurred, ten hours before.

Mr. Grimes hears the story gravely. He makes a good listener, for he says nothing until the end is reached; but all the while he keeps up a-thinking. Of all people, he is the last to make a mountain out of a mole hill; but there can be no disguising the fact that the situation is desperate when a man like the baron can set such diabolical machinery in motion against them.

He agrees with Mynheer Joe that the time has come to strike back. Perhaps his methods may differ from those of the traveller; for Mr. Grimes is a believer in the homeopathic adage, similia similibus curantur—like is cured by like. When in Rome, he does as the Romans do, and adapts himself to circumstances. This has been one reason for his remarkable success. To a certain extent, Mynheer Joe has followed the same plan, but he cannot go so far as his friend in these matters, drawing the line at a certain point.

Thus, in order to meet at a common level, these two must both give way. It is advice Joe seeks, nothing more.

Mr. Grimes ponders over the matter. He does not often act from impulse, and chews the cud of reflection at the beginning of a crisis, not when it has passed by, his policy being that an ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure.

Finally he turns around and lays his finger upon the arm of the traveller. The light in his eye proclaims that he has conceived an idea, and Joe feels satisfied something is coming which it will pay him well to lay hold of—something that may cause the baron to believe he has struck an avalanche.

"Mynheer Joe, we must be up and doing. This miserable Russian shall not say he has beaten three Yankees in a game. I know your principles and respect them, but the baron is an obstacle to our progress. He must be removed."

CHAPTER XXI.

"In the first place," remarks Mr. Grimes, in that steady voice of his that never deviates, no matter what the excitement around him, "we must have the secret co-operation of the authorities in anything we undertake."

"There will be no trouble about that—I have already put a flea in their ear. They know who the baron is and what the nature of his mission to India may be. Naturally then they hate him—naturally it is to their interest to dispose of this spy who comes to foment trouble. The question is how far will they go?"

"You can see some of them again, Joe?"

"Readily, sir."

Then we must fight fire with fire. Since the baron has inaugurated this system of tactics, we'll give him all he wants. His Russian ways don't go with people from the States. I wish we had him out there. A noose and the limb of a tree would transport him to eternity, unless we thought it best to use a coat of tar and ornament it with feathers."

"That would be a prime ending of the game, sir, but unfortunately we are in a country where such enlightened arts are not known. Besides, the government would be held responsible for such a public taking off. It will be better for us to have him transported."

"Certainly," remarks Joe, although he does not grasp the idea that is slowly taking form in the other's brain.

"In order to accomplish that, you and I must exercise our minds and arrange a plan by means of which the baron will step into a trap. We know his cunning, and whatever is done will have to be sugar-coated."

"That is quite right, Mr. Grimes."

"My plan, broadly speaking and without the details that must be arranged later, is something like this: We will arrange matters so that the baron steps into the little parlor of the spider. He sees a luscious morsel there and is tempted to devour it. Just then his feet are entangled in the web and he finds himself powerless. After that he leaves the country on board a sailing vessel, to be landed perhaps on a desert island or conveyed to South America. The chances are ten to one he will never care to indulge in any more of these games in case he lives to reach Russia again."

"Your idea is a good one. Of course, it must be understood that under no circumstances will the hand of the British authorities be seen in anything we undertake."

"That can be arranged easily enough. Things are often done sub rosa, and nothing left to tell the tale."

"Ah! A thought strikes me; let us have it out while I find it fresh on my mind. You spoke of an attractive bait."

Mr. Grimes bites his lips.

"That was it, Joe."

"You had something definite on your mind when you spoke in that way?"

"I did for a fact," watching his companion out of the corner of his eye.

"Someone I know, sir?"

"Well, I am free to confess it."

"Plainly, then, Mr. Grimes, you had reference to Miss Tanner."

"To be equally frank with you, I did, my boy. You frown. I understand your feelings to a dot. You have my sympathy, my dear fellow, if that will do you any good."

Mynheer Joe frowns savagely now.

"Give up the idea, sir."

"Why so?"

"Because I put my foot down upon it."

At this the other arches his eyebrows and pretends to be taken aback. Not that he is at all convinced that his plans must be altered, for it chances that Mr. Grimes is quite a stubborn man in his way.

"Pardon me, Mynheer Joe, but for once I must decline to see your authority. This young woman has a father, and he is one of the party. I have had a talk with him. He gives his consent to the plan I sketched for his benefit."

"Confusion! Well, what if he does? Because a foolish father agrees to endanger his child's happiness, her life even, is that any reason I should also consent? Not for Joseph, sir. I come down flat-footed against the idea." And the traveller looks as though he might annihilate the person who could thus propose such a thing to him.

"The young lady agrees to it," says Grimes, in a most nonchalant manner.

"What! You have spoken of it to Molly?" flashes from Joe's lips. This hot-shot really crumbles his last bulwark away.

"Yes. You remember we three were left last night. I was about to retire, as I had a lame ankle and a headache, when a native servant came with a message from Tanner. I hobbled to his room and found Molly there.

"It struck me at once that there was something in the wind, for while the young lady's face looked serious, that of the Illinois legislator was black as a thunder cloud. Before one word had been spoken, I was able to understand that trouble was in the air, and could give a shrewd guess as to who was to blame. In his own peculiar blunt way, the senator began to tell me, now and then calling upon his daughter to refresh his mind. Thus I was soon in possession of the whole story.

"To be brief in telling you, it seems that the audacious baron had got ahead of you. Perhaps you noticed a native hand Miss Tanner a letter while you were admiring the great temple of Mahaluxmee?"

"Jove! I do recollect it! Heard him say in good English: 'Read it when alone, lady,' and saw Molly mechanically slip it into her bosom. Then I forgot all about it, you know," says Joe, somewhat eagerly, his curiosity excited.

"That was a lost opportunity, my dear boy. Had you asked Molly to open it then and there, you could not have failed to tell her your secret."

"My secret, Mr. Grimes?" turning pale.

"Certainly. You love the girl and dare not tell her. Good heavens, man! The fact is patent to us all. 'Faint heart never won fair lady.' I'm astounded! You, as bold as a lion in everything else, to be a laggard in love. Go in and win, my boy. You've got a clear field, and the game is yours if you only show nerve enough to put out your hand and take it."

"Do you think so, my friend?"

"Why should you doubt it?"

"I will tell you, frankly: Ever since Molly learned that I was Joe Miner Carringford, she has not been the same toward me," the other says seriously, at which Mr. Grimes laughs with the air of a man of the world.

"Naturally so, Joe. There are two reasons for such a change on her part. In the first place, the fact that you are the heir makes her feel differently toward you. She fears lest people may suspect that she angles for you."

"To perdition with such gossips!" roars Joe.

"Exactly my feelings; but that doesn't mend matters a particle. The other thing is what has influenced Molly most," continues Mr. Grimes.

"Well, what is the tenor of that?"

"You will forgive me if I am personal?"

"Of course."

"Then hark to the words of a man whose business it has been for years to read human nature, until from experience it has become very much like an open book to him. The hour that Molly learned the truth and knew the man who saved her from the cruel waters of the Mediterranean at Malta was no other than he whom she sought, the heir to vast estates—then she suddenly awoke to the consciousness of the fact that she loved him."

"God grant it!" almost whispers Joe.

Her maidenly modesty put her on guard lest she betray her secret. That is all. Be the man in love you have even been in battle, Mynheer Joe; walk right up to the cannon's mouth, and the prize is yours."

"I will," responds Joe, with a sudden determination. "And yet, hang it all, Grimes, you don't know what a queer feeling comes over me whenever I start to tell of my love and look up into Molly's bright eyes. Somehow the words race into another channel of themselves. But see here, what did you mean about the baron getting ahead of me? Was that letter from him?" with a fierce frown.

"It was, offering his hand and heart, not to speak of his estates, at the feet of the queen of beauty whom we know as Molly Tanner."

Mynheer Joe looks serious.

"That was a confounded neat trick of his—proposing right under my nose. But I don't imagine he has any show. Do you, Mr. Grimes?"

"None at all, I assure you," with a grin at the anxiety apparent in Joe's voice.

"She knows him too well. Thank Heaven, there are some sensible American girls who will not sell themselves for a title!"

"Why, old Tanner tells me she has had proposals from Sir Hugh Trelawny and Lord Arthur Stanhope. She refused them because she did not love them! Think of it, man!"

"God bless her! She's [illegible] winning! And you think I'm safe, old fellow?"

"You've got the inside track, unless you let it go too long. In matters of this kind delays are always dangerous."

"Well, so long."

"Hold on, my friend; where away?"

"To find Molly; to tell her what a blockhead I am, and ask her to take me in hand," responds the man of action, at which his companion bursts into a roar.

"Time enough for that, Joe. Don't do it in an abrupt way. Watch your opportunity, man. The women—bless 'm—like to be wooed and won in the proper way. Many a girl has been frightened into saying no when she means yes by the awful abruptness of her lover's proposal. Besides, I am just getting to business. Sit down and behave yourself."

"I suppose I must, but it's too bad I can't put my fate up to the test, now that I am all worked up. Ten to one when the chance comes again I'll prove to be a miserable coward," mutters Mynheer Joe, who is developing some new and singular traits of late.

Mr. Grimes taps the forefinger of his right hand upon the palm of his left, as if to give an expression and force to his words.

"Although this proposal of the baron's was apparently couched in elegant language, there was a threat behind it. He says—"

"What!" cries Joe. "He dares threaten Molly, the miserable hound?"

"Even so. I don't know but that it is the custom in his country when a man of the nobility deigns to propose to one beneath him in their social rank. The Rusisans have peculiar ways as well as the Turks and Arabs. At any rate, this man has vowed to make Molly Tanner his wife, and means to raise Cain if she will not consent to become a baroness. He seems to consider it an honor to have asked her, and takes it for granted she will accept in spite of her father or any one else."

"I always did say he was a conceited ass. His ears give him away," grins Joe, whose hands are working nervously, as though in sympathy with his feelings. He would give all he ever expects to handle of his uncle's estate for the privilege of laying hold of that same Baron Popoff at this moment.

"True. But we must not deceive ourselves. He may be conceited; but, at the same time, he is a dangerous man."

"Ah! I grant you that. He plays with the sword as I have seen few men do. Yes, the baron is no fool, after all."

"We three discussed the matter thoroughly last night. I found the senator a level-headed man, and his daughter backed up propositions made by myself in a manner that did her credit. In the end we arrived at a conclusion, and the story you have told me this morning only convinces me we did the right thing."

"What was this conclusion?" asks Joe, as his companion looks down the avenue.

"Speak of the Old Nick and you'll get an order of brimstone. Yonder goes the man we were talking about. Notice his arrogant strut. The natives seem to quail before him as I've never seen them do when in the presence of a British officer. Ah, it will be a sad day for poor India if the iron heel of the White Czar of all the Russias is ever set upon her borders!"

"Stop your philosophy. Come to business, Mr. Grimes. Tell me your plan without delay," growls Mynheer Joe, who cannot help sending a black look after the retreating form of the proud man who has crossed his path and seems destined to give him trouble.

"Well, here it is in a nutshell: Molly has consented to appear to favor his suit."

"Misery!" groans the traveller.

"Of course it is only assumed, for she solemnly assured me that if the baron were the last man on the face of the earth, she would not have him. This will in a measure pull the wool over his eyes, and we can lead him the easier into the trap. All of us seem to be of the same mind—that this man must be transported out of India. We had not decided last night how this was to be done, but our morning talk has developed the idea."

"I am beginning to fall in with your plans. All I want is an assurance that Molly may not be assigned any duty to bring her into danger," Joe remarks, gravely.

"Readily given, my boy, and don't forget it. Let me map out your work this morning. I suppose money is no object here?"

"I am a man of wealth. Whole lakhs of rupees, as they say here, are at your disposal. Call on the senator and charge to my account. He told me to draw on him without stint."

"Good. Now listen. As soon as convenient I want you to hie away to the river ghauts, and find the owner of some vessel about to sail for South America or some far-away port. Make arrangements with him to take a secret passenger as a prisoner, a man whose ravings on the voyage must be treated as though he were a crazy man.

Mynheer Joe jumps up.

"Thunder and Mars! Why didn't I think of it before. Captain Ben is the very man! If the good ship Avalanche hasn't sailed yet, the baron stands a chance of landing at Valparasio, in Chili, some months hence," he exclaims.

CHAPTER XXII.

A short time later, Mynheer Joe makes his way in the direction of the river, determined to carry out his share of the plan as proposed by Mr. Grimes. If the Avalanche has not already sailed, he is sure of hearty co-operation on the part of his friend, the Yankee skipper, and so far as this share of the contract is concerned, it can be set down as good as already accomplished.

There is considerable foreign shipping at Bombay, much of which lies in the river, as the Indian Ocean can be very treacherous, and great tidal waves have done a tremendous amount of mischief in the past.

When Mynheer Joe reaches the terraces, or ghauts, that line the river, he finds himself in the vicinity of the place where the dead are buried. A great pillar of smoke rises, and by glancing over a wall he can see the funeral pyre, with all its primitive accessories, the sad mourners, the black attendants and the bodies that are being thus cremated, their ashes to be cast upon the sacred Ganges.

Although the weird spectacle might interest him at another time, just at present Mynheer Joe has something else on his mind which he cannot dismiss.

Eagerly he scans the surface of the water in search of the clipper ship. It was here Captain Ben told him the vessel lay. A number can be seen near by; one bears the stars and stripes, and upon her Joe fastens his eyes.

He speedily makes her out to be the Avalanche, since she carries out the verbal description Captain Ben gave. To his chagrin, he sees signs that indicate an early sailing.

"By my life, they look as though they only wait for a boat that may be out! Another hour, and I might have missed him!" he exclaims aloud, when a heavy hand comes down with a thump in the middle of his back, and a hearty voice roars:

"Well done, Mynheer Joe! Reckon you've come down to see what kind of a craft I sail. Go with me on board; we can have some hours of chinning ere the anchor is heaved."

Of course, it is bluff Captain Ben himself, the old schoolmate with whom Joe tussled many a time in the days gone by. That worthy shakes hands eagerly now; he could almost hug the Yankee sailor, such is his intense delight at seeing him.

"Impossible, Ben! I don't even want your men to see me, so that the cock-and-bull story you may tell them later will have an air of probability about it."

"Eh! What's in the wind now?" bursts out the other, looking in Joe's face.

"Come over here under this overhanging wall, and I'll tell you quite a yarn that may awaken your interest, even if it doesn't harrow up your blood. At any rate, I am in hopes that it will arouse your chivalry."

"Hello! Three to one there's petticoats in it. Wouldn't talk about chivalry otherwise. Well, here's Ben Hazen, rough seadog that he is, always willing to remember his mother—God bless her—and do a favor in her name when there's a woman in trouble, not to speak of Daisy."

Mynheer Joe gives him a look that must thrill his heart, it is so full of thanks. Then, knowing the value of time, and desirous that the sailor shall learn all the particulars before making his decision, Joe starts in.

He is a fine story-teller, though some one else might do better just here, since so many of his own achievements enter into the affair, and he fails to even do them simple justice.

The captain gets an inkling of this fact, and makes ample allowances. Although he does not know all that Mynheer Joe has been doing of late years, Bombay has been ringing with his praise as the avenger of Brave Gordon; and, besides, Captain Ben has not forgotten that his friend was ever modest even in their old school days.

Several times he stops Joe to ask questions, for it is plainly evident that he wants to know all that is going on. At last the story is done. Captain Ben holds his head with both hands, and seems to be studying the ground between his feet. Joe does not disturb him, but calmly lights a cigar. He knows his man, and does not fear for the final result.

All at once the sailor puts out a horny hand.

"Shake, Joe, old boy," he says quietly.

"Well?" accepting the palm.

"You can count upon me."

"That means—"

"The baron will have the chance of his life to study the geography of that quaint Chilian city of Valparaiso ere many months elapse."

"I thought I knew you, Ben," said the elated Joe on hearing the bluff captain's words, expressing agreement with his plans. "Now, as to the pay for this risky job—"

"The what?" bellows the excitable skipper.

"I mean just what I say. I'm a man of wealth, and you have your way to make in the world. I must arrange a decent price for this business. What would be fair? A thousand dollars—"

"Three times too much," grumbles Ben.

"Well, I shall put something in your hand before you sail, and don't you open it on your life, old man. I haven't forgotten the demure little girl you were sweet on as a boy, and who you tell me is now your wife. When you get home to Philadelphia about next Christmas, place this in her hand and tell Daisy it comes from her old schoolmate, Joe Miner."

"I'll do that with pleasure, Joe, only don't make the present too costly. Daisy and I have often talked of you. This is my last long voyage. If I live through it, I am promised a captain's berth on one of the new Clyde coasting steamers running out of New York."

"How many children have you, Ben?"

"Two—Marguerite and Joe."

"What! You named your boy—"

"After the only chap who could outwrestle, outthrow, outrun me at school—the same boy who dragged me out of the Delaware when I went in through the ice—one Joe Miner, who actually wants to pay me now for doing him a small favor."

"Small favor be hanged! This man is a secret emissary of the czar."

"All right."

"You may get into a war with Russia."

"Well, I can lick 'em," with a grin.

"Joking aside, Ben, this is a serious business, and you must neglect no opportunity to shield yourself, for trouble is almost sure to come of it."

"Oh, I'm willing enough to appear an innocent tool of yours or an unknown party shipping this crazy Russian out to Valparaiso. I've no desire to embroil my beloved country in a war with the czar. Why, they might capture Philadelphia, and, think of it, my little home is on the outskirts!"

"Well, let's talk now about the plan to be pursued: You must have a document, written by some fictitious person, asking whether you would be willing to take as a passenger to Valpariso a gentleman who, at times, is a little out of his head and may have to be treated as a prisoner; that if suitable terms can be ararnged, he will be brought aboard at a certain hour."

"That's straight enough. Meanwhile, I'll enter several notes on the log about receiving such and such a letter. Trust two Pennsylvania Dutchmen for hatching up a plot to confuse the natives, eh, Joe?"

They talk a little longer, and the details are arranged so that there may be no blunder. Unless some accident occurs, the shadow of which has not yet been seen, they appear to have a firm hold upon the game, and the chances indicate a sudden and astonishing surprise, together with an unexpected sailing on the part of the Russian nobleman.

When Mynheer Joe leaves the skipper of the Avalanche, he has arranged everything to his satisfaction. They understand each other thoroughly and nothing is lacking save the production of the baron's body.

Joe has plenty more to do. Already half the morning has passed, and the heat grows more and more intense. He has become somewhat used to it during his Soudan campaign, and calls himself a salamander, since he never flinches from the hottest sun.

From the Burning Ghaut, as the place of incineration on the river bank is called, he heads once more for the hotel at the foot of Malabar Hill. Bombay is bustling with life, from distant Mazagon on one side to Calabah on the other. Joe finds it difficult to even make his way along some of the streets, and soon hails a palkee gharry, into which he tumbles and is soon dropped at his destination.

The first person he sees is the faithful Kassee; and when he crooks his finger, the other comes to his side like a flash. He takes his orders from his master, smiles, nods and is gone. That wonderfully active brain of Kassee's will handle the matter well. No fear of his making a blunder. The only one Joe has ever known him to make was in bumping his head against the obstruction in the Nile, at the time they were thrown out of the boat in the darkness, and losing his master.

Having finished with Kassee, and seen him well on his way, Mynheer Joe looks up the others who are to figure in this little drama that means so much to the baron. He finds them upon the piazza of the hotel; Sandy lying in a hammock and taking in a story told by a gray-haired old officer of the dreadful scenes he witnessed during the Sepoy rebellion when engaged on the column sent to the relief of Lucknow; Mr. Grimes trying to smoke a native hubble-bubble with indifferent success; while Molly and her father have made themselves as easy as possible in cane chairs, where the grateful shade is densest

PUSHING AHEAD....

Everyday finds us steadily advancing and requiring more and more men to do our work.

And we get the workmen—workmen of the best type, too. Just the kind you want to do your work, that's the style of men we are looking for.

We Have The Facilities

for doing your painting, graining, paperhanging and decorating. Have the materials, the ideas, the everything, and we do not make mistakes.

Promptness

Is one of our mottoes.

To be on a job the very moment we plan for it is sometimes out of the question, and reasonable people understand that—for sometimes a delay on a previous job occurs to detain an hour or two, sometimes half a day, but our work, we wager, is executed as promptly as any other firm of our stamp in Canada.

So large a staff of workmen and such facilities for promptness and execution and such splendid work as we turn out—appeals to our customers. We prove this from repeated calls.

No decorative house in Canada is better prepared than ourselves to execute superior decorative work.—It all rests with you what money you wish to spend. If you care to spend $1,000 on the decorations of your Hall, we can do it for you. We have done it elsewhere.

If you want hand decorative work on a drawing-room, costing as much, we have also done that elsewhere and can do it here.

There is no limit to decorative possibilities in our hands.

We're in touch with the first decorations of the land, the finest colorists, and can secure you New York or Bostonian Ideas if you are prepared for the price.

Our fabrics, our wall papers, our ideas, our workmanship go hand in hand for your pleasure and our profit.

There is a peculiar condition of the blood which favors the growth of cancer germs in the system, and that is the reason that local treatment like the above fails to make permanent cures. MENAGERIE WONDERS.

RINGLING BROTHERS EXHIBIT THE RAREST COLLECTION IN THE WORLD—OTHER CIRCUS MARVELS.

The most extensive and valuable collection of wild animals in the world is the menagerie feature of Ringling Brothers' wonderful circus exhibitions. Among the rare creatures to be seen nowhere else, and rated above price, are two giraffes, the only rhinoceros known to be in captivity, the almost extinct gnu, or horned horse, a perfect specimen of the white polar bear, a real baby elephant born in America, standing no higher than its mother's knee, and the only one ever born and successfully reared in captivity, and a gigantic troop of 40 elephants, the largest herd ever showed under canvas, and twice as many as are with any other show in the world. In this priceless collection of odd animal creatures the specimens are all perfect types, and 108 cages, dens and lairs are required to carry them. The big menagerie tent is the largest ever made for a circus, and so big that an army of 5000 men could be easily manoeuvred within it. Naturalists and explorers unqualifiedly pronounce the Ringling Brothers' menagerie the largest and most valuable in existence. Frequently colleges and schools are closed to give students an opportunity to inspect this celebrated wild animal collection. One may practically make a tour of the world in the time devoted to the study of this immense zoological display, and it is safe to say that never again will an opportunity present itself for seeing a great many animals almost extinct. The horse show with Ringling Brothers is another surpassing feature of the wonderful circus, exhibiting 650 superb specimens, 300 of which are performing equines of blue-blooded pedigree. The capital invested in this department alone indicates the progressive spirit of this firm, which is world-renowned as proprietors of the most successful circus institution in existence. This policy is again illustrated this season in the production of a magnificent spectacle, Jerusalem and the Crusades, involving 1,200 characters, a ballet of 300 and a singing chorus of 200, requiring the use of a stage larger than the combined stage space in 100 theatres. More than 2000 costumes, the design and make of Parisian artists, are employed, and the scenes of marching hosts, dancing galaxies, galloping knights, ecclesiastical groupings and swiftly changing dramatic incidents form a spectacular display indescribably fascinating. The music composed for this gorgeous production is rendered by the largest portable grand pipe organ ever built, and a band of 50 selected soloists. The scenic investiture is elaborate and ornate, and the spectacle in its entirety is incomparably the most important and successful historical display ever shown under canvas. The same policy of enlargement and novelty is to be seen in the ring performances this season. Three hundred and seventy-five of the pick and flower of Europe, America and the Orient in the circus profession are to be found in the huge arenic programme. Many of the leading artists in the riding, acrobatic and gymnastic numbers have never been seen in this country before, and are celebrated in their foreign homes. This year it takes 85 cars of double length to transport the immense equipment, horses and personal factors. When the circus is completely set up on the show grounds there are 20 pavilions in all. The street pageant on the morning of show day is the biggest and most varied ever organized. This attraction with Ringling Brothers has always been immeasurably superior to the efforts of all other shows, and this season it is more diversified, resplendent, novel, sensational and longer than ever before. The great shows will be here one day only, Saturday, June 4, and give two performances, at 2 o'clock and 8 o'clock. Numbered reserved seats and admission tickets can be bought circus day at Riggs' music store for exactly the same prices charged in the ticket wagons on the show grounds

HIS FIRST CHECK.

The Way the Piece of Paper Worried Thomas A. Edison.

Thomas A. Edison once told a friend the story of his first acquaintance with any big sum of money. It was when he was struggling with his earlier inventions, and he had about as clear an idea of the value of a bank check as the man in the moon. He had finally sold his patent on the gold and stock indicator to the Western Union Telegraph company and had called at its office to close the deal. After a few preliminaries he was given a check for $40,000. He eyed it curiously and appeared to be puzzled what to do with it. Observing his perplexity, General Lefferts, then president of the Western Union, told him that if he would go to the Bank of America, in Wall street, he could get the cash on his check.

"So I started," said Edison, "after carefully folding up the check, and went toward Wall street. So uncertain was I in regard to that way of doing business that I thought while on the way that if any man should come up to me and offer me two crisp $1,000 bills for that piece of paper I would give him the check very quickly."

On his arrival at the Bank of America he half tremblingly shoved his check out to the cashier. The latter scrutinized it closely, gave him a piercing glance and said something which Edison, being hard of hearing, failed to understand. That was enough. He was fully convinced that his check was not worth $40,000 and again thought as he rushed out of the bank that any man who would give him $2,000 for it could have it. He hurried back to the office of the Western Union and said he could not get any money. A clerk was sent to the bank with him to identify him.

"This man," said the clerk, "is Mr. Thomas A. Edison, to whose order the check is drawn."

"Why, certainly, Mr. Edison," said the cashier. "How would you like your money—in what shape?"

"Oh, any way to suit the bank; it doesn't make any difference to me, so long as I get my money."

Edison was given $40,000 in large bills. After dividing the roll into two wads of $20,000 each he stuffed one into each trousers pocket and made all speed out of Wall street. The next day he began work on his first New York laboratory.—Success.

JAPANESE PROVERBS.

There is no miracle in true doctrine.

Human life is like the dew of the morning.

The fallen blossom never returns to the branch.

There is no shore to the bitter sea of Birth and Death.

Never let go the reins of the wild colt of the heart.

One confession effaces the sins of even three years.

Only by reason of having died does one enter into life.

With one hair of a woman you can tether even a great elephant.

Even the touching of sleeves in passing is caused by some relation in a former life.—Lafcadio Hearn's "In Ghostly Japan."

Washington's Father.

My father, Augustine, has been described as a good planter and a man of energy. I apprehend that he was of a serious tendency, for Lawrence, my brother, once gave me to understand that most of the few books at Wakefield were religious, but whether this was so or not I do not know. Like some of the rest of us, my father had a high and quick temper, which, as he used to say, he had to keep muzzled. I remember being terrified at seeing him in a storm of anger because the clergyman who was to have baptized my sister Mildred was too much in liquor to perform the ceremony.—From S. Weir Mitchell's "The Youth of Washington" in Century.

Pretty Customs of Japan.

Japanese ladies are like the French in their love of social intercourse and conversation. They pay fewer visits, but stay infinitely longer, always two or three hours and sometimes a whole day. They are received by the maid, who places a large silk cushion for them to rest upon, and much time is spent in detailed inquiries concerning each other's family. There is no special calling day in Japan. They visit when their fancy takes them, and they never go empty handed to a friend's house. The gifts are usually fruit or flowers or perhaps a fresh fish, and whatever they take is always daintily wrapped in a little box of paper or wood.

Neglected Her For Papa.

Beautiful Ernestine was sobbing as though her heart would break.

"What is it, dear?" asked her girl friend.

"W-why," she sobbed, "I t-told Jack, after he had proposed, to go up and see papa."

"What of that?"

"Why, they started playing cards, and now he goes up to see papa every night."

Have the Desire.

Make up your mind to be educated, and you are already half educated. A strong desire to be or to do any particular thing, accompanied by effort, multiplies your power and throws wide the door of opportunity that leads to the accomplishment of your purpose.—Success.

Almost.

Hinks—I always like to dine with a man who knows how to order a dinner. Binks—Yes; it's almost as good as dining with a man who knows how to pay for one.

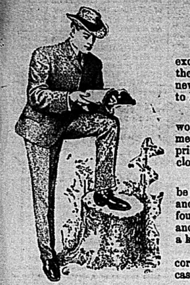
MEN'S SUITS



The Newest of All.

The more exacting and particular a man may be about exclusiveness in fabrics and patterns, even if he insists on all the advantages he expects from a tailor, then the more these new suits which we are showing for the first time will appeal to him.

He will find in them all the style and satisfaction he would in garments that the best tailors could build to his measure, though they cost a little more than half the tailor's price and the same as he would pay elsewhere for ready-made clothes that would not prove as satisfactory.

Throughout these splendid garments the tailoring will be found to be faultless; it is of the highest character known and if anything a little more exacting and thorough than is found on the tailor's best productions. And of more importance than all, they possess that well bred air the tailor's have a knack of giving to the clothes they turn out.

Needless to say, the styles as they are found here are correct, that is expected, or that a perfect fit is assured in every case—we are more particular about that than you could be.

Fine Suits

The new single and double-breated styles—of fine Blue and Black Cheviots and Serges, Black unsheared Worsteds, Fancy Imported Cassimeres in the latest colorings and Overplaid Effects. Fancies that are exclusive with us and the tailors.

"LONG LIVE THE KING."

Three Days in Rochester for $2.25 Excursion per the people's favorite steamer, "North King," Friday, May 27th, leaving Belleville at 9.30 p.m. Monday, 30th is Decoration Day at Rochester. Home Tuesday morning. 21 to 27

HOW BELLEVILLE PEOPLE CELEBRATED VICTORIA DAY.

The Gallant Fifteenth at Kingston—Large Crowd at Madoc—Little Picton's Fine Races—A Quiet Day at Home.

So far as Belleville was concerned, it was about the quietest holiday ever seen. There was positively nothing doing. Some good people went driving, others went fishing, others—but they were few in number—went to work. The youngsters, assisted by a few of the "older heads," set off fireworks, and appeared to get the customary amount of enjoyment out of that ear-splitting amusement. A good many flags and banners were displayed, but most of them, like their owners, appeared to have "that tired feeling," and stayed in cold storage. All the people who thirsted for excitement went out of town, some to Kingston with the military; some to Madoc with the Scotchmen and Minstrels; some to Picton to see the horse races. All report a good time and a feeling of lassitude to-day.

IN THE LIMESTONE CITY.

There were fully 600 Belleville people in Kingston yesterday, exclusive of the Fifteenth. Many went by boat and more by train. Kingston was en fete, and thronged with Canadian and U.S. visitors. The decorations were fine, and the good people of the Limestone City can surely pat themselves on the back over the way they celebrated Victoria Day, 1904.

The Fifteenth left their Armory in this city at 5 a.m., 216 strong, in command of Major Pope. Lt.-Col. Halliwell, being brigadier for the day, had preceded the Regiment to Kingston. No. 1 Company was commanded by Capt. Marsh, No. 2 by Lieut. Brown, No. 3 by Capt. Barragar and No. 4 by Capt. Mordon. The lads were in high spirits and looked forward to a great day, in which they were not disappointed. The North King left her wharf at 5.15, and arrived in Kingston at 10.30, after a most delightful trip. The steamer called at Deseronto and took on a lot more passengers. There were close to 500 aboard when she reached Kingston. Breakfast was served to the Fifteenth on board the boat. The Regiment debarked and marched to the Agricultural Grounds, taking up its place in line.

On the right were A and B Batteries, next three companies of U.S. troops, from Watertown, Syracuse and Oswego. Next came the Fourteenth P.W.O. Rifles, then the Fifteenth, next a company of Highland Cadets and last a company of the M.S. Corps.

It was a fine parade, and a veritable "sight for sore eyes."

Col Buchan was in command.

At 11 o'clock the Batteries fired a Royal Salute of 21 guns, the Fourteenth and Fifteenth fired a "feu de joie," and the massed bands played "God Save the King."

Then came the "march past."

All the troops did well, and the boys of the old Fifteenth were "right in it" with the best of them. Clean and sturdy they looked, and as they swung by the saluting point the thousands of spectators cheered the Belleville boys heartily and not a bit more than was deserved. The local Regiment lived up to its motto, "Nulli Secundus," yesterday. The opinion was freely expressed that in physique and dress the Fifteenth outclassed the others.

The troops again marched past in quarter column and were formed in "column of route" for the street parade. The route was down Princess street, thence to the wharf. Thousands of people lined the streets, and they showered many encomiums upon the Fifteenth. "Well done, Fifteenth," "Belleville's all right," were remarks frequently heard as Col. Halliwell's merry men marched along.

At the boat meal tickets were served out to the men, and they were then dismissed for the rest of the day.

At the grounds in the afternoon there were games, horse racing, fancy drills, and a splendid exhibition of horsemanship by members of A and B Batteries.

The Belleville lads were well treated, and have nothing but words of praise for Kingston to-day.

A special committee had been appointed to entertain the officers of the Fifteenth, and to say they did their duty royally is putting it mildly.

The North King left on her return trip at 7.10 p.m., arriving in Belleville at 3 a.m. The rather tiresome journey home was all that in any way marred the day's outing, and that, of course, could not be avoided.

As before remarked, it was a great day for the boys, and it will be some time before they forget it and the hospitable treatment accorded them in "Dear Old Kingston."

THE MADOC CELEBRATION.

When the special train for Madoc pulled out at 10 a.m. it was fairly well loaded. By the time it reached its destination it was crowded, many passengers having been picked up on the way. The visitors were met at the station by the I.O.O.F. band of Madoc and the members of Camp McKay, and by them escorted to the grounds.

In the morning a lacrosse match was played between the Madoc juniors and Havelock. Score, 7-1 in favor of Madoc.

The afternoon programme was a fine one, and highly successful, the events being in charge of Grand Chief Fraser, of Toronto.

There was Highland Fling dancing by the Misses Duncan, of Toronto, piped for by Piper Anderson, of the 48th Highlanders, Toronto; and Mr. John McIntosh, of this city, piped for by his brother, Mr. William McIntosh, which caught the crowd in great style. Also bagpipe selections by Pipers Anderson and McIntosh.

A number of foot races were well contested.

The Misses Duncan, Mr. John McIntosh and Piper Anderson danced a splendid Scotch reel.

A lacrosse match between Madoc and Tweed was an exciting event, and was won by Madoc by 4 to 3.

Barrels of excitement reigned while the tug-of-war was in progress. It was between teams from Camp Rob Roy, of this city, and Camp McKay, of Madoc. The Madocers were lusty lads, but they could not stand against the brawny Scots, of this city, who pulled them over amid wild cheering. The teams were:

Camp Rob Roy—D. Scott, H. Graham, B. McMullen, J. Boyd, J. McIntosh.

Camp McKay—A. McGregor, J. R. Brown, A. Nicholson, W. Fargey, A. Pitts.

The minstrel performance at night wound up the day's proceedings, and the Belleville Minstrels were greeted by a packed house and gave first-class satisfaction. The soloists were Messrs. H. Wrightmyer, J. Gordanier, Freddie Kyle, H. Brown, E. T. Austin, Byron Hudson, Sanford Burrows and Ab. Wheeler. Mr. John McIntosh sang the "Sangs of Auld Scotia" in the olio, and made a tremendous hit, as did also the Misses Duncan in their sword dance.

It was 12.30 when the excursionists arrived back in the city, tired but happy, after a pleasant day.

THE PICTON RACES.

Many Belleville people went by boat to Picton yesterday, to see the races held there, which were largely attended, fully four thousand people, it was estimated, being present. The named race was won by Cassio Medium, the 2.50 class by Nettie Wright, and the 2.20 class by Maude Wilkes.

ON THE HOSPITAL LOT.

The Hospital lot was pretty well occupied by ball-tossers all day yesterday. In the morning there was a match between two picked teams, and in the afternoon two nines representing Trenton High School and Belleville High School battled for supremacy. The visitors outclassed the local lads in size and knowledge of the game, and won by the jug-handled score of 25 to 7. Johnson pitched for the winners and Stork for the losers.

In the Justice Shop.

Vagrancy.

James Crysdale was arrested for this offence and brought up on Monday afternoon. The Magistrate allowed him to go as he had obtained a position in the city and was going to work.

An Up to-date Amazon.

Last evening a lively fistic encounter between a woman and man took place on Pinnacle street. It is said the woman had by far the best of the argument. The police were called, but all was quiet when the officer arrived, and no arrest was made.

Former Resident Dead.

Mr. John Gorman, a former well-known resident of this city, died suddenly yesterday at Cleveland, O., where he had for the past year resided with his daughter, Mrs. D. J. Kennedy. For upwards of half a century Mr. Gorman was a faithful employee of the Grand Trunk Railway and was compelled to resign owing to increasing years. He was a fine old man and his death will be regretted by many here. His son, Mr. S. Gorman, who resides on Albert street, has left for Cleveland to attend the funeral.

MANY VISITORS SAW THE POINT ANN CEMENT WORKS

ANNIE LAKE TOOK LARGE PARTY THERE YESTERDAY AFTERNOON—DELIGHTED AND SURPRISED BY WHAT THEY SAW.

A large party from the city and outside points visited the Cement Works at Point Ann yesterday afternoon. They left the city on the steamer "Annie Lake" and arrived at the works shortly after 2 p.m., where they were met by Chief Engineer English, who courteously took the party over the various buildings in course of construction, whose large proportions were surprising. Starting at the stone-house, he explained where the raw material is to be stored and mixed: then into the mill-room, where they are ground and passed to the kiln-room, there burned in the rotaries into clinkers, thence into the clinker-room; from there they are returned to the mill-room and finally ground into cement. This cement passes into the store-room, where it is bagged ready for shipment. The latest modern appliances are such that from the time the material reaches the stone-house, until it is bagged in the store-room, it is not touched by any one, everything proceeding automatically.

A snap shot of the visitors was taken before one of the immense rotaries, after which they boarded an "observation car" and were taken over the company's railway to the Grand Trunk main line, giving an opportunity to inspect the immense rock deposits and clay fields, owned by the company. On their return they passed through the warerooms, which were filled with building materials, thence into the well-equipped machine shop.

All the buildings when completed are to be fireproof. The party embarked shortly after 4 p.m., on their return trip for the city, everyone expressing their surprise and delight at the extent of the enterprise and the rapid progress being made. The following were among the visitors:

From Belleville—Sir Mackenzie Bowell, J. W. McNab and Mrs. McNab, Mrs. Meudell, Miss Fones, Mrs. D. McDonald, Miss Reddick, Miss Hunt, Miss Knox, Wesley Bullen, W. P. Flemming, Fred Burrows, Mrs. C. WHAT IS CATARRH?

It is an inflammation of the mucous lining of the throat, bronchial tubes and nasal passages, excited by germs that can only be destroyed by fragrant, healing Catarrhozone, which is breathed direct to the seat of the disease, and has never yet failed to cure. Pleasant to use, absolutely certain to cure. Catarrhozone always gives satisfaction. "I suffered from nasal catarrh so badly that I couldn't breathe through my nostrils," writes G. K. Wilmot, of Meriden. "I used Catarrhozone for a few minutes and was relieved. It cured in a short time." No other remedy just like Catarrhozone—it's the best. Two months' treatment $1.00; trial size 25c.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"ARE YOU A MASON?"

"Are You a Mason?" is one of the very few farces worthy of the name to-day. It has been used as an amusement medium for four years, and there seems to be no lack of interest in the comedy. It will be seen here to-night, and should draw a big house. Mrs. Amos Bloodgood in "Are You a Mason?" believes that Mr. Amos Bloodgood's morals would be improved if he joined the Masons. To please his wife, he promises to comply with the desire though never does. In order to keep up the allusion he is obliged to resort to many expediencies, and succeeds for a time, but is finally discovered and eventually appeases her wrath by making actual application for membership.

"REUBEN IN NEW YORK."

If you have sorrowful thoughts that you wish to stifle, the greatest panacea that can be recommended is a hearty laugh. It is needless to state that you should secure your seats at once to witness the presentation of Manager Curran's excellent company of players in the three act farcical comedy, "Reuben in New York." Bright music, exquisite dancing, catchy songs, witty sayings and merry complications made and indulged in by pretty girls and funny men will aid you in chaining dull care, and in its place substitute a more restful state of mind. At the opera house on Monday next, May 30.

Ref. Episcopal Synod Held Session Here.

BEGAN YESTERDAY AND CLOSED THIS MORNING—THOSE PRESENT—THE COMMITTEES APPOINTED—THE BISHOP'S ADDRESS.

The 13th annual session of the Synod of the Reformed Episcopal Church in Canada commenced in Emmanuel R. E. Church, this city, yesterday morning, the Right Rev. H. S. Hoffman, D.D., Missionary Bishop of the R. E. Church, presiding. The following delegates were present: Clerical—Rev. Walter Witten, Ph. D., Barrie; Rev. A. M. Hubly, Sussex, N. B.; Rev. A. R. Hubly, Montreal; Rev. J. E. Brown, Moncton, N.B.; Rev. F. T. B. Reynolds, Toronto; Rev. Wm. J. Gilliland, Belleville. Lay—Messrs. Robt. Buchanan, Barrie; J. W. London and Geo. Leach, Belleville; Thos. Davis and Dr. G. E. Hill, Toronto; J. C. Trotter, Ottawa; Pendrell and Steen, Toronto.

The various reports presented were of a highly favorable character, and The Intelligencer was informed that, all things considered, the present session of the Synod was the most successful ever held.

In his report Bishop Hoffman said that, during his episcopal visitations he had been gratified to find all branches of the church in Canada in a satisfactory condition, and the outlook was most hopeful. He was greatly impressed with the growth and possibilities of this country, which was receiving thousands of new people every year, and the Reformed Episcopal Church must see to it that she be not behindhand in helping to minister to the spiritual needs of those people.

The nominating committee reported the following officers:

Vice-President of Synod—Rev. A. M. Hubly.

Secretary—Rev. W. J. Gilliland.

Treasurer—J. C. Trotter.

Trustees—Messrs. W. Sloan and T. Williams.

Auditors—Rev. A. R. Hubly and Mr. J. C. Trotter.

The following committees were struck:

Constitution and Canons—Rev. F. T. B. Reynolds, Rev. J. B. Donaldson, Messrs. J. H. Spencer, Thos. E. Davis, His Honor Judge Ardagh.

State of the Church—Rev. W. J. Gilliland, Rev. A. R. Hubly, Messrs. J. W. London and Alex. Hall.

Publication—Rev. Messrs. Reynolds and Gilliland, Mr. Alex. Hall and Dr. Geo. Hill.

Memorials and Resolutions — Rev. Messrs. Hubly and Gilliland, Mr. W. Schwitzer.

Standing Committee—Rev. Mr. Brown, Rev. Dr. Witten, Rev. Mr. Gilliland, and Messrs. Steen, Bell, Trotter, Mackay and Hall.

The Synod was in session till 6 p.m., when an adjournment was made and the delegates were handsomely entertained at the Rectory by the ladies of Emmanuel Church congregation. The evening session convened at 7.30 and closed at 11 o'clock.

A motion was introduced by Rev. Dr. Witten, of Barrie, that the name of the church in Canada be changed from "Reformed Episcopal" to that of "Protestant Church of England." This was warmly opposed by many of the delegates, and just as warmly upheld by others.

Bishop Hoffman pointed out that Reformed Episcopal Churches in England were evidently satisfied with the name, as they printed it on their signboards.

The motion was finally defeated.

The Synod convened this morning at 8.30 and adjourned at 11, in order to allow the delegates to catch the noon trains for their homes.

All the delegates present were delighted with Belleville and the hospitable and courteous treatment they received.

THE QUEEN AND THE ALEXANDRA TRUST.

"The Times," London, says:— The Queen takes a deep interest in the Alexandra Trust Dining Rooms which are named after her, and yesterday she paid a surprise visit to the institution, as she did in 1900.

Sir Thomas Lipton was the only one who knew of the Queen's intended visit, as she wished to see the dining rooms and diners under normal conditions. Her Majesty, accompanied by Princess Victoria, and some attendants, drove in a plain carriage without escort, and were received at the main entrance by Sir Thomas Lipton. Of course the identity of the Royal visitors soon became known and they were cheered with true East End heartiness.

They repaired to the Manager's little room and dined, faring exactly as ordinary diners, the Queen sitting at the head of the table. The Royal party began with ox tail soup, took roast lamb with Mint Sauce as a second course, had two vegetables and finished with plum pudding. The Queen took Apollinaris with her dinner, and the whole party afterwards drank coffee out of "Alexandra" cups.

The Queen and the Princess, always well received, have rarely received in any part of London so vigorous and enthusiastic a send-off as that which marked the close of their kindly visit.

CANADA'S VICTORIA DAY

Marked By a Couple of International Military Events.

Prince of Wales Fusiliers of Montreal Visited Burlington, Vt., 500 Strong—Battalion of National Guards of New York Present at Kingston—57th Presented With Colors at Peterboro—Lord Aylmer Unveiled Leonard Memorial at Woodstock.

Burlington, Vt., May 25.—The Prince of Wales Royal Fusiliers of Montreal celebrated the royal birthday yesterday by a trip to this city. The visitors, to the number of 500, arrived early, and were the guests of Company M, Vermont National Guard. The chief event of the day was a parade through the principal streets of the city, in which besides the visitors and Company M., the Fifteenth U. S. Cavalry, and two batteries of Field Artillery from Fort Ethan Allen and a battalion of students from the University of Vermont participated. The parade was reviewed at City Hall Park by Mayor Burke and Col. Rogers, commandant at Forth Ethan Allen.

Presentation of Colors.

Peterboro, May 25.—The event which marked Victorian Day in Peterboro was the presentation of new colors to the 57th Regiment. Lord Dundonald, commanding officer and his aide-de-camp, Capt. Newton, were present for the occasion, which was in every way most auspicious. The ceremony took place before several thousand people at Nicholls oval. There was a large turnout of the regiment, which was inspected by Lord Dundonald, after which the trooping of the colors took places.

The new colors were presented by Mrs. J. F. Dennistoun, and Mrs. J. R. Stratton, president and vice-president of the ladies' committee. Lieut.-Col. J. W. Miller responded on behalf of the regiment, and Lord Dundonald also made a short address. The ceremony was a very impressive one. Mrs. Dennistoun entertained the officers and guests at luncheon, while tea was served at the golf-grounds.

In the evening the 57th Band gave a concert under the patronage of Lord Dundonald.

A program of sports was run off during the afternoon.

A Military Demonstration.

Woodstock, May 25.—In every particular the military demonstration here yestrday was a success. At least 5,000 visitors were present in the city, and the proceedings were replete with interest. The Thirteenth Regiment of Hamilton arrived at 10 o'clock a.m., 650 strong, and participated in all the events of the day. About 8,000 people witnessed the unveiling of the Leonard memorial at the court house in the forenoon. The unveiling was performed by Lord Aylmer, adjutant-general of the Canadian militia, who delivered a stirring patriotic address. Speeches appropriate to the occasion were also given by Hon. James Sutherland, Minister of Public Works; Col. Munro, M.P.P., and Mayor White. A concert by the 13th Band in the evening concluded the day.

At Niagara Falls.

Niagara Falls, May 25.—Victoria Day was duly observed here yesterday, and the 7th Fusiliers of London, under command of Col. Little, being the card of attraction. Before a large crowd of spectators at Athletic Park they trooped the colors, fired a feude joie and marched passed, and were greeted with rounds of applause. The athletic events followed, and were well contested.

Pictures of the Queen.

Montreal, Que., May 25.—Victoria Day was duly celebrated here yesterday. No serious accidents have been reported. The French papers published large pictures of the late Queen.

Games at St. Thomas.

St. Thomas, May 25.—Victoria Day was celebrated here by sporting events, picnics and otherwise. A game of lacrosse in the morning, between the Oneida Indians and the juniors of the St. Thomas Club resulted in a tie, 2—2. In the afternoon the second twelve of the Brantford Lacrosse Club played the St. Thomas seniors. It was a pretty game and resulted: St. Thomas 7, Brantford 8. The St. Thomas Baseball Club beat the McClary Club of London in two games.

Athletic Sports at Bowmanville.

Bowmanville, May 25.—Victoria Day was celebrated here by a full program of athletic sports, under the joint auspices of the Bowmanville Baseball Club, Bowmanville Football Club and Durham Rubber Company's Band. A large crowd from town and country were present, and a large number came down from Toronto with the Sherbourne street Methodist Football Club. The town was decorated for the occasion, and citizens generally kept holiday.

Militia at Kingston.

Kingston, May 25.—Victoria Day was a sunshiny, cool day, just the kind of weather for outdoor pleasure after the tedious winter, and great throngs of people from outside poured into the city and enjoyed the events presented for their entertainment. The chief feature was the military review in the Fair grounds before 10,000 people. Colonel Buchan, C.M.G., D.O.C., was the reviewing officer. There were royal salutes by cannon and rifle and voice, and marching and re-marching before the reviewing base. The forces in line were: The Royal Canadian Field Artillery, the 14th Princess of Wales Own Rifles, the 15th Argyle Light Infantry, No. 3 Company Canadian Army Service Corps, No. 2, Company, Field Hospital; the St. Andrew's Highland Cadets, a battalion of the National Guard, State of New York. There was a parade through the city before dismissal. The afternoon was spent in military sports, horse races, baseball matches and other events.

PAINFUL RHEUMATISM.

THIS TROUBLE IS CAUSED BY AN ACID IN THE BLOOD AND CAN ONLY BE CURED THROUGH THE BLOOD.

Rheumatism is caused by an acid in the blood. That is a medical truth every sufferer from this trouble should bear in mind. Liniments and outward applications cannot cure what is rooted in the blood—the disease must be cured through the blood. That is the reason rheumatism yields almost like magic to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. This new blood conquers the painful poison, sweeps out the aching acid, soothes the nerves, loosens the muscles and banishes rheumatism. Mr. Robert Morrison, one of the best known and most esteemed residents of Guelph, Ont., gives striking testimony to the truth of the statements made above. He says: "My trouble came gradually and was pronounced muscular rheumatism, and was located chiefly in my neck and shoulders. I can hardly tell you how much I suffered. I was confined to my bed for fifteen months. A great many friends came to see me during that time and I think I am safe in saying that most of them had very few hopes that I would get better. I tried a great many remedies without any lasting benefit. Then I tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I am thankful to say that through the use of these pills and the indefatigable nursing of my wife I am again on my feet. My neck is still somewhat stiff, but the pain is gone. I am now in my 79th year and I feel that I owe much to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

These pills have cured thousands of the very worst cases of neuralgia, rheumatism, lumbago and backaches, and they can do the same for you. Sold by all medicine dealers or sent by mail at 50c a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

EMPIRE DAY IN LONDON.

Children's Aid Society and the Canadian Club Celebrate the Day—Canada Comes in For Praise.

London, May 25.—(C. A. P.)—Earl Meath presided at the inaugural celebration of Empire Day by the Children's Aid Society in St. James' Hall. Telegrams of greeting were received from Dr. Jameson, Premier of Cape Colony; the Straits Settlement's, the Premier of Australia, and the Governor of Mauritius. Lord Meath said the promoters of Empire Day had absolutely nothing in common with jingoism. There is no desire to plant the standard definitely in the face of any people.

Sir Gilbert Parker said it was the duty of every man and woman in the Empire to celebrate once a year the deeds of the heroes of the Empire then when the day of trial came, loyalty would pervade the Empire as electricity the air. The entente cordiale between the Motherland and the colonies must grow, or Britain would fail in her mission.

The Canadian Society.

The Canadian Society of London celebrated the day by a brilliant banquet at the Trocadero Restaurant. The toast of the Imperial forces was proposed by Colonel Baynes of Montreal, and was responded to by General Laurie, both of whom amid repeated applause dwelt on the co-operation of Canada with the Motherland in the Fenian raid, the Red River and Nile expeditions, and the Boer war.

The chairman, in proposing the Dominion, said that more loyalty existed in Canada than was found generally within the sound of Bow Bells.

Hamar Greenwood, who was cheered throughout, replied for his country, comprising 36 different nationalities, and whose chief characteristic was that all were given equality and opportunity for every one. When the nationalities were merged they would produce a virile race for the future glory of the British Empire.

Influence of Democracy.

W. T. R. Preston, who made a clever speech, in proposing the sister colonies, declared that Canada had solved problems unsolved by Britain because democracy ruled.

Sir Horace Tozer, replying, said he hoped that at the forthcoming conference on the Pacific Cable Australia would reciprocate the generosity of Canada by whose unselfishness alone they were now connected.

C. Devlin, M.P., proposed wittily the Parliament of Canada.

Sir Charles Tupper, in responding amid a scene of great enthusiasm, dwelt on the magnificent work accomplished in the uniting of the Canadian people through the growth of railways and the increase of trade. The grand wheat fields of Manitoba alone were able to supply every pound of bread-stuffs required by Britain. He was indignant at the strictures of the English press that Canada was not contributing her share to the defence of the Empire. Canada was liberally doing her share by drawing in population and developing the country that was to sustain them. Now that Canada had opened her wheat lands and was able to give happy homes to as large a population as the United States, if six millions sent 8,000 troops to Africa, what would a large population not be able to do.

During the evening A. Mossman, one of the founders of the London Society, and just about returning to Canada, was presented with a gold watch. "Rule Britannia" and the "Maple Leaf Forever" were sung during the evening. Among the guests present were Sir John Robinson, Hon. Mr. Copeland, the Bishop of Calgary, the Agent-Generals of Tasmania, Nova Scotia and Town Bay and Gibraltar. The room was profusely decorated. One thousand voices sang the National Anthem. A fete and illuminations followed.

CARDINAL GIBBONS ASSISTS.

Beginning of a University at Ottawa—Mgr. Sharetti Lays Corner-Stone.

Ottawa, May 25.—Preceded by solemn high mass and accompanied by imposing ritual, the ceremony of laying the corner stone of the University of Ottawa took place yesterday, amid the half-razed ruins of the buildings destroyed by fire six months ago. Cardinal Gibbons assisted at the throne, having on his right Father Fallon of Buffalo, and his own private secretary on his left.

Mgr. Sbaretti officiated at the laying of the corner-stone, assisted by Rev. J. Lejeau and Rev. E. Richard. The copper casket which was deposited in the stone contained printed and manuscript copies of the college charter, both ecclesiastical and civil.

Specimens of the silver coins of the Dominion of Canada of the stamp of 1903, and a gold dollar, a small statue of the Blessed Virgin, a copy of the Catholic Directory of the Dominion, copies of the local papers of the City of Ottawa, copy of The College Review of the present month, a Latin script, setting forth that this corner-stone was laid on May 24, 1904, in the reign of Pope Pius X., in the presence of Cardinal Gibbons, of the chancellor of the university, of his excellency the Governor-General, of the Prime Minister of the country, of the Minister of Education of the province and of the rector of the university. On the platform, which was decorated with Union Jacks and Stars and Stripes, were representatives of the Evangelical churches.

His Eminence Cardinal Gibbons addressed the assembly immediately after the laying of the corner-stone.

After the ceremony of the corner-stone laying was completed a luncheon took place in the Rideau Rink. Seated at the table of honor on the raised platform were Archbishop Duhamel, Chancellor of the University, who presided, with Lord Minto and the apostolic delegate on the immediate right, and Cardinal Gibbons and Sir Wilfrid Laurier on the left, while others present were: Archbishop Bruchesi, Archbishop Gauthier, Archbishop O'Connor, Bishops Emard, Macdonnell, Lorraine and McEvoy, and other dignitaries and priests of the Roman Catholic Church; R. L. Borden, M. P.; Sir Sandford Fleming, Hon. P. Brodeur, Speaker Belcourt, Hon. J. G. Foster, American Consul-General; Hon. R. Harcourt, Speaker Powell, Principal Loudon of Toronto University; Archdeacon Bogert of the Church of England; Rev. Dr. Herridge, St. Andrew's Presbyterian; Rev. Dr. Armstrong, St. Paul's Presbyterian; Revs. Grenfall and Lott, Methodist, the Mayor and Aldermen of Ottawa. Archbishop Duhamel pronounced an address of welcome.

The toast of the King, proposed by the Governor-General, was loyally honored.

Cardinal Gibbons proposed the health of His Holiness the Pope, in responding to which Mgr. Sbarresti, the papal delegate, read a telegram from Pope Pius X., dated Rome, May 23.

Hon. R. Harcourt, Minister of Education of Ontario, proposed the toast of Canada, to which Sir Wilfrid Laurier replied. The toast of the United States, proposed by Rev. Dr. Herridge, was responded to by Mr. Foster, U.S. Consul-General. Judge Curran replied to the toast of the alumni, proposed by Mr. Macdonnell, one of the students.

Sir Sandford Fleming, on behalf of Queen's, and Mgr. Mathieu for Laval, conveyed the cordial greetings of those institutions to the University.

Speaker Belcourt proposed the civic toast to which the Mayor responded.

Sultan's Son-in-Law Exiled.

Constantinople, May 25.—Kemal Pasha, the Sultan's son-in-law, and other high officials have been arrested and sent into exile in consequence of the discovery of a secret correspondence between Kemal Pasha and Princess Khadidje, daughter of the imprisoned ex-Sultan Murad. Kemal Pasha, who is a son of the late Osman Ghazi Pasha, is a general in the Turkish army, and aide-de-camp to the Sultan.

Wreckage of Nome Steamer Found on Vancouver Island.

Cargo of the Vessel Shifted and Captain of the Corwin Put Into Ketchikan, Where Some of the Passengers Became Frightened and Refused to Proceed Further—Persons Booked Complained of Overcrowding Before Vessel Sailed.

Tacoma, Wash., May 25.—It is reported from Victoria that wreckage of the steamer Corwin, which sailed from Seattle for Nome with eighty-nine passengers on Tuesday, has been found on the west coast of Vancouver Island.

The steamer was scheduled to sail on Monday a week ago, but some of the persons booked for passage complained to United States inspectors of the way the steamer was overloaded and the inspector ordered all freight stored in the holds.

The local agents of the Corwin received a letter from the captain, dated at Ketchikan last Friday. The cargo of the vessel had shifted at that time and she put into Ketchikan to overhaul and straighten out. A number of the passengers had become frightened and refused to proceed further in the vessel. Several returned to Seattle, arriving yesterday on the Dolphin.

The captain in his letter expressed no fear for the safety of the Corwin and declared his purpose to proceed on the voyage to Nome.

Tacoma shipping men who saw the steamer before she sailed express the fear that she is lost. The Corwin had quite a list and seemed to be heavy and unseaworthy.

Since the discovery of gold in Alaska the transportation problem has taxed the owners of various lines running north from Seattle and Tacoma.

Owing to the limited season many of the steamers have sailed in an overcrowded condition.

The Corwin is a steel steamer of 807 tons. She is 137.5 feet long, 24 feet broad, 11.2 feet deep and was built at Portland, Ore.

HIRED MAN KILLED.

Found Dead By His Employer—Gun By His Side.

Bowmanville, May 25.—A sad gunning accident occurred Friday evening, near Enniskillen, in Darlington Township, by which a promising young man named Frederick Harrison lost his life. He was hired with J. J. Ormiston, and Friday afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Ormiston went to Bowmanville and left Fred at home to look after the farm work. Not finding him at the house on returning, they enquired at their nearest neighbor's, but they had not seen him for the day. The stable and barn were visited, and Mr. Ormiston discovered his lifeless body prostrate on the barn floor with a shot gun he had recently purchased near by with one barrel discharged. No evidence of a struggle was to be seen, so that it is likely that death was instantaneous.

He was not a expert with a gun, and had been cautioned by his mother not to get one. The charge had entered his breast near the heart. He was of a cheerful disposition, and no suspicion of suicide is entertained. His mother is a widow and is prostrated by grief.

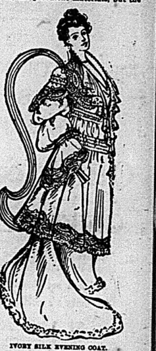
ELEGANT MODES.

Delicate Old World Colorings and Quaint Patterns in Fabrics.

Time leads the dance of the season with spring, and spring, with the promise of hope and plenty in her hands, is of all others the time when the spirit moves us to seek fashions new—not, I am inclined to think, that the fickle goddess has any great surprises in store for us. To those who have used their powers of observation to advantage it is easy to infer what will be the salient points. The skirt of 1904 will be the one that is amply, gracefully full, but the fullness falls direct from the waist line. It is not the skirt to be trifled with. Mediocrity and amateurishness will be its ruin. There is a compromise, and a pretty one, in the skirt which is full, but the fullness drawn away to leave the front plain, and gathered or smocked into little groups on the hips, thus throwing the fullness to the back and sides. The length is what is termed an all round one, resting on the ground and resolving itself into rounded folds rather than angular points. Circular trimmings, bands, lingerie tucks, wide braids and padded bouillonnes are apparent on most skirts.

The sloping shoulder line is still there, more so than ever. If it slopes much more it will reach the vanishing point. But it is gained and emphasized by stitched down yoke effects, with caps coming down on the top of the shoulder. Nothing is allowed to interfere with the outline of neck and shoulder. The close fitting corsage, displaying the figure to advantage after a long course of pouched fronts and obscure waist line, is coming up rapidly above the modistic horizon, and it is a safe tip for those who love to be in advance of the fashions to indulge in close fitting plain jackets and coats for the costume tailleur, owing their chic to perfection of cut, for this is the pivot on which French fashions will turn.

Very fine soft cloths, voiles and woolens, which drape and fall well and adapt themselves to the full skirted styles, are prevalent materials, but the new soft taffeta has already gained a footing in Parisiennes' hearts. Tiny checks in lavender and white, pink and white, and so on, such as were worn forty or fifty years ago, will be quite the rage, and others with old world delicate colorings for background show modest little rosebuds or single flowers as patterns.



IVORY SILK EVENING COAT.

All these old fashioned colors, recalling some quaint garden in which lavender and cherry perfumed the air, together with the cabbage rose, whose soft petals of the true vieux rose shade were sweeter far than those of its modern successors, will be worn, thrown up in relief here and there by petunia, larkspur blue and green, and as a restful background the whole gamut of mole shades from dark brown to a deep cream. For the rest white will be extraordinarily in favor, like the "gardener's daughter," "gowned in pure white that fitted to the shape."

From the innumerable beautiful models in every line of dress it is difficult to select a single one for pictorial representation. However, here it is in the shape of a really beautiful evening coat of silk in a delicate ivory tint. An elaboration of gauging stamps this model at once as of the hour, as does the silk cluny lace worked in gold silk, a softer lace being requisitioned for the frills, these last rendered still more foamy by under frills of chiffon.

E. D.

One's Clothes and One's Work.

Wherever a marked personal care is exhibited for the cleanliness of the person and for neatness in dress there is also almost always found extra carefulness as regards the finish of work done. Work people whose personal habits are slovenly produce slovenly work. Those who are careful of their own appearance are equally careful of the look of the work they turn out. And probably what is true of the workroom is equally true of the region behind the counter. Is it not the fact that the smart saleswoman is usually rather particular about her dress, is averse to wearing dingy collars, frayed cuffs and faded ties? The truth of the matter seems to be that extra care as regards personal habits and general appearance is as a rule indicative of a certain alertness of mind, which shows itself antagonistic to slovenliness of all kinds.

SENSATIONAL STATE OF AFFAIRS IN RUSSIA.

Six Hundred Persons Have Been Hanged in Warsaw Alone.

Great Wave of Dissatisfaction Exists As the Outcome of the Present War—Wholesale Executions Without Any Civil Trial—News from the Far East Meagre—Japs Still Advancing—Bloody Battle Rumors Still Unconfirmed.

London, May 26.—The Standard publishes a despatch from a Russian correspondent, in whom the paper says it places great confidence, containing most sensational statements regarding the alarming condition of Russia, as the outcome of the war. The correspondent asserts that disturbances in various cities have been followed by wholesale executions without any civil trial. It is stated that 600 persons have been hanged in Warsaw alone, and that many others have been hanged in Cronstadt and Moscow. At the latter place the troops buried eighty coffins, containing the bodies of those who have been hanged. The bodies were buried secretly in the dead of night, presumably in the woods.

The Standard, in an editorial, says it publishes this correspondent's statement under all reserve, but it thinks there are many indications, such, for instance, as the sinking of the battleship Orel, that the normal dissatisfaction of the population of Russia has been greatly stimulated by the war.

Reports of Bloody Battle.

Mukden, May 26.—According to the latest information obtainable, the Japanese have resumed their forward movement. Several columns are advancing, though the bulk of the invading army is still near Fengwangcheng. There are persistent reports of a bloody battle having taken place between the Japanese army advancing along the railroad from Pulantien, and the Russians, near Kinshou (Liaotung Peninsula), resulting in the defeat of the Japanese with great loss.

Ships That Passed.

Che Foo, May 26.—Four Japanese cruisers and a fleet of torpedo boats and torpedo boat destroyers passed midway between Port Arthur and the Miaotao Islands at 4 o'clock yesterday morning, but no sounds of firing have yet been heard. The Russians again have removed their guns and troops from the forts at Newchwang.

Japs Ran Into Artillery.

Liaoyang, May 26.—A report has been received from Newchwang, saying that on May 23 five battalions of Japanese troops reconnoitred to the south, almost as far as Kinchou, and ran into Major-Gen. Fock's artillery.

The Yochina's Drowned.

Tokio, May 26.—Of the complement of the protected cruiser Yochina, sunk recently in collision with the cruiser Kasuga, sixty-three non-commissioned officers and 220 blue jackets were drowned and forty-eight non-commissioned officers and men were rescued.

Cut Land Communications.

Paris, May 26.—A despatch to The Temps from St. Petersburg says Gen. Kuropatkin has cut the land communications between the armies of Generals Kuroki and Oku.

Dalny Not Destroyed.

Che Foo, May 26.—The attempt made about a fortnight ago to destroy the docks and piers at Dalny was not successful, and Lieut.-Gen. Stoessel, cammander of the military forces at Port Arthur, has ordered that the docks and piers be not destroyed.

What Will He Do With Him?

Liaoyang, May 26.—The father (a corps commander) of the Japanese officer who yesterday committed suicide by disembowelling himself, has given orders to the men of his corps to capture a Russian officer alive.

Russians Burn Shrines.

Seoul, May 26.—A telegram has been received here from Gensan saying that the Russians, after the engagement with Corean troops at Hamheung on May 19 burned the shrines and the royal mausoleum, which were erected there by the founder of the present Corean dynasty in the year 1364, and which were regarded by the Coreans as sacred. This apparent wanton desecration of tombs in a land imbued with the spirit of ancestor worship has caused excited denunciation of the Russians on the part of Seoul officials.

Railways Cut Off 75,000 Men.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 26.—The reduction of the working forces of the railroads in this country is more extensive and radical than was thought, a month ago, would be necessary. Estimates are that not less than 75,000 employes have been dropped from the railroad pay rolls. A large proportion of these employes are losing their jobs under orders from company headquarters to dismiss from the freight departments every person not absolutely needed. Train hands, station men and clerks have been receiving notices to quit since April 15, and by June 10 it is expected that the weeding out process will have been completed. With the exception of the panic period, beginning in 1893, this is the most general reduction of railroad working forces known at any one time.

"Soo" Reorganization.

Toronto, May 26.—Mr. N. W. Rowell, K.C., and General Manager White, of the National Trust Company, returned yesterday morning from New York, after investigating the reorganization plans of the "Soo" Company. A long conference on the subject was held at noon in the Premier's affice, the Attorney-General, Senator Kerr and Mr. Rowell being present.

ITALIANS USED KNIVES.

Two Men Slashed and One Badly Bitten in Peterboro.

Peterboro, May 26.—A stabbing affray took place here Tuesday evening about 10 o'clock. A party of five or six Italians were walking up George street, in the business centre of the town when a boy threw a fire-cracker towards them. The men attacked the boy and were punishing him severely when some citizens interfered. The Italians turned on them with knives. One man received a deep gash on the left arm, while a third had a finger badly bitten. The Italians made their escape along a side street, and later in the evening they were arrested. At the police court yesterday morning they stated, through an interpreter, that they were at home after 6 o'clock, and pleaded not guilty to the charge made against them. The injured men, while painfully wounded, will recover. The police are investigating the affair with the hope of placing the whole party in custody.

Reception to Cardinal Gibbons.

Ottawa, May 26.—Cardinal Gibbons was tendered a public reception at the Russell Theatre last night, which was thronged. His eminence spoke briefly, expressing his gratitude at the kindly reception he had received in Ottawa. Rev. Dr. Fallon of Buaffio delivered an eloquent address, in which he referred to the objections of certain sections of the Irish people to the University, as being too French, and repeated the remarks of Sir Wilfrid Laurier the day previous, that it should be a university for all tongues, especially English and French.

Jumped From Launch.

Watertown, N. Y., May 26.—Fred Fitch, aged 36, of Alexandria Bay, was drowned in the St. Lawrence yesterday while crossing in a "put-put." Believing that he was going to be run down by a passing steamer he jumped from his naphtha and was drowned in the steamer's swell. His boat continued running and crossed the steamer's bow in safety.

He Would Do.

London, May 26.—Referring to the rumor that Lord Aylmer will be the next commander-in-chief of the forces in Canada, The Pall Mall Gazette says he is perfectly in sympathy with responsible Government in the Dominion, while Imperial officers look for War Office favors.

Walked Track to Death.

Port Colborne, May 26.—Bert Ross of Marshville was killed Monday night on the G.T.R. tracks between Wainfleet and Lowbanks. It is thought that he got off the train from Toronto at Lowbanks in mistake for Wainfleet and then started to walk back along the track.

LOOK OUT FOR SIGN. 390 FRONT ST.

The world moves rapidly, and so do Radicals, when retention of office is the object to be attained. Who could have supposed that Attorney-General Longley, of Nova Scotia, an erstwhile free trader, would now be preaching protection? Yet such is the fact. He made a speech the other day before the St. John branch of the Industrial League, in which he declared for protection for Canadian industries and asserted that there is no longer a free trade party in Canada. How rapidly office will change the opinion of Grits, that is, if they ever had any.

The present season has been phenomenal in relation to floods. Our own Nor' West has suffered, but not to the extent of the towns of Liverpool, Belleview, Laporte, Wellington and a portion of Fort Collins, in Colorado, which are from three to four feet under water, and, in some cases, the water reaches to the eaves of the houses. Six persons were drowned at Cheyenne.

Look out for prowling agents, who are attempting to sell to fruit growers and others a new mixture for the protection of the trees against insects. The treatment consists of boring a hole in the tree and filling it with a chemical mixture and stopping the hole to keep out the air. The sap, it is represented, will carry the chemical to every part of the tree, rendering it immune against insects and fungi. An analysis was recently made of the mixture by the Ottawa Department of Agriculture, and it was found to contain charcoal, sulphur and soda. It is thus no good for the purpose for which it was sold. Pay no attention to testimonials. As a rule, they are bogus.

What is a journalist? was asked Mr. Joseph Pulitzer, proprietor of the New York World, and he replied:

"Not any business manager or publisher, or even proprietor. A journalist is the lookout on the bridge of the ship of state. He notes the passing sail, the little things of interest that dot the horizon in the fine weather. He reports the drifting castaway whom the ship can save. He peers through fog and storm to give warning of dangers ahead. He is not thinking of his wages, or of the profits of his owners. He is there to watch over the safety and welfare of the people who trust him."

A high ideal. He should have added, "Never attempts to please everybody."

Another strike in Toronto. About 250 bricklayers are out for more wages. The extensive fire in that city has created a great demand for labor, hence the unions make their demands. It will be remembered how boasting was the tone of the Laurier Government when the Drummond County Railway was purchased, that there were to be no more deficits in the running of the Intercolonial Railway. How that prophecy has been fulfilled can be judged from the claim which is now made that there will be a decrease of $643,079 in the earnings of the Intercolonial Railway over working expenses for the nine months ending March 30 last. The earnings were $4,709,561, and the working expenses $5,352,640. What the end of the year will foot up it is impossible to say, but the management has a record for expending public money.

That policy which will be likely to give most votes will be the one adopted.

MR. ROBINSON WAS CANED

PLEASANT EVENT AT O.B.C. ON MONDAY AFTERNOON LAST.

Mr. W. B. Robinson, who has been one of the Principals of Ontario Business College for over 30 years, is retiring from connection with that institution. On Monday afternoon, at the college, the teachers and students took advantage of the occasion to express their appreciation of Mr. Robinson by presenting him with an address, accompanying which was a handsome gold signet ring and a gold-headed ebony cane, suitably inscribed. Mr. Robinson replied feelingly and appropriately to the address. He asserted that he would always retain a friendly interest in the success of the college and its students. Addresses were given by Mr. J. W. Johnson, his fellow-principal; Col. Ponton, Mr. Moore and Mr. McClatchie, all of whom spoke well of Mr. Robinson and his work. The gathering broke up with cheers for the retiring Principal.

A Pleasing Event.

At the residence of Mr. Andrew Lithgow, 6th concession of Sidney, a pleasing event occurred last Friday evening. Some six months ago Mr. Lithgow came from Scotland and purchased a farm, and last week his family arrived from the old land to join him. The neighbors, to the number of about 150, invaded the new home on the evening above mentioned, giving the inmates a hearty welcome in their midst. They made the visit one long to be remembered by the gift of a cow, a number of fowls and a set of dishes. An address of welcome was read and responded to by Mr. and Mrs. Lithgow. The company partook of a bountiful spread which was provided.

A Sidney Boy's Return.

After an absence of five years in West Africa, Dr. A. Yale Massey, youngest son of Mr. Levi Massey, has returned on a visit to his native land. The journey included 8,000 miles and required three months travelling. Dr. Massey has been engaged in medical missionary work among the natives of the Dark Continent. He tells many interesting experiences and has brought a great many curios illustrative of the life of that people. On Monday evening about sixty friends met at the old homestead, near Wallbridge, to express their welcome on his safe return. After a very enjoyable evening, Mr. C. F. Chisholm called upon Mr. L. Ross, who read a most hearty address of welcome. It was much regretted that Mrs. Massey had been detained in Toronto on account of illness.

YOUTH AND AGE.

The Thoughts That Filled the Maiden and the Old Lady.

It was 9 o'clock in the evening, the night of the great dance in the assembly room.

She was almost ready. A few final touches, a little readjustment before the mirror, and then, beautiful and stately, she stepped out into the hall and slowly descended the stairs.

She was very young, but her calm, serious face, her ease and perfect poise and other certain little gestures of surety in herself indicated that she was not new at the business of the evening. Somehow there was a touch of sadness to her face.

As she passed down the stairs she paused in front of the library, with her party wrap over her arm. In the library, her face half shaded from the evening lamp, sat an old woman. Her silver hair was smoothed back from a forehead that time had not spared from wrinkles.

She looked up from the book she was reading with a bright smile.

"Off again, my dear?" she said.

"Yes, grandma. It's another dance. I had to go. But it's so tiresome."

She sat down wearily and gazed for a moment absently into the flickering fire on the hearth. There was a brief silence; then the old woman spoke:

"My dear, you do not seem yourself tonight. Of what are you thinking?"

Her granddaughter looked up.

"Of the past," she said, with a sigh. And then she said as she rose and gathered up her wraps:

"But, granny, you seem unusually cheerful tonight. Of what, pray, are you thinking?"

And the old woman replied, "My dear, I was thinking of the future."—Twentieth Century Home.

Nothing so suddenly obstructs the perspiration as sudden transitions from heat to cold. Heat rarifies the blood, quickens the circulation and increases the perspiration, but when these are suddenly checked the consequences must be bad. The most common cause of disease is obstructed perspiration, or what commonly goes by the name of catching cold. Coughs, colds, sore throat, etc., if attended to in time are easily subdued, but if allowed to run their own course, generally prove the fore-runner of more dangerous diseases. Nine-tenths of the consumptives date their affliction from a NEGLECTED COLD, and the diseases that are caused by wet feet, damp clothes, or exposure are more numerous than are generally supposed. One of the most efficacious medicines for all diseases of the throat and lungs is Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It promotes a free and easy expectoration, which frees the lungs from viscid phlegm by changing the secretions from a diseased to a healthy state.

Only 900 people in 1,000,000 die of old age.

Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial is a speedy cure for dysentery, diarrhoea, cholera, summer complaint, sea sickness and complaints incidental to children teething. It gives immediate relief to those suffering from the effects of indiscretion in eating unripe fruit, cucumbers, etc. It acts with wonderful rapidity and never fails to conquer the disease. No one need fear cholera if they have a bottle of this medicine convenient.

Few men realize what large dividends they can draw on kindness.

How to Cleanse the System.—Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are the result of scientific study of the effects of extracts of certain roots and herbs upon the digestive organs. Their use has demonstrated in many instances that they regulate the action of the liver and kidneys, purify the blood, and carry off all morbid accumulations from the system. They are easy to take, and their action is mild and beneficial.

Cut the trunk, the branches fall of themselves.

Always on Hand.—Mr. Thomas H. Porter, Lower Ireland, P.Q., writes: "My son, 18 months old, had croup so bad that nothing gave him relief until a neighbor brought me some of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, which I gave him, and in six hours he was cured. It is the best medicine I ever used, and I would not be without a bottle of it in my house."

A tailor made woman is one of the noblest works of man.

Messrs. Northrop & Lyman Co. are the proprietors of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, which is now being sold in immense quantities throughout the Dominion. It is welcomed by the suffering invalid everywhere with emotions of delight, because it banishes pain and gives instant relief. This valuable specific for almost "every ill that flesh is heir to," is valued by the sufferer as more precious than gold. It is the elixir of life to many a wasted frame. To the farmer it is indispensable, and it should be in every house.

A self made man has his private opinion as to what is the noblest work of God.

Give Holloway's Corn Cure a trial. It removed ten corns from one pair of feet without any pain. What it has done once it will do again.

Look out for the man with an imagination strong enough to draw a dollar out of your pocket.

A Wonderful Cure. — Mr. David Smith, Coe Hill, Ont., writes: "For the benefit of others I wish to say a few words about Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery. About a year ago I took a very severe cough, had a virulent sore on my lips, was bad with dyspepsia, constipation and general debility. I tried almost every conceivable remedy, outwardly and inwardly, to cure the sore, but all to no purpose. I had often thought of trying Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, so I got a bottle, and when I had used about one half the sore showed evident signs of healing. By the time that bottle was done it had about disappeared and my general health was improving fast. I was always of a very bilious habit and had used quinine and lemon juice with very little effect. But since using three bottles of the Vegetable Discovery the biliousness is entirely gone and my general health is excellent. I am 60 years old. Parties using it should continue it for some time after they think they are cured. It is by far the best health restorer I know."

The truthfulness of what a man says doesn't always depend on the amount of noise he makes in saying it.

It does not seem as though there were as many as thirty-one days in any month, the way rent day rolls around.

Some second thoughts occur several minutes later.

And if the same is faded, scratched, or if the varnish has gone the way of all flesh, "Liquid Veneer" will resurrect the whole scheme. It will take that half sick furniture and put a new face on it that is as brilliant as the sun. It is not a "furniture polish," it is not sticky, never catches the dust; it is easily applied in a few minutes with a cloth, no rubbing is necessary. A BUNCH OF ORCHIDS.

By Mate Palmer.

"Carrying coals to Newcastle" is not the only mistaken generosity of the charitably inclined. Benevolence and philanthropy need a slight governing power of good judgment and common sense to accomplish entirely satisfactory results.

A good story is told of a wealthy and kind-hearted woman whose name was better known in connection with liberal contributions for special purposes than for any individual efforts along charitable lines. Not that she was in any way lacking in kindly sympathy, but the sheltered life of affluence protected her from actual contact with that kind of suffering that comes from destitution.

She thought of poverty as an uncomfortable malady prevalent among masses instead of individuals, and requiring a certain amount of the red tape of committees and regular organizations to accomplish any results. But one day her heart was deeply stirred by a story of suffering that came to her knowledge. She wept when she heard it, and she resolved to do something to give the poor invalid a little pleasure—a glimpse of luxury.

It didn't take long to decide what to do. She had a collection of orchids of which she was very proud, and it required a good deal of self-denial to part with any of her beautiful favorites, but she had determined to give the sick woman a treat, so she selected some of the most wonderful specimens, and took them to the poor sufferer.

She knew if she had been ill and confined to her room nothing could possibly have given her more pleasure or have been a greater diversion than those same orchids, and she was happy in the consciousness of a good deed as she approached the poor little dwelling. She had preferred taking them, so she might enjoy the woman's happiness in such an unaccustomed delight.

There was no hesitation in her manner as she rapped on the black little door. But it seemed a long time before the door was opened by a pinched, wan-looking girl, of perhaps a dozen years.

Surprised at so well-dressed a visitor, the girl simply stared at her until she asked if she might see her mamma and give her some orchids she had brought.

A moment later she was piloted through a bare and dismal room into a still more dismal little bedroom, where an emaciated woman lay propped up by soiled and dingy pillows. The gentle twilight that comes from too close proximity to tall buildings softened the sharp features of the sick woman as she turned weary inquiring eyes toward her elegant visitor. If Mrs. Brown was unfamiliar with such destitution, the sick woman was surely startled by such a guest.

But the young daughter was quite equal to the emergency. She didn't intend her mother should be humiliated by not knowing what those blossoms were so, with the reckless abandon of childhood, she rushed up to the bed and told her mother a nice lady had brought her some "orgies." Then she set a broken chair for Mrs. Brown, and went to get something to put the flowers into.

"Orgies" or "orchids," it was all one to sick Mrs. Rogers; she said: "Thank you," in a listless sort of way and Mrs. Brown asked her how she was feeling.

Before she was through telling how dreadfully weak she was the young girl returned with a cracked blue pitcher, and Mrs. Brown arranged the orchids that even the old blue pitcher did not detract from their loveliness, and held them where the invalid might fully admire them. No enthusiasm rewarded her efforts.

"Pretty, ain't they? Look some like lady slippers, don't they?"

That was all she said about them. She spoke again about being so very weak, and then relapsed into silence.

Mrs. Brown tried to talk a little with Bessie, for that she learned was the young girl's name, and feeling that she wasn't succeeding very well in her endeavors, tried to say a few words of encouragement and started for home.

Her visit had been a great disappointment to her. She hardly knew just what she had expected. She wouldn't like to have admitted, even to herself, that there had been an undercurrent of vanity in her condescension and that she had really taken a great deal of credit to herself for taking her floral treasures to such a forsaken place, and had expected a reward of overwhelming enthusiasm.

Her self-love had been deeply wounded, and as he walked slowly toward her elegant home she tried to even things up by a wholesale mental condemnation of ingratitude. She even determined to write a scathing paper on the subject of "The Absolute Absence of Appreciation Among the Poorer Classes," for a very exclusive and aristocratic club of which she was a member. She liked the alliteration, and the story of the orchids would make a good illustration.

It was nearly dinner time when she reached home, and she found her husband awaiting her and eager to know the details of such an unheard-of visit as he had just learned she was making.

Mrs. Brown was very witty and her annoyance had rather blinded her to the pathos of the occasion, so she told the story in a manner that savored strongly of heartlessness.

"What did you take her to eat?" Mr. Brown asked as she finished her story.

"Why, nothing! I— Why, John, you don't suppose she was that poor?"

"Oh, no! you weren't exactly that poor yourself last spring when you were getting up from the grip. But I noticed dainty soups brewed away from home were wonderfully welcome. Perhaps the poor creature hasn't a good chef, and food would be more nourishing than flowers, and oranges would taste better than orchids."

"Don't be sacastic, John; really I didn't think about—"

"No, I see you didn't; you make me think of dear old Auntie McIntosh's visit to Jane McGuire. You know Auntie McIntosh was very rich and very religious, but she sometimes had droll experiences in her good-natured, though ill-advised attempts at soul-saving. Her visit to Jane Mcguire was one of these instances. Jane was an industrious Irish woman who had supported herself by hard work until a protracted illness brought her to the end of her resources and nearly to the brink of the grave at about the same time. It made her very rebellious to see her hoarded savings melt away while she was too weak to earn more. When Auntie McIntosh drove up in her fine carriage one morning to have a talk with Jane, thinking it would be a good time to point a moral on occasional glasses of beer and cuss words that Jane was reputed to indulge in. Jane took it all quietly until Auntie proposed a season of prayer. Then her Irish temper and her sense of injustice put politeness to rout. 'Bad cess to sich Christians as you are,' she said, 'with yer preachin' and yer prayin'. You'd better be givin' potatoes than prayers. You'd be makin' more converts with yer soups than with all yer sermons.'"

"What did Annie McIntosh say?"

"Oh, she wasn't a fool, if she didn't have very practical ideas. She thought a minute and then she said: 'Jane, I guess you are about right. I was so anxious about your soul, I didn't think about the needs of your poor body, but I will bring the things you need right away.' When she returned a little later with a liberal supply of provisions she found poor Jane overwhelmed with mortification at what she called her meanness. But it was a salutary lesson to both of them, and I would suggest that you try the same scheme with your portege to-morrow."

The next day and for several days following Mrs. Brown sent nourishing foods and dainty fruits to the home where she had taken the orchids. But it was eight or ten days before she again went to visit the little home. When she did go such a happy-looking girl opened the door she could hardly believe it was the pale child she met the week before. There was real joy in her manner as she ushered the fine lady into the little room—moter was sitting up and actually trying to do a little sewing. Was it possible that a week's supply of wholesome food had wrought such a wondrous change!

If there had been lack of appreciation when she took the orchids there was certainly enthusiasm now. But she had been mistaken. Surely there was the old blue pitcher. And there, too, still fresh and beautiful, were many of the orchids.

"How did you manage to keep them so long?" she exclaimed.

"Why, you see we have so few flowers, and we love them so much that we have learned how to care for them. If the water is changed frequently and two or three rusty nails put in the vase the oxygen eats the iron instead of the flowers, and they last longer. These are the most beautiful I have ever seen. I seem to see faces in every one. But the day you brought them I was so weak for want of food I could hardly see them at all."

Poor Mrs. Brown was in tears. This woman—that she almost ridiculed and thought of writing compositions about for the delection of her club—proved to be a cultured woman quite capable of earning a comfortable support by means of the exquisite needle-work which soon rendered her a perfect treasure to Mrs. Brown and her aristocratic friends.—Banner of Gold.

Brains in Kindness.

I have known some people—men as well as women—happily ingenious in the small services of life, and the house in which they live has always a favorable aspect toward the sun. They have received their commission from duty. They act in firm and settled course. Though their alms are in secret, they are never in the dark, for they shed a light of their own. They give little presents which have an exaggerated attraction because they are just what you want. They say the right word—just what every one would say—only they say it at the right time, so that the apple of gold gleams in a basket of silver. They have a promptness of manner which forestalls your comfort and helps you without any burdensome reminder that the help is given. Watching genial and attractive people I have often fallen into a deep despair about myself, for all this seems a natural gift, like music or poetry. But I have some reason to think that it is not so natural, either, but toilsomely acquired in the accustomed places—viz., the oratory at the foot of the cross, and the cave under the hilton of duty.

The British Flag—Its Egyptian Origin.

On this square the equinoctial points are called by the recorded name of Horus, and those intermediate between at the corners by the name of Hat-hor. These points, when united by horizontal, perpendicular and traverse lines, form the eight-rayed star, the sign of God and barleyseed to the ancient Akkadians and Chinese, and the Eshmun or eight-rayed god of the Phoenicians.

These divisions were formed by placing a St. George's cross over the cross of St. Andrew; and that St. George's cross is the sign of Horus, the god of the year measured by the equinoxes with their equal days and nights, has been proved by M. Clermont Ganneau. He shows that the Egyptian statue at the Louvre representing Horus as the bird-headed knight, riding on the sun horse and slaying the dragon of winter with his spear is identical with the Byzantine pictures of St. George. Also the St. Andrew's cross represents his mother, the sun-bird mother of a bird-headed son, the Shvena bird of the Rigveta.—Westminster Review.

Adjutant Birds of Calcutta.

On a parade ground at Calcutta are several adjutant birds. These creatures walk up and down the grounds, and they look so much like soldiers that at a distance strangers often mistake them for such.

TO FORCE MACDOUGALL'S TRIAL.

Judge Decides to Go on Whether Accused Is Well or Not.

Toronto, May 26.—A year ago last December Alfred Macdougall was arrested in connection with defalcations in the Provincial funds, and since then his trial has been postponed from time to time in accordance with the medical evidence of the unfitness of Mr. Macdougall to leave his bed.

On Monday the Crown had an examination made by Drs. N. D. Beemer and J. M. Cotton, and they agreed that, though phycially weak, he was quite able mentally to stand his trial, and that the trial might take place in his room under medical supervision without danger.

Judge Winchester yesterday decided to go on with the case in two weeks whether the accused were present or not. Both the Crown physicians stated that he could not be moved except on stretchers with a staff of hospital officials in attendance. Mr. DuVernet, who appeared for Macdougall, protested against the proposal to try his client in absence.

"He has a right to be tried according to British law, and if my learned friend persists in forcing the matter, I have my remedy."

Two weeks were then arranged for in order to give counsel time to move for a writ of prohibition.

It is not unlikely that if the case goes on the evidence will be taken in Macdougall's own apartments.

COL. COOKE GETS OUT.

Edward Gurin, K.C., Replaces Him As Crown Prosecutor at Montreal.

Montreal, May 26.—Edward Qurin replaces Col. Cooke as Crown prosecutor. The following letter received by J. P. Cooke, K.C., from the office of the Attorney-General, explains the matter:

Sir,—I am directed by the Attorney-General to acknowledge the receipt of your letter, dated May 20, in which, in view of the appointment of a Royal Commission to enquire into the charges made by William Blackley of Toronto against you as Crown prosecutor, and as this commission will be unable to report before the June term of the Criminal Court in Montreal, and as you would prefer not to act as Crown prosecutor until after the report of the commission has established whether such charges are true or not, you ask him to appoint someone to replace you for the June term of the Criminal Court, which opens on the 1st proximo, and, in answer, to inform you that he has this day appointed Ed. Gurin, K.C., to act as Crown prosecutor at said term.

The Tomato.

The tomato has a curious history. After the revolution of Santo Domingo many French families came from there to Philadelphia, where they introduced their favorite "pomme d'amour." Although introduced from South America as early as 1596 into England, it was looked upon with suspicion and its specific name, lycopersicum, derived from lykos (wolf) and persikon (a peach), referring to the beautiful but deceptive appearance of its fruit, intimates pretty closely the kind of estimation in which it was held. It is now, however, almost universally used.

Her Test.

An Oregon newspaper man says he was once traveling in the back country of Oregon, and, going to a little inn for lodging, was surprised to see a large picture of Dr. Edward Everett Hale on the wall. The woman of the house explained it thus: "Well, you see, a good many strangers come here and want me to keep 'em, and I don't know anything about 'em, but if they know Edward Everett Hale's picture I know they're good for something, and I let 'em stay."

FISH FOOD NOT THE BEST.

Many Fallacies About a Diet on Sea Products Are Extant.

It is doubtful whether any given food in common use contains constituents which have a selective action, so to speak, on the property of ministering to one part of the body more than another. As a rule, when a food is assumed to have specific reparative properties—as, for example, a so called brain or nerve food—the fact really is that such food is easily and quickly assimilated to the body's general advantage; in a word, in such a case repair quickly overtakes waste and a real purposeful nutrition and restoration are accomplished. The administration of such elements as phosphorus or iron in medicine is, of course, a different matter, but these elements are evenly distributed in the materials of a daily diet.

It is often stated that fish is a food which ministers particularly to the needs of the brain, because it contains phosphorus. As a matter of fact, fish does not contain more phosphorus than do the ordinary meat foods, and it certainly does not contain it in a free state. The notion that fish contains phosphorus had no doubt its origin in the glowing phosphorescence of fish in the dark. This phosphorescence is due not to phosphorus at all, but to micro organisms. The belief, therefore, that fish is a brain food is just about as reasonable as the idea that because a soup is thick and gelatinous "it will stick to the ribs" or as sensible as the celebrated advice to Verdant Green to lay in a stock of Reading biscuits to assist his reading.

Fish, of course, is excellent food, partly because of the nourishing nature of its constituents and partly because of its digestibility. But it is in no sense a specific for brain or nerve. —London Lancet.

A HOUSE DIVIDED.

The Reason a Planned Goose Dinner Was a Failure.

Most persons have had the experience of walking with a friend out of step and trying to shift just at the moment when the friend also makes the attempt. This is an instance of thwarted harmony much like that which appears in a story told by a London journal of an elderly couple. They were childless and had never been united by the bond of other lives linked with their own. So they were always in a state of well bred disagreement.

On the subject of meals they disagreed thoroughly, and each usually suggested a dish for the Sunday dinner which the other did not approve. One Saturday the man came home from market with a basket.

"You needn't worry about tomorrow's dinner any more, Maria. I've got it."

"And so have I, George. You were so undecided"—

"Undecided! I told you what I wanted."

"Well, I mean you didn't decide as I did. So I bought a goose."

"Why, so have I. I told you I'd like a goose."

"Well, now we are agreed for once anyway."

"Yes, and I suppose we'll have cold goose and stewed goose for the next two weeks."

They relapsed into their usual silence.

Sunday forenoon the wife asked, "Do you want a little quince in the apple sauce with your goose?"

"Your goose, you mean?"

"No, I don't. It seemed so absurd to have two geese in the house that I sent mine to Aunt Jane."

"What! I sent mine to Uncle Joe!"

GREELEY IN THE ROCKIES.

The Way He Sobered Up a Boisterous Hotel Crowd.

In the "Memoirs of Henry Villard" there is a chapter in which the author describes a meeting with Greeley in the Rockies. The "Tribune philosopher," having met with an accident which crippled him for several weeks, was an unwilling guest at the Denver House, the only "hotel" in the city, a rude shack of a building, with canvas partitions, the greater part given up to the bar and gaming tables, and therefore not a place conducive to the quiet and repose of invalids. Mr. Villard noticed a change gradually taking place in the usually benign features of the philosopher, his Christian virtues gradually losing control over him, until finally one day he lost his temper completely and swore at his disturbers "so violently that I dared not believe my ears." His wrath, however, did not culminate until the third night of his tortures. About 10 o'clock he got up and limped into the barroom, where he thus addressed the astonished tipplers:

"Friends, I have been in pain and without sleep for almost a week, and I am well nigh worn out. Now I am a guest at this hotel, I pay a high price for my board and lodging and am entitled to rest during the night. But how can I get it with all this noise going on in this place?"

"Then," adds Mr. Villard, "he addressed one of the most pathetic appeals I ever heard to those around him to abandon their vicious ways and become sober and industrious. He spoke for nearly an hour and was listened to with rapt interest and the most perfect respect. He succeeded, too, in his object. The gambling stopped, and the bar was closed every night at 11 o'clock as long as he remained."

The Breeding Ram.

A correspondent asks Breeder's Gazette: "How many seasons should the same ram be bred to a flock of sheep and what is the effect of inbreeding?" To which John A. Craig makes this reply: "The ram should never be bred to his own get. A ram can only be used two years on the same flock, if his get are introduced into the flock and bred only as yearlings, which is the best practice. The only limit to the use of the ram on the flock that is not related to him is the vigor of the ram."

AN EAST INDIAN HURRICANE

By George H. Coomer.

We were making a passage from Samarang, in the island of Java, to Signapore, which, as most readers are aware, lies close off the southern extremity of Malacca, and is one of the greatest commercial emporiums of the world.

Our ship, the Lion, a vessel of about 700 tons, was loaded with coffee and pepper, large quantities of articles being carried from Java to Singapore, and thence reshipped to other ports upon demand.

We had as passengers an American physician and his wife, who brought with them a large number of beautiful Javanese birds, which they hung in cages about the deck cabin. In a large cage, placed in the open air, they had a wild peacock, with its mate, these superb fowls being very common in the deep forests of Java, where they must often one would think, meet with unpleasant neighbors.

On leaving Samarang we were able to head directly for our place of destination, with the northwest monsoon squarely on our broadside, blowing a gentle breeze of five or six knots an hour, which, in about five days, brought us within sight of the tall treetops of Singapore that looked as seen through our glasses at a distance of some 20 miles, as if they sprang directly out of the water.

Here, however, there fell a dead calm, the monsoon being entirely gone. The sky had an appearance which we did not like; for, although not a cloud was visible, the whole heaven assumed a strange, brassy look that was reflected on board the ship.

The captain and mate conferred anxiously together; the hands forward squinted at the sky and shook their heads, and the two passengers, Dr. Alton and his wife, were evidently not a little startled. The very peacock failed to cry out that day, as was his custom, and the birds in the cabin were more than usually quiet.

On the other hand, a cat which we had on board become strangely restless, darting hither and thither, and staring about her in such a wild manner as led the second mate to remark that it must be high water, if there was anything to be told by a cat's eyes.

Hurriedly the lighter spars were sent down to the deck, and while this work was in progress there came sweeping toward us three prodigious rollers in close proximity to each other, the central wave being, as we judged, 20 feet high, while those which accompanied it, and were merely its consequent adjuncts, were considerably lower.

There was something almost supernatural in the appearance of those three broad undulations, as they coarsed heavily along upon an otherwise smooth sea. The ship, lying totally becalmed, received them "broadside to," and it was our fear that they would sweep the decks; but, with three tremenlous rolls, which threw the very peacock off his legs, she surmounted them in safety. The moment they had gone by the surface of the China sea resumed its ordinary appearance.

At the end of an hour, however, we received a second visitation, precisely like the first, except that the swells were somewhat heavier. They struck the ship upon the bows, and, as her position for the moment was the most favorable one possible, she received no injury, although pitching "bowsprit under."

Again succeeded the ordinary aspect of a calm at sea, where the gentle undulations, although nearly imperceptible, are never entirely absent.

Another hour and we saw a third advancing column, which, like the first and second, consisted of a trio of waves, but with an increased weight and terror. The ship was now "stern on," and we awaited the result with great anxiety.

There was a terrible grandeur in the appearance of the rolling deluge. The middle wave could not have been less than 30 feet high, while those in front and rear may have lacked some eight or ten feet of this altitude. The combined line illustrated the military idea of a column of attack, formed three deep.

The silence with which this mighty avalanche glided onward was, in itself, fearful. Upon the top there might be an occasional break and growl, but below was an utter noiselessness, and the whole bespoke a weight and power to mock any effort of the imagination.

The foremost of these combined seas swept under the ship's counters, throwing her stern in air till the deck lay at a most unusual angle. Then the bow correspondingly rose, while the stern sank, and now the middle wave hung like a moving mountain close to the taffrail. The good old Lion—an excellent sea boat—once more lifted her after part as the base of the tremendous swell rolled under her rudder port, and for a moment we thought that even this huge sea would go harmlessly by.

But it was too steep, and too near its fellow wave for the ship to ride it safely. She had glided swiftly down from the smaller, and the larger caught her at a disadvantage.

As the stern began to rise, the top of the swell broke over the taffrail. It came with inconceivable force upon the poop deck, which was seven feet high, and under which was the cabin. The boat which hung at the stern was stove, the binnacle broken, the compass smashed, and the mizzen mast carried by the board.

Roaring forward, from the taffrail to the bowsprit, went the prodigious inundation, filling the decks to the top of the rail, staving a great hole in the house forward, where it deluged all the berths of the sailors, and tearing away many of the bulwark boards.

Our captain, together with the doctor and his wife, had darted into the cabin under the poop, while the rest of us ran up the fore and main rigging, there being at the time no one at the helm on account of the calm.

The poor peacock and his mate went out in their cage over the forward bulwarks, and the cat with them, and all this while there was not a breath of air.

But what a sight the cabin presented! The water had entered it to a depth of three or four feet, and gone swashing from side to side till it swept down all the bird cages, besides half drowning the captain and the two passegers. However, as the floor was on a level with the main deck, the flood soon abated.

We cleared the wreck with all possible haste, and had just completed the work when the great East Indian hurricane, of which the waves we had seen had been the advance guard, struck us with terrible fury. It had somewhere been circling around for many hours, although making so very rapid headway in a direct line, hence the mighty swells that swept far out into the calm.

For the rest of that day and all the following night the roar of the wind was awful. Our two remaining masts were whirled out of the ship, as if they had been only dry twigs, while the forward house was carried overboard with all our sea chests and mattresses. A man could not stand for a moment without grasping some object to support him.

Soon after daylight the hurricane on a sudden died away, and an hour later the ship, which hal been driven to all points of the compass by the circling wind, struck on the island of Singapore, and a spot about five miles from the city.

An enormously high tide carried her sheer over the seashore rocks, and into the edge of a swampy forest which lined the low bank, yet she was drawing at the time 18 feet of water.

Here the old Lion stuck fast, a perfect wreck, and when the tide went down, she was high and dry, with "windrows" of great trees lying about her, looking as if some terrific scythe had cut them down.

In the afternoon we made our way on foot along the island shore toward the city.

When half the distance had been accomplished, it became necessary to pass over a piece of broken and difficult ground, where we came upon the dead body of a tiger, which had been crushed by the fall of a tree.

Pausing to examine the grim but still handsome creature, we began to hear, close to us, a low, deep, sound, resembling the just perceptible roll of very distant thunder. Everyone started, and the doctor's wife turned pale with affright.

"Hist!" exclaimed the captain, pointing to a spot not more than 20 yards off, where there was a low, flat rock, partially hidden by a treetop which had fallen across it. We fixed our gaze upon the place, and a sharp thrill passed through us. There, crouched upon the rock, growling in a suppressed manner, and with its flaming eyes, intently watching us, was another tiger, and in the full possession of life and strength.

"There is but one way," said the captain. "We must step back as gently as we can. It is just possible that he may not spring upon us."

He was large and fierce enough to have been able to kill 20 human beings in as many minutes, but perhaps the terror inspired by the hurricane had not yet left him.

We drew slowly away from the dangen, the tiger all the while watching us with those terrible eyes, but remaining as motionless as the rock on which he lay. I remember distinctly the black stripes that marked the orange ground of his face and shoulders as he crouched there looking at us.

Our retreat, however, was effected in safety, and never were people more grateful for a happy deliverance from a most appalling danger than were we.

Reaching the city of Singapore, we found that the damage to its buildings and shipping had been immense. My tarry at the spot was not long. I was placed with the other foremast hands on board a steamer, and we went up to Calcutta.

The captain remained for awhile longer at Singapore, but the doctor and his wife accompanied us to the great capital of Hindostan, where they fixed their residence.—Golden Days.

THE MESSENGER FROM KHARTOOM

BY ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

Author of "Dr. Jack," "Dr. Jack's Wife," "Miss Caprice," Etc, Etc.

and the cooling breeze may fan their cheeks.

Rather a picturesque scene they present, the traveller thinks, as he stops to take it in. At this moment Molly spies him and starts up.

Then, as if remembering herself, she turns scarlet, makes a movement as though about to be seated again, changes her mind and bravely advances toward Joe.

"Well done!" is the mental comment of that gentleman, who has noted all the phases of this struggle, and begins to believe deep down in his heart there may be some truth in what Mr. Grimes has told him.

He is too shrewd to give himself away, however, and looks very innocent as he greets Miss Tanner.

"Great Jehosaphat! Is that you Joe? Come up here, young man, and give a strict account of yourself!" burst out the sweet voice of the big Illinois senator.

And if the crocodiles of the Ganges could hear the full tenor of his siren notes, they would weep tears of envy and bellow no more. Talk about your steam fog-horn! The Honorable Demosthenes could extinguish such a toy with one blast, and then hardly half try.

This is an invitation such as Joe wants, and to the interested quartette he is soon relating what he has done to relieve them of the baron, whose presence in India means trouble for all.

CHAPTER XXIII.

The facts are soon made plain, and every one understands the game that Mr. Grimes and Mynheer Joe have hatched up between them. It is simple and yet seems to have the necessary qualities to insure success.

As Mr. Grimes predicted to his companion, the young American girl is ready to join in the game. She knows the risk and dares undertake it for the good of the little company. The case has at any rate reached a point when heroic treatment is necessary in order to accomplish a cure. Such instances arrive in the affairs of men as well as in surgery.

When all has been arranged, each one of the company is satisfied, and the game goes on. The baron has not been seen since Mr. Grimes pointed him out, but he can easily be found when wanted.

It is now well on toward noon, and the balance of the drama must be played within twelve hours, for Captain Ben hopes to sail long ere another morning breaks upon Bombay.

Each goes to the appointed task. Within the hour a messenger is searching for the baron, bearing a note without a signature, but which is couched in language calculated to cause the Russian to smack his lips with pride and satisfaction, confident that his conquest is nearly completed, the beautiful American bird almost within his grasp, being unable to resist the charms of a title.

These foreigners have come to the conclusion that any American beauty or heiress will give up even the man she loves, to grasp a coronet. Perhaps a few glaring instances of this kind have made them believe that way. They need taking down, and Molly Tanner is just the one to champion her sex, and teach the aristocracy a lesson.

It was just ten minutes to two when the baron receives this scented billet doux. He is in a fashionable club, to which he has gained entry through letters of introduction, and for purposes of his own. At the time he chances to be engaged in a game of billiards with a French gentleman of note, travelling in India to see the country, so it is said, although there are suspicions that he meets the baron by appointment.

France and Russia are hand in glove. Their interests do not clash, and both secretly hate England. In the event of a general European War, in which Great Britain received a drubbing, Turkey and India would be the spoils of Russia, while Egypt must fall to France. These things are talked of in India, where the British troops are but a drop in the bucket compared to the natives, and every move upon the chessboard of Europe finds its responsive throb over the Indian Ocean. Besides, the peculiarity of their position causes them to see things in a different light.

When the baron has read his note, he looks pleased, and his French companion laughs aloud.

"Success, baron, eh? You are a lady-killer. Who would think it, a man given over to diplomatic intercourse such as my friend, and yet finds time for these little amours. I congratulate you. Who is it, mon ami?"

POISONED.

Rank Poison is Created when Food does not digest, and that is when Sickness Commences.

If the man or woman who does not feel right, will at once look to putting the stomach right they will strike the right key—Every ache and every pain is a cry of poison, too much of which has been made in the process of converting food into nutriment. It may be the backache or sideache of the kidneys telling they are overtaxed and cannot filter the poison—It may be weight, pain or distress in the stomach that tells of fermentation and decomposition instead of digestion—It may be headache. dull, depressed, which tells poison has reached the fluid which surrounds the brain cells. The first cause is the same—lack of gastric juice to properly digest. ANTI-PILL, the Great System Treatment, is a new discovery which so acts on the mucous membrane of the stomach, a natural supply of gastric juice is assured. To prove the wonderful action of ANTI-PILL, you may have a free trial bottle by addressing Wilson-Fyle Co., Niagara Falls, Ont.

The baron shakes his head, and gently deposits the perfumed note in his inner pocket.

"That would be telling, monsieur. I never give my secrets away until I am sure. The bird flutters, but I cannot call it mine until my hand closes around it. Enough to say, I am afraid the baron is caught at last."

"Mon Dieu! Is it so serious as that? I had not thought it meant so much. It is too bad, baron, that the event of your life should come upon you while on this trip."

The Russian gives him a look that means much.

"Never fear, Monsieur Lamar; I am equal to the occasion!"

They drop the subject and knock the balls about for some time longer. It is evident, however, that the baron's letter has broken up his style, for he plays like an amateur and finally drops his cue in disgust, excusing himself to his friend.

He hardly knows how to pass the time away until evening, and the hours must seem like an eternity to his impatient soul.

During the afternoon he has callers at his rooms; several men come to confer with him in a mysterious way. It is evident that the baron has connections here in Bombay with a powerful clique. This makes it doubtful whether the clever little scheme of the Americans can be made a success, for some one of these elements may happen upon the game and discover the truth. Still, such men as Mynheer Joe and Mr. Grimes can be trusted to stand up against all comers and hold their own.

Thus the day draws to a close, and the momentous night creeps over the city on the sacred river—a night that will be fraught with great events to several of our characters.

All hail the coming of evening with joy, for the hours have dragged at the last. Even the natives rejoice at the setting of the sun. Some of them are worshippers of the great fire-god, and can be seen doing reverence to his descent behind the watery horizon. There are Mohammedans on their knees with their faces toward distant Mecca, oblivious of all save their prayers, accompanied by the most fantastic bending of the body.

These sights are so common in all Eastern countries that the old traveller fails to notice them beyond a casual glance.

Baron Popoff, after his dinner, proceeds to make an elaborate toilet. He is always something of a dandy, but on this particular night he waxes his mustache with particular care, so that the ends stand out like needles.

When ready to sally forth, he surveys himself in the glass, smiles with satisfaction, as though personally well pleased with his appearance, gives a last twirl at his mustache and then leaves the house.

Already he has seen to his preparations, and a shigram is waiting at the door, managed by one of his own men. The baron is suspicious by nature and likes not the idea of being driven about the dark streets of Bombay by one in whom he puts no confidence.

"Kito, you have your orders," he says in English, which language most Hindoos speak.

"Oh, yes, sahib—the hotel; it is all right," replies the Hindoo driver, who has been bought, body and soul, with Russian gold.

Away they go; and en route the baron chuckles to himself a dozen times as he pictures the consternation and jealous rage of his Yankee rival at finding him so favored by the fair American. He caresses the scented note from time to time, and has read it so often that each word comes distinctly before him, thus:

"The writer begs leave to inform the baron that she will receive him at eight this evening and be at home to no one else. Regarding the proposition contained in his letter, the near future can decide better than the present."

What can he make of this other than a willingness to surrender? He, the cunning diplomat, who in times past has met and successfully wrestled with the most masterly questions of the day, now finds himself in the toils of the merciless little god Cupid, who throws dust in his eyes and temporarily blinds him.

At the appointed time the vehicle pulls up before the hotel, and Baron Popoff alights. He bows to several people, looks at his time-piece, smiles to note the exactness of his arrival; for the diplomat is a great stickler at punctuality, and, if going to his execution, would want the volley fired at the proper time to the second.

Then he enters the caravansary and gives his card to a waiter. Presently that functionary returns with the information that the lady is in the parlor, and conducts the baron thither.

He finds Molly and her father in the small parlor, quite alone. The presence of the senator is not exactly to the liking of this ardent lover; but since the game seems to be playing into his hands, he does not see how he can feel very badly about it. He believes he has won by virtue of his name, and the father as well as the daughter favors his suit.

No one knows better how to carry himself in the drawing-room than the baron, for he has mixed much with royalty in his own land and other countries where he has been sent as Russia's agent.

He apologizes to Demosthenes Tanner for the scene in Cairo, and hopes it has been quite forgotten. At this the giant from Illinois laughs good-naturedly and declares that all parties ought to be satisfied; at least, as he and the baron came out of the small end of the horn together, there is no reason they should be foes.

Conversation becomes general, and the diplomat exerts himself to make a good impression on the stout legislator and his daughter. He has a large bump of conceit, and believes that as the evening passes he draws nearer his goal.

Several times he finds an opportunity to whisper to Molly. She blushes beautifully and holds a warning finger up, saying:

"Not yet, baron. You must wait until we know each other better.

Then the courteous Russian bows and smiles and mentally pats his shoulder as he sees victory in the near future. Poor fool! So the mighty Samson of old may have congratulated himself when making love to Delilah, never dreaming that he would awaken to find his head shorn and his strength gone. So many another giant in the history of the world has been brought to his Waterloo by means of the blinding god Cupid.

One thing gives the baron the keenest delight. He drinks the sweet cup to the dregs. While engaged in an animated conversation with Molly, as he describes the glories of the Russian capital in winter, he chances to glance toward the end of the little parlor.

Here a fine mirror is set in the wall, for the furnishings of the room are superb. It is in this glass he sees what pleases him.

A man stands in the large drawing-room—a man he has good reason to remember, since it was his sword that pierced the baron's shoulder under the palms on the bank of the Nile. Mynheer Joe makes no move to advance. He seems to have come upon the scene by accident, and is rooted to the spot. The wily diplomat sees his opportunity. He will now proceed to put the weapon more painful than a sword into the Yankee's heart.

"If you will pardon me for taking your hand, Miss Tanner," pleaded the baron, "I will explain to you how the ladies are supposed to act when being presented to the czarina, as I hope ere long you will have that pleasure."

She allows it, of course, although half understanding his motif. That is the picture Mynheer Joe gazes upon—his hated rival in the act of raising Molly's sweet hand to his lips.

All the while the baron has one eye on the mirror. He sees the look of fury upon Joe's face, notes that he presses a hand against his brow, as though struck a blow, and, turning, rushes out of the room.

Then the diplomat smiles. He no longer feels the pain in his shoulder. It has been wiped out by this last clever stroke of fortune, since he believes he has given better than he received—a Roland for an Oliver.

The Russian's cup is full to overflowing. He thinks fortune has turned to smile upon him again. It is like a toboggan slide—one has to toil up the hill, but the exhilaration of the descent pays for the trouble.

In that descent, so speedy and grand, all obstacles must be swept out of the way. Since Mynheer Joe is one of these obstructions he will find himself hurled through space perhaps before he knows what is wrong.

Little does the wily baron suspect that all this affair is a deep laid scheme, which has for its foundation the desire to rid the little company of his hated presence. They find it impossible to breathe in the same air as the diplomat, and hence there must be an exodus on the part of someone.

Like everything else in this world, the evening must come to an end, although the baron makes no note of the lapse of time. He finds the old senator yawning frequently with a noise like the rushing of a mighty wind through the forest, and wonders why he does not betake himself off; but the legislator shows no signs of doing it. Evidently the suitor must content himself with the progress already made, and leave the balance for another time.

He makes an engagement for the following morning—immediately after breakfast he will be on hand with a palkee gharry to take Miss Tanner and her father to meet some of the highest dignitaries of India, just at this time chancing to be in Bombay. The American girl accepts the invitation in a way that at another time might excite a little suspicion in the brain of the diplomat, but just now he is too intoxicated by love to notice it. This is what Miss Molly says:

"We will be ready to go with you, when you come, baron. Eight o'clock, remember."

"To the minute," he responds, bowing low over her hand and even daring to press it.

The young girl smiles as she bids him good night, while Demosthenes bubbles over in his effusive way. Both are thinking of the same thing, that at eight o'clock on the following day Baron Popoff in order to keep his engagement may have to walk over miles of green water, unless the carefully laid plans of the plotters fail to operate.

The next hour will tell. It is fraught with deep suspense for Molly. The senator retires, but she continues to keep her seat in the parlor, awaiting news.

CHAPTER XXIV.

The baron finds his vehicle awaiting him just outside the hotel. His driver is on hand, and with his usual form shows the nobleman to the carriage. Some jocular remark is made by the baron, who is in such a decidedly jolly humor that he can even notice a menial.

Just as they are about to move off, a man gives a signal, and the baron stops the vehicle while he holds a low consultation. The driver sits like a statue. If he hears, he gives no evidence of it; at any rate, the talk must be a sealed book to him, for the men converse in Russian.

"Move on, Kito," comes the order.

The stranger has not entered the vehicle, and yet, when the driver casts a look behind, he fails to see him. Of course, the shadows are dense along under the trees near the hotel, and it may be he has secreted himself among these. Again it is possible he hangs on behind the vehicle.

Away they go, in a cloud of dust, in the direction of the city proper, where lights still abound, and there is no sign of sleep, such as would be falling upon an American city at this hour.

The baron leans back in his equipage and gives himself up to delicious reflection. He has won many diplomatic victories in the past, but, really, for the life of him, he cannot remember one that has given him half as much genuine pleasure as this signal conquest.

He declares he is beginning to grow old; that this is the real reason Mynheer Joe got the better of him in the affair of honor. But if he is unable to wield the sword with the same dexterity as of yore, he has gained in other things. As a man grows older, he is apt to prove more foolish with regard to love affairs. The baron knows it, and does not deny the soft impeachment with regard to himself. It is time he was marrying and keeping his place in the family.

These sorts of comfortable reflections come to his mind when he lolls back in comfort in the shigram and thinks of the future. Mynheer Joe, outwitted at last and deserted by the fair American, will fly from India. The baron may finish his diplomatic task with honor, proceed with his bride to St. Petersburg and be received with great eclat by both potentate and people whom he has mutually served by his brilliant work.

Thus he muses, smoking his cigar meanwhile and taking life as comfortably as he can. It strikes him that the vehicle is tossing about more than is necessary, if the driver has taken the direct road, and the baron idly thrusts his head out of the open window.

The moon is concealed for the time, being back of some clouds, so that all he can make out is that the neighborhood does not seem familiar. Just then there is a grand lurch; one side of the shigram drops into a small cavity in the street, and the baron comes very near being tossed out. He has the breath somewhat shaken from his body by the sudden concussion. The vehicle comes to a sudden stand. This makes the baron furious; he has a violent temper that occasionally flashes into hot heat when things do not go to please him.

"Kito!" he roars, shaking the door.

"Sahib, I am here," answers a voice.

"Oh, you are! Unfasten this door! I cannot make it slide," snaps the baron.

"Sahib, it opens this way." Whereupon the baron steps out upon the street.

"Where are we?" he demands, looking around at the dimly seen houses, with their strange fronts. "I do not recognize the place. This is not the road from the hotel to my rooms—the road we travelled over in going. Speak, Kito!"

"It is not, sahib," meekly replies the humble driver, who stands close by him.

"How does this come, miserable dog?" demands the Russian, half tempted to chastise the wretch who has led him into this pickle.

"It is my fault. I thought to take a short cut to your rooms. The moon betrayed me. I saw not this hole. Thank Allah it is no worse," replies the other, endeavoring apparently to conciliate him; but the enraged Russian grows warmer every minute.

"'No worse!' You fool, unless we can lift the wheel out of the hole, I may have to walk—all through your stupidity! Do you know, I've a mind to teach you a lesson such as the serfs in Russia learned long ago!"

With that, he baron, blind with passion, leaps over the vehicle and snatches the whip.

It is a wicked looking instrument of torture, especially in the hand of one who knows how to handle such a thing; and the baron, no doubt, has had enough experience among sledge dogs during his journeys in the frozen wastes of Siberia to be able to pluck a piece of flesh from a certain spot on an animal. An adept with such a whip can annihilate a horse fly that has lodged upon the back of the leader, and, although the report sounds like the discharge of a pistol, the animal has not been even touched.

It can be set down as certain, therefore that the person familiar with a whip has no desire to feel such an instrument of torture laid upon his back or legs. Kito raises his hand in protest.

"Sahib, forfear! It would not be well for you to strike me," he says calmly.

The moon has appeared again. It shows a singular spectacle—the shigram partly turned over, the angry baron, whip in hand, and the splendid figure of his Hindoo driver standing there in an attitude of fearless warning, his right arm raised as if to keep the Russian from going too far.

Perhaps the baron had seen the knout laid upon wretched humanity so often in his native land that his first inclination is to use a whip upon one for whom he has conceived a sudden anger, not counting the consequences. That may do when applied to the debased serfs of Russia, but it will not be endured in this land, where proud blood flows through the veins of even the meanest of the people.

The baron does not know what he invites. He sees the action of his driver, and instead of moderating his zeal, it enrages him still more.

"You scoundrel! Dare to threaten me, a Russian nobleman! Take that."

Even as he speaks he gives the cruel whip a sudden momentum. The lash cuts the air and comes with a tremendous snap against the limbs of the Hindoo driver.

He simply gives an exclamation, although the pain must be intense. Hardly has the blow been struck than the athletic form of the driver is seen in motion. Instead of retreating he springs toward the baron. Already he is too near the Russian for the other to apply the lash a second time.

He immediately drops the whip, having no further use for it, and throws himself into an attitude of self-defense.

To be continued.

WISDOM OF THE WORLD.

Hold Yourself Up and Show That You Are Somebody.

There came a distressed one to me. "My hair is the plague of my life. It is thin and fine and limp, and it simply won't stay up. I have nearly spoiled it with irons, and it makes every hat I have unbecoming. I hate false hair, but I suppose it is inevitable. Now, there is Mrs. So-and-so. Her hair is so pretty. Of course I know mine is like it in color and perhaps texture, but of course if mine shone like that and curled in the same way"—

Now, Mrs. So-and-so is an intimate friend of mine. Her hair would be just like that of this patient if she treated it in the same fashion, but Mrs. So-and-so goes in for hair treatment, which keeps the scalp firm and healthy and makes the most of every hair. She brushes and burnishes it with immense care, and she goes to bed with every lock ("naturally as straight as a die," as she says, laughing) rolled in soft, yielding "curlers" or linen rags. Over all goes a fascinating little lace cap, which hides these aids to beauty and in which she looks so pretty. She has had a reputation for having wavy and curly hair all her life, for she has never ruined it with tongs and has always taken care to wave it nightly in the above manner.

Mesdames, you may not have pretty feet, but if you are properly shod no one will ever know it. You may not have small hands, but they can be carefully manicured, the texture of the skin marvelously improved and the color reduced. You may not have small waists naturally. Then for goodness' sake don't tight lace and ruin your health in trying to get them smaller. If only women would believe that a small waist is not an absolute necessity! But I must not complain too much on that score. In spite of the nonsense which springs up like weeds, regardless of time or place, regardless of the fact that of later years we have grown wiser, there is no doubt that the new style of stays has brought about a revolution. Many women's waists by judicious slight compression at the sides and freedom allowed in front by the French cut corset are smaller apparently and in reality measure from one to three inches more than they used to do.

I have one more piece of advice to give, and give it to tall and short, especially to tall, to fat and thin, to old and young. It was given years ago to a woman who in after life has been celebrated for the beauty of her carriage. It proved a priceless gift, hurled at her youthful head in language "that did not mince matters" by a direct speaking old lady of le haut monde, who knew the world well: "Hold yourself up, my dear, and look as though you were somebody."

The girl "was somebody" already; that did not matter. She was to look as though she were. Forty or fifty years later her grateful descendant passes on that invaluable advice.

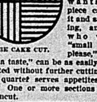
One Way to Cut a Cake.

The accompanying diagram furnished to Good Housekeeping by a correspondent shows a good way to cut a round loaf of cake. Any one who frankly wants a big piece can take it and say nothing, and they who want a "small piece, please," and "just a taste," can be as easily accommodated without further cutting, since each quarter serves appetites of all sizes. One or more sections can be left uncut.



THE CAKE CUT.

Dull Woodwork.

A few years ago it was considered the thing to have all the woodwork in your house highly polished and then varnished to make it even brighter, but now things have undergone a change, and all your woodwork and furniture must have the dull finish. This is certainly only a fad, as dull woodwork is far harder to keep clean than varnished wood. According to the New Idea Magazine, in nearly all the new New York houses the dining room table has the dull finish. It looks very pretty when the bare table is set for luncheon. Even photograph frames are made of the dull wood. Scrap baskets of dull wood, painted and decorated, with bows of ribbon, are exceedingly attractive.

The Harm Noise Does.

Noise is an undoubted factor in impairing the tone of the nerve centers. Whether we are conscious of it or not, it hurts the brain and has a deafening, dazing, bewildering effect on the mental processes. It tires the brain. To live in a noisy atmosphere is to shorten one's days. Irritability, neurasthenia, insomnia, are common effects. The tympanum or drum membrane of the ear is injured, the circulation of the cerebrospinal fluid is disturbed, and the nerve cells themselves suffer as though subjected to mechanical violence. All this noise does if a family doctor is correct in his assertions.

Horseradish Sauce.

To make horseradish sauce mix well together three tablespoonfuls of freshly grated horseradish, one tablespoonful of vinegar, a little salt and pepper. Whip to a stiff froth a quarter of a pint of cream, and stir it very carefully into the mixture just before serving. Or a very good horseradish sauce may be made by beating well together a small quantity of grated horseradish, two tablespoonfuls of mustard, two tablespoonfuls of vinegar, one tablespoonful of pounded white sugar and then adding at the last moment three tablespoonfuls of cream.

MOHAMMEDANS AND DOGS.

They Take Particular Pains Not to Come In Contact.

In Egypt dogs are never permitted to enter the dwelling of a Mohammedan, and if one is found in a mosque he is immediately put to death.

In consequence of this excommunication from the society which this animal seems so instinctively disposed to cultivate, Egyptian dogs live, for the most part, in the open air, feeding upon garbage and any other filth that chance throws in their way. Yet they are found to be faithful protectors of the property and even persons of the very men by whom they are thus despitefully treated, although, Sonini remarks, it is extremely curious to see the pains taken by a Mussulman and a dog when they happen to meet to avoid coming in contact with each other. Notwithstanding this state of persecution, dogs are remarkably numerous in the towns of Egypt. The species is a large one, about the size and make of the greyhound. As a proof of the Mohammedan prejudice against this useful animal, it is sufficient to state that they regard the terms Christian and dog as synonymous—both, of course, in the most opprobrious sense.

As a singular contrast for their dislike for dogs, the Egyptians have ever held cats in greatest veneration, and in ancient time even worshiped them. And historians tell us that Bubastis and Atribes, two towns in Egypt, the former a votary of cats and the latter of mice, contracted on that account so strong an antipathy to each other that the inhabitants were never known to intermarry, although only a few miles asunder. In some parts of India, too, we are told, they have a similar reverence for grimalkin, as the only crimes punished capitally there are the murder of a man and a cat.

TRIALS OF DIPLOMATS.

They Were Many In the Early Days of American History.

There exists a popular tendency to overrate the delights and to underrate the hardships of the diplomatic life; but, however much opinions may differ on this point, there can be no doubt that the office of an American diplomatist in the days of the Revolution was no holiday pastime.

If he was not already in Europe, his journey to his post was beset with perils graver than those of the elements. In the eyes of the British law American revolutionists were simply "rebels," the reprobation of whose conduct was likely to be proportionate to their prominence and activity, and the seas were scoured by British cruisers, the dreaded embodiment of England's maritime supremacy. Deane went abroad secretly before independence was declared, but when his presence in France became known the British government asked that he be seized and delivered up into its custody. Franklin sailed for France on a small vessel of war belonging to congress, called the Reprisal. On the way over she took two prizes, and more than once, on descrying a suspicious sail, cleared for action. Had she been captured by the British, Franklin would have had an opportunity to test the truth of his remark to his associates in congress that they must "either hang together or hang separately." John Adams, on his first journey, took passage on an American vessel; on his second he embarked on the French frigate Sensible and landed at Ferrol, in Spain. Jay committed his fate to the American man-of-war Confederacy and, like Adams and Franklin reached his destination.

An Isolated Church.

In the valley of Westdale Head, in Cumberland, England, a strange little church nestles amid a group of the highest of England's mountains. It is over 400 years old and has two windows, and the pulpit is lighted by a pane of glass having been inserted in a hole in the roof above it. There are only eight pews, of which seldom more than two are used. The little bell, hanging loose in the open belfry, may on stormy nights be heard mingling its tones with the wind and thunder. But for the belfry it would hardly be known to be a church. This little gray edifice is described as the most isolated church throughout the whole of England.

Good Reason.

A school inspector, explaining to his class that the land of the world was not continuous, said to the boy who happened to be standing nearest to him:

"Now, could your father walk round the world?"

"No, sir," was the prompt reply.

"Why not?"

"Because he's broken his leg," was the altogether unlooked for response.—Chums.

Hand Labor and Slow Methods When the Industry Was New.

The first really efficient lucifer match must be put to the credit of Mr. John Walker of Stockton-on-Tees, who in the year 1827 placed them on the market under the name of "Congreves," in compliment to Sir William Congreve, the inventor of the war rocket. These matches were sold for a shilling a box, which contained, besides a few dozen of the matches, a little piece of folded sandpaper, through which each splint of wood had to be drawn before it could be made to inflame. An original tin box, stamped with the royal arms and bearing the word "Congreve," is preserved as a curiosity in one of the London museums.

As in the case of all other industries, this one was initiated by hand labor alone. The splints of wood were no doubt originally dipped in the igniting composition one by one, but subsequently they were tied up in bundles and dipped en bloc, the workman giving each bundle a twist with his hands so that the end of each splint would be free to move to a certain extent and absorb a little more of the compound than it would if kept quite still. The next advance was to fix the splints in a frame so that each was separated from its neighbor, and this frame, containing about 1,500 matches, would be brought down on a marble slab upon which the composition was spread. The tipped matches, still in their frame, would then be dried in air for a few hours and afterward placed in a heated chamber to complete their desiccation. Manual labor is now almost wholly dispensed with in the manufacture of matches. The employment of yellow phosphorus for the charging of matches made the industry a very unhealthy one, and the workpeople, if not in the best of health, ran the risk of contracting a terrible disease known as necrosis of the jawbone, the vulgar name for which was "phossy jaw." With improvements in manufacture this evil has now been eliminated.—Chambers'.

By Elimination.

One day as Pat halted at the top of the river bank a man, famous for his inquisitive mind, stopped and asked:

"How long have you hauled water for the village, my good man?"

"Tin years, sor."

"Ah! How many loads do you take in a day?"

"From tin to fifteen, sor."

"Ah, yes! Now I have a problem for you. How much water at this rate have you hauled in all, sir?"

The driver of the watering cart jerked his thumb backward toward the river and replied, "All the wather yez don't see there now, sor."—Christian Advocate.

Calendars of the Aztecs.

Calendars are probably the oldest form of literature in the world. The cards which appear by the millions in all civilized countries nowadays have their counterpart among the most ancient known races. The Aztecs, for example, were well supplied with calendars, and several of them have been preserved to this day. They were published in stone and set up in public places.

"NOT IF IT COST TEN DOLLARS A bottle would I be without Polson's Nerviline," writes J. A. Ruth, a farmer living near Trenton, Ont. "Nerviline is the best household liniment I know. We use it for stomach troubles, indigestion, headache and summer complaint. I know of nothing better to take in hot water to break up a cold, or to rub on for rheumatism or neuralgia." Every farmer should keep a few bottles of Nerviline handy and have smaller doctor bills. Large bottles 25 cents, at druggists.

MENAGERIE WONDERS.

RINGLING BROTHERS EXHIBIT THE RAREST COLLECTION IN THE WORLD—OTHER CIRCUS MARVELS.

The most extensive and valuable collection of wild animals in the world is the menagerie feature of Ringling Brothers' wonderful circus exhibitions. Among the rare creatures to be seen nowhere else, and rated above price, are two giraffes, the only rhinoceros known to be in captivity, the almost extinct gnu, or horned horse, a perfect specimen of the white polar bear, a real baby elephant born in America, standing no higher than its mother's knee, and the only one ever born and successfully reared in captivity, and a gigantic troop of 40 elephants, the largest herd ever showed under canvas, and twice as many as are with any other show in the world. In this priceless collection of odd animal creatures the specimens are all perfect types, and 108 cages, dens and lairs are required to carry them. The big menagerie tent is the largest ever made for a circus, and so big that an army of 5000 men could be easily manoeuvred within it. Naturalists and explorers unqualifiedly pronounce the Ringling Brothers' menagerie the largest and most valuable in existence. Frequently colleges and schools are closed to give students an opportunity to inspect this celebrated wild animal collection. One may practically make a tour of the world in the time devoted to the study of this immense zoological display, and it is safe to say that never again will an opportunity present itself for seeing a great many animals almost extinct. The horse show with Ringling Brothers is another surpassing feature of the wonderful circus, exhibiting 650 superb specimens, 300 of which are performing equines of blue-blooded pedigree. The capital invested in this department alone indicates the progressive spirit of this firm, which is world-renowned as proprietors of the most successful circus institution in existence. This policy is again illustrated this season in the production of a magnificent spectacle, Jerusalem and the Crusades, involving 1,200 characters, a ballet of 300 and a singing chorus of 200, requiring the use of a stage larger than the combined stage space in 100 theatres. More than 2000 costumes, the design and make of Parisian artists, are employed, and the scenes of marching hosts, dancing galaxies, galloping knights, ecclesiastical groupings and swiftly changing dramatic incidents form a spectacular display indescribably fascinating. The music composed for this gorgeous production is rendered by the largest portable grand pipe organ ever built, and a band of 50 selected soloists. The scenic investiture is elaborate and ornate, and the spectacle in its entirety is incomparably the most important and successful historical display ever shown under canvas. The same policy of enlargement and novelty is to be seen in the ring performances this season. Three hundred and seventy-five of the pick and flower of Europe, America and the Orient in the circus profession are to be found in the huge arenic programme. Many of the leading artists in the riding, acrobatic and gymnastic numbers have never been seen in this country before, and are celebrated in their foreign homes. This year it takes 85 cars of double length to transport the immense equipment, horses and personal factors. When the circus is completely set up on the show grounds there are 20 pavilions in all. The street pageant on the morning of show day is the biggest and most varied ever organized. This attraction with Ringling Brothers has always been immeasurably superior to the efforts of all other shows, and this season it is more diversified, resplendent, novel, sensational and longer than ever before. The great shows will be here one day only, Saturday, June 4, and give two performances, at 2 o'clock and 8 o'clock. Numbered reserved seats and admission tickets can be bought circus day at Riggs' music store for exactly the same prices charged in the ticket wagons on the show grounds

STORY OF AN ESCAPE

AN INCIDENT OF THE CHICAGO IROQUOIS THEATER HORROR.

The Way a Woman and Her Two Children Were Saved From the Hurricane of Flame and Panic by a Stranger Who Was Intoxicated.

All great conflagrations that are attended with loss of life have, as a rule, their serio comic as well as their tragic incidents. Many peculiar escapes have been recorded, but the following story of how one woman and her two children were saved from death in the awful horror of the Iroquois theater in Chicago, where so many hundreds perished in the hurricane of flame and panic, as told by Miss Elizabeth A. Reed in the Chicago Record-Herald shortly after the fearful tragedy, is unique in many ways:

Mrs. Henry Stirling, with her two children, sat in the fateful Iroquois theater on that dreadful afternoon. Little Bob was next to the aisle, then the mother, and Dorothy sat on the other side. Beyond the six-year-old girl there was a vacant seat, but little heed was given to it as the spectacular drama went on and the wondering little folks looked open eyed upon the scenes before them.

At last an uncertain step came down the aisle and a well dressed man lurched into the vacant seat. The curtain was up, but he was an old theater goer, and as the extravaganza was not entirely new to him he turned to the child. Her confiding blue eyes answered his appeal for friendship; there was wonder in the expressive little face, but no fear, even when he ventured to lay a caressing hand upon the golden curls.

Mrs. Stirling shrank from his contaminating touch upon Dorothy's head. He saw or felt her loathing and said brokenly, "Don't you be 'fraid—ish all right—all right—sweetish li'l girl ever I shaw—sweetish li'l girl ever I shaw."

The gay drama went on, the crowd cheered, the children clapped their hands, and their merry laughter mingled with the applause, but the stranger still kept his bleared eyes upon the lovely child. Every few minutes his hand would stray lovingly over the sunny head and some expression of endearment would fall from his uncertain lips. At last Mrs. Stirling called the attention of an usher to the prolonged annoyance, and a remonstrance was made, but the answer came, "You go way—ish all right—all right—sweetish li'l girl ever I shaw—sweetish li'l girl ever I shaw."

Again the big hand touched the golden hair, and this time it strayed downward and took the little hand in loving clasp. The child looked fearlessly into his face and smiled.

The mother grew more and more nervous. Again an usher was called and a complaint made. The slender young man looked at the big fellow and concluded that prudence was the "better part of valor," so he went to consult with another about effective methods of getting the intruder out of the house.

The stranger looked at the stage again; this time he saw a tiny flame rapidly spreading to the scenery. Rising instantly, he took little Dorothy in his arms. Stepping beyond the mother and unheeding her frightened remonstrance, he swung the child upon one shoulder and with the other hand caught up little Bob; then with both of them pressed closely in his strong arms he walked out of the house. The doubly frightened mother involuntarily followed him.

This precious instant was the moment of salvation. Another minute—another half minute—and it would have been too late. They had nearly reached the entrance when a cry of horror rang through the house, followed by screams of terror and shrieks of pain.

Without further volition of their own they were swept into the street. Wholly dazed by the awful shock Mrs. Stirling pleaded, "Put them down—put them down now!"

"No, thash all right. Where do you want to go?"

"Right up this way to the Ashland block," she answered. Then the strange party pushed on through the crowd which was already rushing with helping hands to the scene of the disaster.

Lurching from one side of the walk to the other and apparently in constant danger of falling, he still carried his precious burden safely. Once within the protecting doors of the great Ashland block the elevator carried them to one of the higher floors, where Mrs. Stirling rushed into her husband's office cryng, "Oh, Henry, the theater is burning, and this man has brought the children out!"

Although not half comprehending the horror, the father put his hand in his pocket and drew out a twenty dollar bill, which he offered with profuse thanks. But he and his money were alike ignored. With a majestic sweep of the hand the drunken hero answered, "Go way—I don't want your money—go way—thash all right—thash the sweetish li'l girl ever I shaw—sweetish li'l girl ever I shaw," and then he staggered out of the office.

"Where did he send it, son?"

MEN'S SUITS

The Newest of All.

The more exacting and particular a man may be about exclusiveness in fabrics and patterns, even if he insists on all the advantages he expects from a tailor, then the more these new suits which we are showing for the first time will appeal to him.

He will find in them all the style and satisfaction he would in garments that the best tailors could build to his measure, though they cost a little more than half the tailor's price and the same as he would pay elsewhere for ready-made clothes that would not prove as satisfactory.

Throughout these splendid garments the tailoring will be found to be fault'ess; it is of the highest character known and if anything a little more exacting and thorough than is found on the tailor's best productions. And of more importance than all, they possess that well bred air the tailor's have a knack of giving to the clothes they turn out.

Needless to say, the styles as they are found here are correct, that is expected, or that a perfect fit is assured in every case—we are more particular about that than you could be.

ECHOES OF VICTORIA DAY

WHAT THE KINGSTON PAPERS HAD TO SAY OF OUR LOCAL TOMMIES.

(News and Times.)

The 14th Regiment and the Argyle Light Infantry fired the feu de joie twice in a very creditable manner.

Next came the Argyle Light Infantry under Lt.-Col. Halliwell, while their band played "The Campbells are Coming." Their marching was excellent and they were loudly cheered.

The Belleville soldiers deserve great credit, for at present they are drilling without an Armory. Their old shed has been pulled down and the new one is not yet erected. There is another point which must be considered and that is the 15th. Regiment left Belleville at five o'clock in the morning, that means that they were up at least at four and some at three a.m., so they must have been tired.

The Rev. Geo. R. Beamish, formerly curate of St. George's Cathedral, accompanied the 15th A.L.I. to the city. He will be chaplain of that Regiment soon.

(Whig.)

We congratulate the 15th Regiment on its hair cut. Who's your barber?

The 15th Regiment, of Belleville, last visited Kingston on May 24th, 1897. And it has grown since!

Col. Halliwell has only one man to discipline for wearing long hair. And the gallant Col. can only do that through the church.

The penitentiary guards appeared yesterday for the first time in their new uniforms. Some of them were saluted on the streets by members of the Belleville Regiment who took the guards for officers, so military looking are their garments and caps.

At seven o'clock the 15th, of Belleville, marched to Swift's wharf and boarded the steamer North King, but they did so reluctantly. "Bring those red coats down from the corner!" ordered Lt.-Col. Halliwell, as he espied several Belleville soldiers in converse with as many pieces of sweetness. "Every man must get aboard." And the quartermaster and officers rushed up the street to force the lingering redcoats to the boat. But they had much difficulty in doing so. The men of the 15th hated to leave Kingston. They loved the limestone town and its maidens, and it was only at the point of the bayonet that they were chased down to the boat and made go aboard to return to the sleepy town up the Bay of Quinte.

STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.

MRS. FRANK H. REED, OF THURLOW, A VICTIM OF THE DEADLY FLUID.

A severe thunderstorm passed over a portion of Thurlow township yesterday morning. For half an hour rain fell heavily. During the progress of the storm the residence of Mr. Frank H. Reed was struck by lightning. The end of the building was torn off and considerable damage done to the interior. Fire started but was extinguished. Mrs. Reed was near where the bolt descended and received its full force. She was rendered unconscious, in which condition she was this morning and it is feared that fatal results will follow.

AN INDIAN MISSION.

INTERESTING ADDRESS BY MRS. (BISHOP) HOFFMAN IN EMMANUEL CHURCH LAST NIGHT.

There was, considering the murky and threatening weather, a fair audience in Emmanuel R. E. Church last night, when Mrs. (Bishop) Hoffman gave her address on the Indian missions of the Reformed Episcopal Church. Sixty views were shown, some of them picturing scenes in Bombay, but the views were mostly in connection with the Lalitpur mission of the R. E. Church, where 180 children are supported by the voluntary contributions of members of the church in the U. S. and Canada. It costs $30 per year to "adopt" a child, and have it fed, cared for, educated and Christianized. The child, of course, stays at the mission in India, but adopts any name which its benefactor in this country wishes to give it. Mrs. Hoffman gave a highly interesting address in relation to the Indian mission, showing pictures of the children, most of whom now plump and healthy looking, were in the last stages of want and destitution when received, owing to the periodical famines which devastate India. Pictures of the mission buildings were shown, and, what was of deep interest to many in the audience, the picture of a Hindoo girl, now being supported by a class in Emmanuel Church, Belleville, Sunday school, who rejoices in the name of "Miss Jessie Newbery." The lecture was listened to with deep attention, and the result should be an added interest in Indian missions among those who heard it. Rev. Mr. Gilliland was chairman, and Bishop Hoffman also gave a short address.

A VISIT TO THE ST. LOUIS EXPOSITION

The Canadian Exhibit Especially Fine—To See it is a Liberal Education.

Japs Have Most Complete Exhibit —Thousands of Newspaper Men There.

That the St. Louis Exposition will be what its promoters claim—the most complete exhibition ever held in America, if not in the world—there seems no doubt. A party of Canadian newspaper men and their wives have just returned from a trip to the great Fair. They spent five days at St. Louis and a day in Chicago. The train which conveyed the party was provided by the Grand Trunk Railway and the journey was to many a revelation of what luxury, speed and convenience can do to make modern travelling attractive. People in this vicinity who propose to visit St. Louis this summer can make no mistake in travelling by the Grand Trunk, The officials of that road were courtesy personified, and the pressmen and women will never forget the untiring efforts put forth in their behalf by Mr. H. D. Charlton, assistant general passenger agent of the G.T.R. and Mr. J. D. McDonald, district passenger agent. Both gentlemen were presented with handsome gifts by the visiting newspaper men, As to the route, it was voted by everybody a most interesting and satisfactory one. The excellent train connections and service which the Grand Trunk has established with St. Louis by way of the Illinois Central Railroad could not be improved upon and is worthy the patronage of all Canadians. The run from Toronto to St. Louis takes 22 hours, and the trip is interesting to the last degree.

At the Exposition the managers could not do enough for the Canadian visitors, and they were fairly surfeited with sight-seeing. The St. Lou's Exposition is an enormous affair. Money has been spent like water. It is wonderful, marvellous, dazzling. The electrical illuminations at night make one feel like Mahomet did, when he gazed on the lights of Ephesus. As to the exhibits, it would take a month to see everything. And of all the exhibits, that of our friends the Japs is the most complete. And what of Canada? Well, Canada is not far from the top. The praises of her exhibit were in everybody's mouth. The Dominion trophy in the Agricultural building, showing the wonderful agricultural capabilities of this great country, is exceptionally fine. Every class of product is shown, and the specimens proclaim the marvellous productiveness of our soil and the scientific knowledge of our farmers. In horticulture we are surpassed only by California, where, of course, the tropical fruits lend novelty to the exhibit. In the department of mineralogy there is no display superior to that of Canada. Every branch of Canadian mining enterprise is thoroughly represented. Our lumber resources are also well illustrated in the Forestry and Game building. Here the Intercolonial Railway makes an exhibit, emphasizing the resources of the Maritime Provinces. Here too, the Grand Trunk has a handsome pavilion in Doric and Corinthian style, directing the visitor to the wonders of Muskoka, and to the fishing and hunting grounds there and elsewhere in Canada. The Canadian exhibit is in charge of Commissioner Hutchinson, who is provided with a Canadian building, which, although not so imposing as those of some of the States of the Union, or of some European countries, is nevertheless ornate and capacious, and is bound to be a centre for Canadian visitors. Altogether Canada shows up well at the fair.

The press party were entertained at an "At Home" given by Mr. Hutchinson at the Canadian building. Here the party was addressed by Sir Hugh Gilzean-Reid, the representative of Great Britain at the Press Parliament, which opened on Thursday, and Mr. John A. Cooper, Mr. Joseph Downey, M.P.P., and Mr. Hugh Clark, M.P.P. The trip concluded with a visit to Chicago, where the Canadian press was entertained on Friday evening by the Canadian journalists of that city.

WHAT IS CATARRH?

It is an inflammation of the mucous lining of the throat, bronchial tubes and nasal passages, excited by germs that can only be destroyed by fragrant, healing Catarrhozone, which is breathed direct to the seat of the disease, and has never yet failed to cure. Pleasant to use, absolutely certain to cure. Catarrhozone always gives satisfaction. "I suffered from nasal catarrh so badly that I couldn't breathe through my nostrils," writes G. K. Wilmot, of Meriden. "I used Catarrhozone for a few minutes and was relieved. It cured in a short time." No other remedy just like Catarrhozone —it's the best. Two months' treatment $1.00; trial size 25c.

A new serial story, "The Mystery of Agatha Webb," will begin in The Intelligencer in a few days. It is written by Mrs. Anna Katharine Green, author of "The Leavenworth Case," and is sure to be popular.

A BAPTIST LECTURE.

REV. C. J. CAMERON'S ILLUSTRATED ADDRESS ON McMASTER UNIVERSITY AND NEW ONTARIO.

Rev. C. J. Cameron, Field Secretary of McMaster University, last evening gave an illustrated address in the Baptist Church here. The attendance was not what it should have been, considering the importance of the subject. The lecture was ably presented by the Rev. gentleman, and the views were exceptionally fine.

Rev. O. C. Elliott, pastor, was chairman and conducted devotional exercises. Mr. Cameron at first gave various views of McMaster University, showing the buildings and grounds, the teaching staff, class rooms, graduating classes, etc. These were minutely explained by the lecturer. The college at Woodstock was also shown and a special feature, namely, manual training, was especially dwelt upon and thoroughly explained. Mr. Cameron said that manual training was essential to a thorough college course, as fitting the students for their work in life. The latter portion of the address and views was devoted to New Ontario. Farm houses in this part of the province were shown, situated in the Rainy River and Temiscamingue districts. In closing the lecturer impressed upon all the necessity there was of having Baptist boys and girls attend some college which was in connection with the church.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

FINE SHOW—POOR HOUSE.

Perhaps it was the warm weather which kept people away from the opera house last night, when the laughable comedy, "Are You a Mason?" was put on. Whatever the reason was those who stayed away missed one of the most enjoyable performances of the season. The woes of the man who tried to persuade his wife that he was a Mason, when he was not, caused the audience to laugh consumedly. It was a great show—for people who love to laugh The cast was excellent, the principals being very capable actors and actresses, indeed.

"REUBEN IN NEW YORK."

"Reuben in New York," an up-to-date musical farce, written by John Curran, will be the attraction at the Carman Opera House on Monday, May 30. Unlike most farces, "Reuben in New York" contains a consistent plot, and the story told is a clean and wholesome one. An unusually strong cast has been engaged to interpret the various characters. Among its members are William Kellar Mack, George H. Adams, Joseph Kearney, James Grant, George Pearce, Charlotte Wade, Josephine Newman, Vesta Stanton and Dora Lynne.

Many Want Gas.

The manager of the Gas Works informs us that requests for new gas services for domestic purposes are coming in all the time, and the city is doing its best to satisfy them. In a day or two mains will be laid on Henry and Murney Sts., residents of which thoroughfares are anxious to have gas for cooking. The question, "Should the city handle gas stoves?" still continues to be a much discussed one.

MRS. CONLEY'S CASE

WAS ON TRIAL BEFORE JUDGE LAZIER YESTERDAY AND TO-DAY.

Mrs. Nancy Conley, who resides in the northern portion of the county, near Bancroft, was yesterday on trial before Judge Lazier on the charge of concealing the birth of a child. From the evidence it would appear that the child belonged to a woman who was confined at Mrs. Conley's place. The little one died the day following, and it is alleged that the body was buried in a field near the house, and no notice of its birth or death was ever recorded. The affair occurred over a year ago and it is said leaked out through the husband, who is not on good terms with his wife. He in turn has been charged by Mrs. Conley with being an accomplice. The evidence was taken and argument was heard this morning. Mr. Anderson represented the Crown and Mr. A. A. McDonald the accused.

After argument had been concluded His Honor reserved judgment until Saturday next.

McINTOSH BROS.

PROMISES GENERAL ACT

G.T.P. Not to Be Singled Out Regarding Alien Labor.

Sir William Mulock Proposes to Protect Canadian Laborers on All Railways in the Dominion From Foreigners—Mr. Clare's Amendment to G.T.P. Bill Prohibiting Employment of Alien Labor on That Road Voted Down.

Ottawa, May 26.—An amendment proposed by George Clare of South Waterloo, prohibiting the employment of alien labor on the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway was the subject of a long discussion in the House yesterday. The Government took the position that it would be unfair to deprive the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway of the right to employ aliens while other Canadian railways remained in the enjoyment of that privilege. The proper solution of the problem of protection of Canadian labor against foreign competition was, Sir William Mulock declared, a general act that would be equally restrictive on all the railways in the country. Such an act, he promised, would be passed at the present session of Parliament.

Another important announcement made by the Postmaster-General was that Judge Winchester of Toronto, has been appointed a commissioner to enquire into the employment of aliens on the Grand Trunk Pacific Railways.

Henry Bourassa, who took part in the discussion, again displayed his ungovernable anti-British tendencies. He took violent exception to that portion of the amendment which excluded all but British subjects from employment on the Transcontinental road. He could not see why British labor should secure more generous treatment than United States labor. If, he said, the object of the amendment was to protect the Canadian workingman against outside competition, Canadians, and Canadians only, should be employed on the work.

Mr. Clare's amendment was finally voted down an a vote of 86 to 50. A. W. Puttee, the labor member for Winnipeg, supporting the Opposition.

Branch Lines Expropriations.

Mr. Lennox moved an amendment, providing that, on six months' notice, the Government may expropriate the whole undertaking, branch lines, terminals, rolling stock and equipment, at a price to be fixed by arbitration. The amendment further provides that no allowance is to be made for good-will or on account of the sale being compulsory, and the compensation allowed is not to exceed the actual cost to the G.T.P.R. Co. in addition to 10 per cent. of that amount.

Jabel Robinson said the amendment was much along the line of the amendment of which he gave notice the other day. He would, therefore, withdraw his amendment. Mr. Robinson advocated State ownership of railways. Public ownership of railways had been called State socialism. He ridiculed this contention, and showed to what advantage the public administers various important utilities.

Sir Wilfrid Heard.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier mildly criticized the amendment. He pointed out that the Government already possessed the power to expropriate the railways, the telegraph and the telephone systems. The Opposition, he said, urged on by certain agitators, was gradually taking up the principle that these utilities should be expropriated, but the Liberal party was not in favor of such a policy, which involved a breach of faith with vested interests.

The amendment was declared lost.

Mr. Bennett moved an amendment, providing that the Government might expropriate the G.T.P. Railway under certain contingencies.

(1) If satisfied that the company was not carrying out its covenants and agreements.

(2) If traffic is not being routed by Canadian channels and Canadian ports.

This amendment was also lost.

Canada Temperance Act.

Mr. Law, member for Yarmouth, introduced a bill to amend the Canada Temperance Act. The amendment deals with penalties for violation of the Scott Act and gives magistrates the right to imprison convicted persons with or without hard labor. Under the present law a magistrate has no power to imprison with hard labor.

C.P.R. Stock and Bonds.

Replying to James J. Hughes of King's, P.E.I., the Minister of Railways stated that the amount of stock, ordinary and preferred, issued by the Canadian Pacific Railway is $117,000,000. The bond issue of the C.P.R. was $120,000,000.

I.C.R. Dismissals.

Mr. Smith asked a number of questions concerning the dismissal of Fabrian Leger and F. B. Wood from the employ of the I.C.R. at Moncton. The Minister of Railways gave a general answer to the effect that the services of the two men were not deemed to be in the interests of the railway. An investigation was not considered necessary. The Trades and Labor Council of Moncton had asked for an investigation, but their request was refused on the ground that constant investigation would be the result of the establishment of such a precedent.

The House adjourned at 1 a.m.

Tried Suicide But Failed.

London, May 26.—Tuesday a young man named Tait, son of an East Nissouri farmer named Wm. Tait, attempted to commit suicide by hanging himself in a barn. He was discovered and cut down before life was extinct, but the physicians give slight hopes for his recovery. The young man had suffered lately from melancholia, the result of illness.

Urges Protest.

London, May 26.—(C. A. P.)—The Rev. Dr. Laurence, lecturer on international law at the Royal Naval College, Greenwich, reading a paper on the Russo-Japanese war, expressed the hope that the British Government had entered a strong protest against Russia having placed rice and provisions on the contraband list. It was a matter of life and death to Britain to prevent the food of the civilian population being made undoubtedly contraband, and if arguments proved unavailing, force must be used.

Acknowledged.

London, May 26.—(C. A. P.)—The King has sent a message of thanks to the Empire League for its kind and loyal congratulations.

Chinese in South Africa.

Ottawa, May 26.—The Department of Trade and Commerce, having asked J. G. Jardine, at Cape Town, to report on the anti-Chinese legislation enacted in South Africa, Mr. Jardine reports as follows:

"Cape Colony for few years allowed the Chinese to enter by depositing $500 each, but under a recent act of the Jameson Government they are altogether debarred.

"In the Transvaal they are allowed to come in under indenture and for work in the mines only. Natal debars the Chinese, but allows 30,000 Indian coolies to enter under indenture."

Against the Embargo.

London, May 26.—The Co-operative conference meeting at Stratford, Essex, passed a resolution in favor of the removal of the restriction on the importation of live Canadian cattle and regretting the avowed intention of the Board of Agriculture of maintaining the restriction in order to protect British breeders against foreign supplies at the expense of the consumer. Chairman Maxwell of the Scottish Wholesale Society declared that the embargo was the first instalment of the Chamberlain policy.

FOUND STOLEN MONEY.

Claims Reward and Refuses to Give Up Stolen Money Till Paid.

Brockville, May 26.—A case of great interest was tried here yesterday before Justice McMahon. The Union Bank of Canada seeks to recover $1,075 from John Sheridan, a carter, of this town, which the latter found near the river last June. In May last the Union Bank sent a parcel containing $5,000 from Montreal by registered mail to their branch at Smith's Falls. This parcel disappeared in the transfer at Brockville. Detectives spent several weeks investigating the case, but without being able to obtain any trace of the $5,000 or of the identity of the thief.

About seven weeks after the money disappeared John Sheridan found a bundle of bank bills while working near the river. The bundle was found to contain $1,075, and Sheridan deposited it in the bank and advertised for an owner. The Union Bank ultimately claimed the money, but Sheridan refused to deliver it until they had proven the ownership. The evidence of several bank and mail service employes was taken yesterday. Justice McMahon reserved judgment, but it is expected that a decision will be given to-day.

His Lordship expressed the opinion that circumstantial evidence indicated that the $1,075 was part of the missing $5,000. Mr. Hellmuth of Toronto for the bank, and Mr. Stewart of Brockville for Mr. Sheridan.

STEAMSHIPS TO MEXICO.

Dominion Government Calls For Tenders, Giving Requirements.

Ottawa, May 26.—The Department of Trade and Commerce is issuing a call for tenders for monthly steamship services between Canada and Mexico for a period of five years.

The Atlantic service will be between Montreal in the summer and Halifax in the winter, and the Mexican ports of Progreso, Coatzacoalcoas, Vera Cruz and Tampico, touching at Nassau, the Bahamas and Havana, Cuba.

The Pacific service will be between Vancouver, B. C., and the Mexican ports of Mazatlan, San Blas, Manzanillo, Acapulco, Puerto Angel, Salina Cruz, Tonala and San Benito. Tenders may be made for either or both services.

The vessels employed are to class A1, to run under the British flag, to have a carrying capacity of not less than 3,000 tons, with adequate passenger accommodation, to maintain between ports a minimum speed of ten knots per hour.

The Mexican Government have expressed their willingness to give a subsidy of $100,000 in Mexican currency for the Pacific service, and $20,000 for the Atlantic service. The Dominion Government will supplement this sum by such subsidy as they may deem expedient. The Mexican Government provides for the free carriage of their mail and freight up to ten tons.

THE JAPANESE TROOPS HAVE CAPTURED KINCHOU.

Let No Grass Grow Under Their Feet and Now Attacking Dalny.

Thirty Thousand Japs Surprise on Monday 15,000 Russians in the Tatung Pass, and the Russian Casualties Were Over 4,000 and 1,000 Russians Surrendered—St. Petersburg Has No Official Confirmation of Capture of Kinchou.

London, May 27.—The Shanhaikwan correspondent of The Daily Chronicle sends a report received from Newchwang that, on May 23, thinking that the Japanese had retired from Fengwangcheng, 15,000 Russians from Maicheng and Liaoyang marched toward Fengwangcheng. They were surprised by 30,000 Japanese in the Tatung Pass. The Russian casualties were 4,000, and over 1,000 Russians surrendered. The report does not state the Japanese losses.

Kinchou Stormed and Captured.

London, May 27.—A despatch to the Central News from Tokio yesterday says the Japanese have stormed and captured the town of Kinchou (about 32 miles north of Port Arthur).

The Morning Post's Tokio correspondent says the Japanese occupied Kinchou Thursday afternoon and are advancing to attack the Russians occupying the heights south of the town.

The Standard's Tokio correspondent cabled last night: "It is reported that the Japanese have occupied Kinchou. Official confirmation of the rumor is expected hourly."

In an earlier message, the Tokio correspondent of the Central News cabled that Japanese spies had ascertained that the Russians had thirty guns at Kinchou, and numerous mines and wire entanglements at all the points where a Japanese attack was expected.

After the occupation of Kinchou, the Russians retired in good order to the heights farther south, which were attacked by the full Japanese force and carried after a stubborn resistance.

Now Attacking Dalny.

The Tokio correspondent of The Daily Telegraph says it is reported unofficially that the Japanese are now attacking Dalny.

The Tokio correspondent of The Daily Mail, under date of May 26, says: "According to a reliable report the Japanese occupied Kinchou to-day."

Casualties Heavy.

The correspondent of The Central News at Tokio cables that the Japanese attacked Nanqwanling on the narrowest part of the Kwantung Peninsula, Wednesday, and drove back the Russians by main force. The attack on Kinchou, the despatch adds, was begun at dawn yesterday, and by noon Kinchou was in the hands of the Japanese, who occupied the castle. The fighting continued during the afternoon, and was of the most desperate character. It is believed the casualties were heavy.

By Frontal Attack.

St. Petersburg, May 27.—The general staff was not in a position last night to confirm or deny the Tokio report that the Japanese have occupied Kinchou. The latest official information regarding fighting in that vicinity was conveyed in Gen. Kuropatkin's telegram, which said that the Japanese had lost 700 men on May 18. The opinion of the best authorities is that if the Japanese rushed Kinchou by a frontal attack, unsupported by heavy guns, which is not believed they possessed, the capture of the place must have been effected at a tremendous loss to the attackers.

Fought For 8 Days.

London, May 27.—The Tokio correspondent of The Daily Chronicle, under date of May 27, says: "The Japanese have constructed 30 miles of light railway for the transportation of siege guns towards Port Arthur. Around Kinchou they have been fighting for eight days, but are making little progress. The Russians occupy strong positions on the heights."

Japs Routed Cavalry.

Tokio, May 27.—Gen. Kuroki reports that, on Wednesday, after the battle of Topu, the enemy's cavalry took up a position at Pataosti. The Japanese thereupon attacked and routed them. Natives report that three of the enemy were killed and eighteen wounded. During the afternoon a Japanese patrol captured one officer and one private.

Bombarded May 24.

St. Petersburg, May 27.—Viceroy Alexieff telegraphes that a report is current that Port Arthur was bombarded on May 24, but says he has not received any official confirmation of the rumor.

Within Ten Miles of Port Arthur.

Che Foo, May 27.—There is a rumor current here among the Chinese that the Japanese are now within ten miles of Port Arthur.

Battle on May 22.

Che Foo, May 27.—A junk, which left Dalny on the night of May 23, and which arrived here yesterday, reports that the Japanese army had reached Sansuripo, which is north of Dalny and southwest of Nangalien. The Russians offered a stubborn resistance to the advance of the Japanese, and a battle was fought at noon on May 22 at Sansuripo.

Sandbagged and Robbed.

Hamilton, May 27.—Thomas Duncan, a street car conductor, was found lying unconscious on East Barten street about 3 o'clock yesterday morning. He says two men sandbagged and robbed him about 11 o'clock Wednesday night. He was left lying on the street for several hours. His watch and chain were not taken, but he was relieved of $10.

POLITICS IN SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

A correspondent signing himself "Methodist" writes as follows:

"Mr. Editor,—Please find enclosed a clipping from a religious weekly Sunday School paper called "Onward," published specially for the Methodist Sunday schools in the Dominion.

Prior to the two last Dominion elections, similar laudatory articles, I believe, appeared in the same paper, and I now consider their appearance synonymous with a general election. Is it right?"

Here is the clipping:

"ONWARD, CANADA."

By Sir William Mulock.

"The people of Canada have, I think, every reason to congratulate themselves on the progress and prosperity which have blessed our country during the year now closed, and the more have we reason to be thankful because our progress and prosperity are not limited to the present year, but are only developments of similar conditions which have prevailed in the past five years. It is equally satisfactory to feel that our growth rests on the surest of all foundations, great natural resources and an industrial and enterprising people now rapidly increasing, all devoting their energies to the task of nation building. One convincing proof of our progress is furnished by the fact that, whilst many of the greatest commercial nations, as, for example, the United States, Great Britain, Germany, France, etc., are now suffering from commercial depression, which prevails more or less throughout the world, Canada is passing through the storm, not only wholly undisturbed by it, but also keeping on her onward march and progress. The preferential tariff campaign now being fought in the United Kingdom and resulting from Canada's preferential tariff policy, also testifies to the growing importance of Canada in her relations with the outside world. If Canada progresses for the next twenty-five years at the same rate as she did during the last five years, we are warranted, I think, in the belief that she will then be regarded as a first-class power. Whilst no other six millions of people have as large problems to grapple with as Canada has to-day, still she is equal to the occasion. Our oceans of prairie land and the great mineral and forest wealth, together with the great immigration to our shores, demand without delay efficient transportation facilities, such, for example, as the G.T.P. scheme and the improvement of our waterways. Canada, I think, cannot more wisely expend money than in such methods of development. If the "Onward, Canada" had been inaugurated at Confederation, we should to-day have had a population of at least 25,000,000 people, and would not have had to bewail the loss of Alaskan territory. We must endeavor to make up for lost time, and can, for the undeveloped Canada is a young giant."

The idea of using Sunday school papers for political purposes may find favor with some Sunday school workers, but we don't think it will with all of them. The article by Sir William Mulock is, perhaps, all right in principle, but what of the mendacious statements it contains? "The preferential tariff campaign now being fought in the United Kingdom, and RESULTING FROM CANADA'S PREFERENTIAL TARIFF POLICY." There's a sentence in which we fail to find truth, and we doubt if anybody else will find truth in it, either. Sir William knew when he wrote that sentence that his chief, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, told the people of England that Canada did not want any preference in the English markets for her products. Why, then, did "I, William," lie to the Sunday school children? There are other statements, equally unreliable and misleading. These statements, of course, would be bad enough in a secular paper, edited by an ordinary Philistine, but "Onward," we are told, furnishes the pabulum for many youthful Sunday school scholars. Does the editor of "Onward" think it right to place before them statements which are untrue, even though they be written by that great man, Sir William Munchausen? He would not unless he is a second edition of the stretcher of the Post Office Department.

We pause for a reply.

TIMELY TOPICS.

In the matter of weather, Miss May is as fickle as she is fair.

Where is no truth in the report that lightning hit the footbridge last night.

Anyhow, it couldn't make it much more shaky.

A week from to-morrow will be circus day, and already the man on the next block has begun to evince great interest in natural history. He's going to take little Willie to see the animals, because it's so nice to see the little folks enjoy themselves, you know.

Heigho! What a lot of 18-karat old humbugs some of us men and women are!

Press despatch: "Heavy firing has been heard at Port Arthur."

Did it ever occur to you my friend
That there's something lacking still?
The summer's here but we sadly miss
The old familiar thrill
Which permeated our systems when
The story we were told
Of the corking lacrosse team we would have
Just as in days of old?
Oh! where's the man who used to say
We'd water get from Zwick's?
And where's the man who said the rails
On Front street we would fix?
They've left us and have sailed away
To the seat of war where brave and gay
They're listening to the firing at Port Arthur.

And where's the fellow who prophecied
A brand new depot here?
And the chap who said the tax rate would Go surely down this year?
And where's the man who said that Ross
Would throw up the sponge in May?
And the man who said that on Kingston's streets
They would cease cutting hay?
They've left us and have sailed away
To the seat of war where brave and gay
They're listening to the firing at Port Arthur.

And the man who said that Laurier
Would an angel make of Tarte
And the fellow who told us we would see
The rolling mills soon start?
And the fellow who said we'd welcome home
The dear old boys this year?
And the man who said the Gas by-law
Would be knocked out, well, we fear
They've left us and have sailed away
To the seat of war where brave and gay
They're listening to the firing at Port Arthur.

A HINT TO THE LADIES.

(Hamilton Times.)

Rochester women want the curfew bell. Perhaps if Rochester women spent less time in clubs and society frivolities, they would not need to call in the aid of the police authorities in the training of their children.

• • •

The following, from the Kingston News and Times points a moral which might well be taken to heart by Belleville people:

"The success which attended the Victoria Day celebration in this city shows what can be done when even a few citizens join in pushing an enterprise. It is safe to say that of the ten thousand visitors on the 24th each left in the city one dollar, thus making an aggregate of $10,000."

What is done in other places could just as well be done in Belleville.

• • •

It is probable that, on May 24th, fully 2,000 people left this city to celebrate the day elsewhere. They spent at least $2 per head. Which is best, $4,000 of Belleville money spent outside the city, or double that amount of other people's money spent here?

• • •

The proposed Dominion Day celebration, of course, was "put out of business" by the circus, but another holiday — Labor Day — is coming in September. Why not make the most of that?

• • •

A wireless special from Mr. William Johnson tells us that he is about to start for Canada and will soon be rocked in the cradle of the deep once more. He expects to reach Belleville about June 8th, and hopes the Maltose kittens will prove satisfactory.

• • •

There hasn't been a rumor of a Japanese defeat for a whole day now. What's the matter?

• • •

The Czar is only 36 years old. Young enough to see lots of trouble yet, if the Nihilists don't get him.

• • •

It is said that the effect of intoxicating drinks is such as to make a Frenchman want to dance, a German to sing, a Spaniard to gamble, an Englishman to eat, an Italian to boast, an Irishman to fight and a Yankee to make a speech.

• • •

John D. Rockefeller, the oil man, has an annual income of $36,000,000. John needn't care whether they strike oil at Melrose or not.

Occasionally the "ragged" turns the tables upon the "raggers." Thus at Christchurch a certain member of the college was adjudged too fond of dress, and it was decided to correct his weakness by dropping him bodily into Mercury, the fountain in Tom Quad.

The victim was seized one night when attired in evening dress and promptly immersed. To the surprise of his assailants, he made no resistance, but seemed to thoroughly enjoy his al fresco bath.

"This won't improve your clothes, old man," quoth their leader.

"Oh, these aren't mine," he replied, mildly. "I heard what was on, so I slipped in and borrowed your dress things for the occasion."

One of the smart set. This is the tale of Mrs. Le Roy Jones, of the City of Boston, Mass., whom a writer in the Boston American describes as "the wife of a man whose family is one of the most aristocratic in America." On Monday Mrs. Jones visited the race track with her husband and another man. While the two men were in the betting ring, Mrs. Jones disappeared and has not been seen since. Her record includes the following radical changes of conditions:

Married at 21.
Divorced at 23.
Married at 23 (two days later).

The Quebec Ministers are trying to rival their Ontario brethren in legislating contested elections out of courts. The election of the Treasurer of Quebec is not only protested for bribery, but his disqualification is demanded. To frighten the contestants the Government has introduced a Bill holding the parties demanding the Treasurer's disqualification responsible in damages if they fail to establish the charge. Is there anything Rouge-Grits will not do to keep themselves in power?

The Montreal Star and Toronto Telegram are discussing the important question as to how far a member of Parliament should be permitted to go in debate in vilifying and slangwhanging an opponent. The Telegram contends that if the present privileges were stopped no member of Parliament would "dare "to breathe a word against the "forces which rob the country and "debauch its politics." "Nonsense," retorts the Star, "What we object to is the shielding by Parliamentary privilege of obvious and deliberate liars. Such a privilege tends to develop liars; and anybody who can read Hansard and say that he has not arrived at this conclusion, does not need any developing in that direction." The Star is right.

Preachers puzzle themselves and their congregations by trying to discover and explain the reasons why men don't go to church. Now, there's no mystery whatever about that matter. The men don't go to church simply because they don't believe in the necessity for going. How to get men to go to church? Let there be a revival of true and genuine religious faith.

THE INTELLIGENCER is printed and published for The Intelligencer Printing and Publishing House (Limited) by CHARLES JAMES BOWELL, of the City of Belleville, in the County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, at their Office, No. 403, Front Street, Belleville, Ont.

Nothing so suddenly obstructs the perspiration as sudden transitions from heat to cold. Heat rarifies the blood, quickens the circulation and increases the perspiration, but when these are suddenly checked the consequences must be bad. The most common cause of disease is obstructed perspiration, or what commonly goes by the name of catching cold. Coughs, colds, sore throat, etc., if attended to in time are easily subdued, but if allowed to run their own course, generally prove the fore-runner of more dangerous diseases. Nine-tenths of the consumptives date their affliction from a NEGLECTED COLD, and the diseases that are caused by wet feet, damp clothes, or exposure are more numerous than are generally supposed. One of the most efficacious medicines for all diseases of the throat and lungs is Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It promotes a free and easy expectoration, which frees the lungs from viscid phlegm by changing the secretions from a diseased to a healthy state.

Only 900 people in 1,000,000 die of old age.

Dr. J. D. Kellog's Dysentery Cordial is a speedy cure for dysentery, diarrhoea, cholera, summer complaint, sea sickness and complaints incidental to children teething. It gives immediate relief to those suffering from the effects of indiscretion in eating unripe fruit, cucumbers, etc. It acts with wonderful rapidity and never fails to conquer the disease. No one need fear cholera if they have a bottle of this medicine convenient.

Few men realize what large dividends they can draw on kindness.

How to Cleanse the System.—Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are the result of scientific study of the effects of extracts of certain roots and herbs upon the digestive organs. Their use has demonstrated in many instances that they regulate the action of the liver and kidneys, purify the blood, and carry off all morbid accumulations from the system. They are easy to take, and their action is mild and beneficial.

Cut the trunk, the branches fall of themselves.

Always on Hand.—Mr. Thomas H. Porter, Lower Ireland, P.Q., writes: "My son, 18 months old, had croup so bad that nothing gave him relief until a neighbor brought me some of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, which I gave him, and in six hours he was cured. It is the best medicine I ever used, and I would not be without a bottle of it in my house."

A tailor made woman is one of the noblest works of man.

Messrs. Northrop & Lyman Co. are the proprietors of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, which is now being sold in immense quantities throughout the Dominion. It is welcomed by the suffering invalid everywhere with emotions of delight, because it banishes pain and gives instant relief. This valuable specific for almost "every ill that flesh is heir to," is valued by the sufferer as more precious than gold. It is the elixir of life to many a wasted frame. To the farmer it is indispensable, and it should be in every house.

A self made man has his private opinion as to what is the noblest work of God.

Give Holloway's Corn Cure a trial. It removed ten corns from one pair of feet without any pain. What it has done once it will do again.

Look out for the man with an imagination strong enough to draw a dollar out of your pocket.

A Wonderful Cure. — Mr. David Smith, Coe Hill, Ont., writes: "For the benefit of others I wish to say a few words about Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery. About a year ago I took a very severe cough, had a virulent sore on my lips, was bad with dyspepsia, constipation and general debility. I tried almost every conceivable remedy, outwardly and inwardly, to cure the sore, but all to no purpose. I had often thought of trying Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, so I got a bottle, and when I had used about one half the sore showed evident signs of healing. By the time that bottle was done it had about disappeared and my general health was improving fast. I was always of a very bilious habit and had used quinine and lemon juice with very little effect. But since using three bottles of the Vegetable Discovery the biliousness is entirely gone and my general health is excellent. I am 66 years old. Parties using it should continue it for some time after they think they are cured. It is by far the best health restorer I know."

The truthfulness of what a man says doesn't always depend on the amount of noise he makes in saying it.

It does not seem as though there were as many as thirty-one days in any month, the way rent day rolls around.

Some second thoughts occur several minutes later.

The Beautiful House

The woodwork of your house, the furniture, the lacquered, japanned and enameled iron work, may be new, but if you will use "Liquid Veneer" it will become sparkling in brilliancy and attractive as a diamond. And if the same is faded, scratched, or if the varnish has gone the way of all flesh, "Liquid Veneer" will resurrect the whole scheme. It will take that half sick furniture and put a new face on it that is as brilliant as the sun. It is not a "furniture polish," it is not sticky, never catches the dust; it is easily applied in a few minutes with a cloth, no rubbing is necessary. It is a cleaner, disinfectant, then imparts a most bright and finished surface. Try a sample bottle only 5c, 1-2 pint bottle 50c. For sale only by,

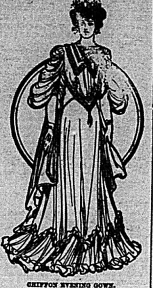
EVENING FASHIONS.

Louis XVI. Effects—Pointed Girdles and Flowered Silks.

The return of the old fashioned brocades and the tiny wreath of roses on hats point to the Pompadour influence. These small roses have been worn in the hair for some time past as well as on debutantes' ball gowns. Little straw roses have been a feature of some of the new flat hats recently imported from Paris.

There is a decided Louis XVI. appearance to many of the ball gowns made of beautifully flowered silks and brocades. The pointed corsage effect appears as well in many reception gowns showing the velvet coat effect. The vest and revers to go with this effect are handsomely embroidered, and the neck is finished with an old lace jabot.

The pointed waistbands now so much in vogue are as hard to make as a bodice; they have to be so beautifully draped and fitted.



CHIFFON EVENING GOWN.

For chiffon frocks ivory gray and pale bronze are favorite colors, and a good deal of gold and silver embroidery is used.

Taffetas this spring will be softened by the addition of lace or embroidered lawns, which are in keeping with the period when taffeta was first introduced.

The picture shows an evening dress of chiffon trimmed with bands of silver embroidery and worn with a wreath of silver in the hair.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

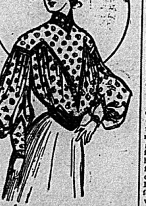
SPRING FASHIONS.

The Wide Belt—Picturesque Effects In Flowered Silks.

All shades of pink are popular for evening wear, especially Rose du Barry, an exquisite pastel shade. Taffeta frocks are being made of this shade of pink beautifully embroidered and trimmed with a Marie Antoinette fichu and pointed bodice.

The distinguishing features of the new costumes are the full skirt and the wide belts. Soft bodices are made so full that they seem to be held in place by the deep Marie Antoinette corsage. This is pretty and graceful for evening wear. With bodices of this description some kind of a draped or elbow sleeve with a wide frill is the proper thing.

Elbow sleeves are rapidly coming in again. This was always a pretty style and suitable for semidressy occasions.



AN ORIGINAL WAIST.

Some of the new dresses have sleeves simply composed of a skillfully draped puff ending in a frill of lace.

Taffeta is certainly both smart and popular just now. It is often a good plan to have silk chiffon and mull gowns made with a guimpe arrangement, which can be removed so that the gown may either be worn decollete or not, as one chooses. This has almost become a necessity for the woman with a small income now that so many dainty gowns are being worn at restaurants, just as they are at private houses, with the exception that they must be high necked.

White muslin both in plain and in fancy makes will be very much worn this summer, and so will dainty flowered effects, particularly those of the Pompadour period.

The illustration shows a flowered silk waist made with a long shouldered V shaped yoke and a wide belt of panne.

LIEUTENANT AT A LEVEE.

Young Military Debutantee's First Bow to the King—Might Have Saved His Trepidation.

Just as a young debutante looks forward to her first drawing-room with feelings as much of nervous trepidation as of delight, so a young officer or lawyer fights more shy of his first levee than of facing an enemy in the field or conducting his first case in court, although naturally he feels proud of the prospect of coming individually under the eyes of his King.

I am not ashamed to confess that when some time ago, in all the glory of the full-dress uniform of a lieutenant of Yeomanry, I made my way on foot to St. James's Palace to be presented to His Majesty as one of his gallant soldiers, it was with a little internal quaking and an external trembling of the knees, which rather belied my brave appearance. I was just in time, as I neared the Palace, to see the King's equipage, with its escort of Life Guardsmen making a gallant show with their glistening helmets and nodding plumes, dash up through a roar of welcoming shouts from the crowds of curious sightseers, and to feel proudly that I, too, was a part, however insignificant, of the "show."

Ran Gauntlet of Crowds.

My own reception by the crowd, however, was not quite so cordial as that of the King, although one critic did exclaim, 'I say, Bill, don't 'e think 'e's a torf!' which, after all, was rather a dubious kind of a compliment. But a soldier of the King can afford to be criticised, I thought as, with the air of a field marshal, I ran the gauntlet of the crowds and at last found myself safely landed within the palace walls.

And what a startling transformation it was from the dinginess of the world outside to the blaze of color and life and animation in which I found myself within the palace. Here were hundreds of men stretching away in a long vista as far as the eye could see, a river of moving colors as variegated as those of Joseph's coat and probably far more picturesque. They were men of all types and ages—a few generals, erect and still imposing in scarlet tunics, cocked hats, and plumes—men apparently old enough to have fought at Balaclava and Inkerman, and still ready if need be to take the field again; and rubbing shoulders with these grizzled veterans were dapper young subalterns of Guards as gaily attired as so many popinjays, and no doubt full of dreams of the day when they too, should wear a general's badge. Here are aides-de-camp in their richly embroidered tunics, gold aigrettes, plumed hats and gold sashes; Highland officers in tartan trews and feather bonnets; trim naval commanders in their more sober but most becoming blue and gold; officers of engineers and artillery, of cavalry and infantry of the line, Yeomen and Volunteers—an epitome, in fact, of the British Army and all sporting their bravest colors.

A Brilliant Scene.

Dotted here and there in this gorgeous stream of color, slowly moving onward to the Throne Room, are the white wigs and black robes of lawyers fresh from the courts and their briefs, and come to pay homage to the King; men in the modest splendor of black velvet court suits, steel-looped cocked hats, and swords and buckles of steel; stray ministers of the Crown in gold-laced uniforms; scarlet-clad dignitaries of the Church; county lieutenants in silk-lined embroidered tunics, silver-laced trousers, and crimson and gold sashes; Chinamen, gorgeous in robes of silk and gold; picturesque Japanese; and turbaned Turks.

In my uniform of dark green I felt quite eclipsed by the blaze of color around and in front of me, as moving with the stream I found myself passing through room after room scanned by keen-eyed officials, on the lookout for anything irregular in dress, and the entrance to each room guarded by two gentlemen-at-arms ready to bar the entrance with a cord of silk if the pressure should become too great.

At last, after what seems hours of slow progression, I catch a distant glimpse of the Throne Room, voices which until now have been incessant become hushed, I clutch my ticket of presentation to make sure that I have still got it, and summon up my evaporating courage for the ordeal which is now near.

Catches Sight of the King.

A little later I find myself at the entrance to the Throne Room and catch sight of the King, in field marshal's uniform, standing on a raised platform with a brilliant group behind, to the right, and in front of him—Royal Princes and household officials in gorgeous uniforms. My name is announced in a clear, cultured voice—that of the Lord Chamberlain—and with a dazed feeling and a shakiness in the legs I walk forward, make a clumsy obeisance to the King, receive a gracious smile and a bow in turn, and somehow, before I realize that it can possibly be over, I have emerged from the room and find myself in a corridor outside.

After all, I thought, it was not very formidable, and I might just as well have saved myself all my trepidation. For a few moments I waited in the corridor watching the steady flow from the Throne Room—the Army, the Navy, the Church, and the Law, Ministers and Attaches—and I could not help fancying that they all seemed as pleased as myself at having done homage to our gracious King, and that the ordeal was over.

A Chance for Investors.

The Cherry Creek Copper King Mines, Ltd., owns and operates the O.K. group of six mineral claims situated about four and a half miles south-west of Kamloops, B.C.

The property has exceptional advantages and is exceedingly valuable, and as the surface indications on this vein are identical with those at the workings on the Iron Mask, a property owned by the B.C. Exploring Syndicate, and adjoining it on the west. The following extracts from the Chairman's address to the shareholders at their general meeting held in London, Eng., on the 18th Sept. last, will give an idea as to the prospective value of the O.K. group:

"On the Iron Mask at Kamloops we have expended £26,000 and I think we may allow that this item is splendidly represented by the mine we have in process of development at Kamloops, and I believe you will credit us with having given you twenty shillings for every pound expended on that mine. * * * *

"If it is true that we have as we believe we have, a practically unlimited body of 5 per cent. ore in our mine at the Iron Mask, then in the words of one of the most eminent smelting millionaires in America, whom I had the pleasure of meeting at Salt Lake City, 'You have got millions.' * * * * "Kamloops is an absolutely ideal position for the erection of a smelter and the working of a mine. The railway, the water, the fuel and the grade of the earth surface, and the self fluxing nature of the ore all seem about as desirable as they could be. * * *

These extracts are from an address by a hard-headed London financier to equally hard-headed business men, who are developing their property with a view to large profits, under the direction of an expert mining engineer.

Owing to the proximity of the mine to the railway, a short line of aerial tramway would be easy of construction and would enable the company to transport their ore to the railway at a cost not exceeding ten cents per ton. Freight and treatment charges for the class of ore obtained are exceedingly favorable and are quoted by the Trail and Granby smelters at $6.25 per ton, so that the entire cost of mining, freighting and smelting would not exceed $5.00 per ton. The ore is a high grade copper gold assaying from 10 per cent. to 24 per cent. copper and from $6 to $22 gold per ton, and is in great demand at the smelter owing to its fluxing qualities.

The near future will see the erection of a large copper smelting plant to treat the ores of this district, both the B.C. Exploring Syndicate and the Inland Smelter Company having already selected and purchased sites. The completion of these enterprises will insure the lowest possible rates for reduction of local ores. The company has secured a clear title to the property on the most favorable terms, the former owners showing their confidence in the mine by accepting the entire purchase price in fully paid up shares of the company.

After paying all the expenses in connection with the incorporation, the amounts due on options secured by the company and the purchase price of the O.K. group, there remains in the treasury two hundred thousand shares, the proceeds from the sale of which are to be applied to the development of the properties, now owned or to be hereafter acquired by the company. There is absolutely no promoters stock, and the issue advertised in another column is the first opportunity offered the public to invest in the shares of the Company.

After Thirty Years Service.

General Sir John Dartnell, who has just retired from the command of the Natal Mounted Police after thirty years' service, distinguished himself in the early stages of the war in South Africa, when his knowledge of the country was of invaluable service. He was with General Penn Symons when he fell at Talana Hill, and to his guidance General Yule's column owed its safe arrival at Ladysmith. Among his other exploits he made a march of 120 miles in three and a half days without transport. Lord Roberts, in his report to the War Office, said that General Dartnell's "name stands very high in the estimation of the colonists, and he possesses the greatest influence over the natives. His advice was of much assistance in the earliest actions of the war, afterwards during the siege of Ladysmith, and finally in the general advance through the Biggarsberg to Laing's Nek, when Natal was cleared of the enemies of the Queen." General Dartnell was born at London, Ontario, in 1838, and entered the army in 1855. He was severely wounded while serving with the Central Indian Field Force in 1857, and received the brevet of Major. He had plenty of South African experience, in the Zulu war of 1879, the Basuto war of 1880, and the Boer war of 1881, before the recent struggle.—London Star.

Khedive's Financial Adviser.

Mr. Vincent Corbett, who has been appointed to succeed Sir Eldon Gorst as Financial Adviser to the Khedive, has for some time past been the British Commissioner on the Caisse of the Egyptain Public Debt. Mr. Corbett has spent twenty years in official positions. He was nominated an attache in 1884, and was appointed to the Embassy at Berlin in 1885. He was transferred to The Hague in 1887, and a year later was appointed to Rome. In 1891 Mr. Corbett was sent to Constantinople, where he was granted an allowance for his knowledge of Turkish. He later filled positions at the Embassies at Copenhagen and Athens, at both of which places he acted for a period as Charge d'Affaires. Before proceeding to Egypt Mr. Corbett held the appointment of British representative on the International Financial Commission for the control of Greek finance.

Malaria-Proof Wallace.

Mr. William Wallace of Nigeria has just arrived in England on one of his rare holidays, says The West African Mail. He is accompanied by Col. Morland, whose brilliant audacity won Kano for the Empire. Mr. Wallace (who used to be thought a negro by our French friends in days when their knowledge of British colonial methods was not so accurate as it now is) has served eighteen years on the Niger, and is malaria-proof.

A Scotsman and a diplomatist, Mr. Wallace went on embassies to Sokoto and Kano, on behalf of the Royal Niger Company, when such journeys involved great personal risk. On the assumption of direct Imperial control Mr. Wallace, who is a C.M.G., was appointed Deputy High Commissioner. He has visited every corner of the protectorate from Sokoto to Lake Chad. From him Sir Frederick Lugard has had most valuable help in bringing about the acceptance of British rule.

EARLS AND DIDN'T KNOW IT.

How the House of Courtenay Lost Title for 300 Years.

The death is announced at Powderham Castle, near Exeter, of the thirteenth Earl of Devon, in his ninety-third year. The late Earl, who was prebendary of Exeter Cathedral and rector of Powderham, succeeded his nephew in the Earldom in 1891.

The house of Courtenay, to which the Earl belonged, dates back to a very early period, and members of the family have for centuries been associated with the history of the country. The existing branch was founded by Sir Philip Courtenay of Powderham Castle, who received the honor of knighthood from Edward the Black Prince the day before the battle of Navaret in Spain.

One branch of the Courtenays were Counts of Odessa, and another became allied to the royal family of France. In England the Courtenays have been allied to the Bonvilles, Bohuns, Spencers, St. Johns, Talbots, Veres and royal house of Plantagenet.

With the city of Exeter the family has always been closely associated, and in olden times there were stout struggles for privileges between the Earls of Devon and the Mayors of the city.

Few, if any, titles in the peerage have been, for long periods of their history, involved in more mystery and doubt than that of the Earls of Devon.

For several hundreds of years the heads of the house of Courtenay were Earls without being aware of it. Indeed, so far were they from being acquainted with the dignity that should have been theirs that they accepted baronetcies and viscounties, and were proud to hold them.

After three centuries had passed, however, an astute lawyer discovered the patent among some old records, and found that there were two missing words, 'de corpore,' usually inserted in patents.'

The discovery meant that the Earldom could be inherited by collateral heirs, and a Courtenay in 1831, after a hard fight, established his right to sit among his peers. The peerage he recovered was the one created by Queen Mary.

Five times the Earldom has been supposed to be extinct. Four of its holders have been attainted and four beheaded.

Queen Mary revived the Earldom in favor of Edward Courtenay, who, in the previous reign, when only twelve years of age, was committed prisoner to the Tower. He was released when only twenty-eight years old, and he died at Padua of poison.

ABOUT RULE BRITANNIA

STIRRING PATRIOTIC HYMN WHICH WE ALL LOVE.

Political Hymn of Britain So Long as She Retains Political Power—Reason of the Peculiar Satisfaction Which It Engenders in British Breasts—Authorship of the Song Is a Debateable Question.

Southey said that "Rule, Britannia" would be the political hymn of this country so long as she maintains her political power. Wagner, the great composer, declared that the whole character of the British nation is expressed in the opening strain of the tune, writes J. Cuthbert Hadden. Recent events—the war with the Boers—certainly tended to bring out that view, for the entire British nation seemed to find a peculiar satisfaction in proclaiming that Britons "never, never, never shall be slaves," and giving utterance to all the other grand sentiments which make our bosom swell with patriotic pride.

It is certainly a fine tune, this of "Rule, Britannia." It was made by the famous Dr. Arne, who set a great many fine songs in his day. Arne was a humorist as well as a composer. A couple of vocalists called on him one morning. They had been debating as to which was the best singer, and not being able to settle the question they resolved to appeal to Arne. When they had finished he turned to one and remarked: "Well, sir, you sing very badly." The other concluded that he had won the wager—for there was a bet in question—and he said so to Arne. "Nay," retorted Arne, "for while he sings badly, you can't sing at all." That was the man who wrote the tune of "Rule, Britannia." It is, however, like putting the cart before the horse to speak of the tune while as yet we have said nothing about the words.

Authorship Is Disputed.

Unfortunately, the authorship of "Rule, Britannia" is a debated question, and debated questions are hardly for discussion in a column like this. Still, we want to know what can be said for one claimant or another. Briefly, "Rule, Britannia" was written either by James Thomson, the poet of "The Seasons," or by David Mallet, a venal hack scribbler of the time, upon whom Dr. Johnson poured his contempt in his dictionary—of all places! Thomson and Mallet were both Scots, and Johnson hated Scots as the devil is said to hate holy water. Mallet's name (he was a Perthshire man) was originally Malloch; but when he went to London he found that the cockney difficulty with the guttural led to his being called Mallock, and as he did not like being called Mallock he changed his name to Mallet. It was this that gave Johnson his opportunity, and when he came to define the word "alias" he did it so: "Alias—A Latin word signifying 'otherwise;' as Mallet alias Malloch; that is, otherwise." Moore, the poet, declared that when Johnson defined "mallet" as "a thing with a wooden head," he had the Perthshire man in view, and I verily believe he had. Johnson was capable of anything when it came to dealing with natives of the northern half of the kingdom.

But to come more directly to our story. The difficulty in deciding between Thomson and Mallet lies in this, that "Rule, Britannia" first appeared as part of a work which they wrote together, and in which their respective shares are not indicated. The work in question was the masque of "Alfred," written in 1740 for an entertainment at Cliefden, which was meant to commemorate the accession of George I. and the birthday of the Princess Augusta. Thomson died eight years after this, and in the meantime nothing had been said about the authorship of the song. But "Rule, Britannia" had sprung into popularity—was, in fact, the one thing in the whole masque which had survived, and the suggestion of some is that Mallet obscured the issue and allowed it to be inferred that he, and not Thomson, had written the song.

Thomson was dead, and had left behind him no evidence one way or another. Mallet was thoroughly unscrupulous, and would not hesitate a moment about an imposture in which he was not likely to be detected. To give him his due, however, Mallet did not directly claim the authorship of "Rule, Britannia." True, he published the whole of "Alfred" in an edition of his works printed in 1759; but that has nothing to do with the question, since, even so, Mallet admitted (still without specifying respective shares) that "Alfred" contained work from Thomson's pen. Moreover, while Mallet was still living—in 1762—"Alfred," including "Rule, Britannia," as a matter of course, was also printed by Murdoch in his edition of Thomson.

Thus the matter, so far as "Rule, Britannia" is concerned, stood in 1762 exactly as it had stood in 1740. Thomson left the authorship in doubt—so did Mallet. Neither directly claimed the song, and although several of their contemporaries must have known the facts, they remained silent, with the result that the authorship of one of our finest patriotic pieces remains among the list of controversial subjects.

Thomson Probable Author.

Personally, I am inclined to favor Thomson. Thomson was really a poet; Mallet was at best only a poetaster. The internal evidence is, I think, on the side of Thomson. Thomson frequently dealt with patriotic themes, witness his "Liberty" and "Britannia," two productions which, in spirit, very much resemble the celebrated ode. He was an enthusiastic advocate of liberty, making constant appeals to freedom and Great Britain; while he was also a warm admirer of heroes and legislators. There is not a single image or idea in "Rule, Britannia" which does not occur, or recur, elsewhere in the general body of his poetry. Nothing like this can be said of Mallet. Still, it is dangerous arguing from internal evidences, and on the whole we must leave the question in what the poet describes as a state of "—— vacillating doubt." One thing is certain: "Rule, Britannia" was written by a Scot—an "unspeakable Scot," if you identify him with David Mallet. There was nothing "unspeakable" about poor Jemmy Thomson unless it was his laziness. He used to lie in bed on winter days (sensible man!) and write with his hands through a couple of holes in the blankets; and everybody has heard of his eating the pears from the garden walls without taking his hands from his pockets.

Beginning of Popularity.

It was in 1745 that the general public first became acquainted with "Rule, Britannia." In the beginning of that year Dr. Arne altered "Alfred" into an opera, and had it performed at Drury Lane for the benefit of Mrs. Arne. The rebellion in the north was then exciting the public attention, and "Rule, Britannia" only required to be heard to be taken up at once. The air was adopted by Jacobites as well as Hanoverians, but of course the Jacobites parodied the words. Ritson mentions one Jacobite version which began:

> Rise, Britannia! Britannia, rise and fight!
> Restore your injured monarch's right.

A second version is included in "The True Loyalist; or Chevalier's Favorite." Here is the first verse:

> Britannia rouse at Heaven's command!
> And crown thy native Prince again;
> Then Peace shall bless thy happy land,
> And plenty pour in from the main;
> Then shalt thou be—Britannia, thou shalt be—
> From home and foreign tyrants free.

But "Rule, Britannia" did nothing for the Jacobites. An air like "The Marseillaise" might have made all the difference at Culloden if the followers of Prince Charlie had come under such an intoxicating influence.

Sung in Church.

"Rule, Britannia," strange as it may seem to us now, was at one time sung in church, just as the air of "Robin Adair" was used as a hymn tune in the early years of the nineteenth century.

A Church of England clergyman, writing in 1831, remarks: "Nothing need be said of the impropriety of adopting such tunes as 'Rule, Britannia,' and 'Britons, Strike Home,' because, though they have worked their way into some dissenting places of worship, no instance has occurred of our churches" (i. e., the state churches) "being profaned by their introduction." It is ever the enthusiasts who, as Rowland Hill put it, object to the devil having all the best tunes!

Here is an extract from The Times of Oct. 3, 1798, when the news of Nelson's victory in the battle of the Nile reached England: "Drury Lane. —After the play, the news of Admiral Nelson's glorious victory produced a burst of patriotic exultation that has been rarely witnessed in a theatre. 'Rule, Britannia,' was unanimously called for from every part of the house, and the performers came forward and sang it, accompanied by the audience. It was called for, and sung a second time. The acclamations were the loudest and most fervent we ever witnessed." It must, indeed, have been a stirring scene!

BORN TO BE PAUPERS.

Whole Family Living in an English Workhouse Together.

A family with a remarkable experience of workhouse life is at present enjoying the hospitality of the Marylebone Poor Law Guardians, says the Daily Mail.

At the end of July, 1891, the grandfather, Patrick Downs, at that time about 60 years of age, who lived in Lisson street west, sought the shelter of the workhouse, to be followed a few months later by his wife, Catharine. He was a day laborer, and for the non-payment of rent was turned out of his home The couple are still in the workhouse, and there they will doubtless remain.

A daughter, Kate, made periodic visits to the institution, taking her discharge when well enough to leave. She is now about 30 years of age. Three of her children, born in the workhouse, are dead, and were buried by the parish. Another, a boy, is now in the Shaftesbury training ship, where he is maintained at the expense of the guardians.

Another daughter, Elizabeth, married a man named Lawes, who has been an inmate, but is not now in residence. The wife died in the institution, and her four children are being maintained and educated at the Guardians' Schools at Southall. A third daughter, Johanna Cooling, who has no children, is now out of the "house," but she has been an inmate.

Small English Parishes.

The following parishes in England are among the very smallest:

Upper Eldon (Hants): Stands in the centre of a farmyard; two houses; population, 10.

Haccomb (Devonshire): one house, one cottage; population, 7.

St. Bartholomew's (Suffolk), church, farmhouse and cottage; extent of parish, half an acre; population, 7.

Llancant (Gloucestershire), one house; population, 4.

Ludlow Castle (Shropshire), one house; population, 5.

Martinsthrope (Rutland), two houses; population, 4.

Southam (Grimsbury), one house; population, 1 (an old man).

A Laudable Ambition.

W. B. Yeats, the Irish poet, tells of a woman who once said to Marion Crawford, the novelist:

"Have you ever written anything that will live after you are gone?"

"Madam," Crawford replied, "what I am trying to do is to write something that will enable me to live while I am here."

"My niece's little baby boy, two years old, was so badly afflicted with eczema that he needed constant watching. It was all over his face and he scratched the sores constantly. Mornings his clothes would be stained with blood, and his face and hands would be covered. His family never could take him out, as his face was always full of large sores. They had medical treatment, and tried everything they heard of. She commenced using the Cuticura Remedies last spring and found that at last she had a wonderful healer. The sores left his face and he was entirely cured, and now his face is as smooth and rosy as though no sore had ever been there to mar it."

THE MESSENGER FROM KHARTOOM

BY ST. GEORGE RATHBORNE

Author of "Dr. Jack," "Dr. Jack's Wife," "Miss Caprice," Etc., Etc.

In addition to being a master with the foils and a champion pistol shot, the baron has done what Russian officers do not practice as much as their British cousins; he knows the science of self-defense. He is not a giant in size, nor yet a pigmy, but a well-formed man, with muscles hardened by constant exercise.

Thus, when the Hindoo driver comes plunging at him, Baron Popoff assumes his favorite attitude and expects to lay the fellow out with one solid blow. Like many another man, he counts without his host.

As the driver reaches the baron, he, too, has his hands before him in puglistic style. There is a quick interchange of blows, some lightning counters and the dull sound of a heavy stroke is heard.

Baron Popoff gives no cry, but sinks to the ground several feet away, senseless. Perhaps, in that brief space of time when he finds his most difficult leads met and parried by his antagonist, some dim suspicion of the truth may have flashed into his brain. No common Hindoo driver could use his fists in that style.

Before he has time to form a definite conclusion, however, there comes the blow that all his science cannot ward off, and the unlucky Russian knows no more until he opens his eyes on a strange scene, with the shores of India low down in the east.

Others have made their appearance—Mr. Grimes himself. Besides, here is Kassee and Sandy Barlow.

Then the Hindoo driver, Kito, the man who delivered such a telling blow to the baron, must also be an old acquaintance. Mr. Grimes has him by the hand. In a cherry tone he exclaims:

"That was a knockout worthy of a Sullivan, Mynheer Joe. It cancels all your past obligations to the baron."

"He struck me with the whip, the beggar," says Joe, ruefully rubbing the spot where the terrible lash had flecked him and drawn blood. "It's lucky for him my nature differs from his own, or I'd have his life for that blow."

"If you haven't taken it already, I'm afraid you've broken his neck," says Grimes.

"Oh, no! He'll come too presently. We have the chloroform ready to dose [illegible] lay hold of the wheel. She went in as neat as you please," from which talk it may be inferred that there has been something singular about the accident that has occurred to the baron's palkee gharry.

The vehicle is raised upon a sound portion of the pavement. Then the still senseless Russian nobleman is placed within, and Sandy gets alongside, having the chloroform ready, while the man who has taken the place of the original Kito, who lies in a stupor at this hour in the rear of the Malabar Hotel, his liquor having been drugged, mounts to the driver's seat.

"You will look after that party, sir?" he calls back.

"Rest easy. When he comes to, in the morning, he will find himself lying by the Towers of Silence, with no one to tell him how he got there. Go your way, Joe," returns Mr. Grimes.

An hour later, the strange passenger is handed up the side of the good ship Avalanche. A few low words are exchanged between the captain and the swarthy Hindoo, whose arms seem of steel; then a warm handshake, a "God bless you, Mynheer Joe!" and they separate.

As Joe and the little newspaper correspondent leave the boat at the ghaut, they see the ship gliding toward the sea and bearing the vindictive Russian diplomat to far-away Valparaiso. In all probability he will never cross their path again.

The little party met at the early chota hazri, and around the table the story is told in low tones. Even the war-horse, Demosthenes Tanner, confesses to a feeling of relief, now that the baron will give them no more trouble. He experiences the sensations of a man who, after vainly striking repeatedly at a bothersome fly, finally succeeds by a lucky blow in demolishing his tormentor.

It is not necessary that we should follow these friends further. With the disappearance of the baron from the field, their troubles cease, and the sea before them promises pleasant sailing.

Mynheer Joe manages his case with wisdom and tact. Much planning is done by those concerned, and, finally, when they reach Calcutta, the vivacious Molly becomes Mrs. Mynheer Joe. It is decided that Joe and his bride set sail for China, to explore that country, while the others head for New York, via London.

Thus, one pleasant July morning—the most delightful of all months in India—these two stand on the deck of the Hong Kong steamer, waving farewell to the friends on shore, while the fog-horn voice of the Illinois statesman comes over the green waters like a benison, calling:

"Bong voyage, Mynheer Joe, bong voyage, dear boy!"

And there the curtain falls.

An amusing case was recently heard in the Dublin Police Court. A middle-aged woman, named Mary O'Neil, was charged with having obtained £8 by false pretences from the British Legal Life Assurance and Loan Company, (Limited). From the statement of Mr. Brady, prosecuting solicitor, it appeared that the accused induced a Mrs. Bridget Connell, who had an insurance policy with the company, to pretend she was dead. She was "laid out," with candles at the head and feet, and a "wake" was held. Mary O'Neil then went out, obtained a death certificate from a doctor, went to the Insurance Company, and was paid the £8 as next-of-kin of Bridget Connell. Subsequently, Bridget Connell, receiving none of the money, and hearing that Mary O'Neil was having "a high old time of it, driving about in a cab with a soldier and a coal-porter," got up, and went down to the Insurance Company, to ask them why they had paid her policy. She surprised the local manager of the company by saying, "I'm Bridget Connell, and not dead at all." On being put into the the witness-box, Mrs. Connell said she remembered being "laid out," but did not pretend to be dead.

Mr. Brady—There was a real live wake and a real live corpse, and there was plenty of porter?—Yes. They got in porter, and they got in another candle, and put it in a bottle. They were all dancing and "lepping" about the boards (laughter).

Did you get any of the porter?—Yes; I got a sup (laughter.)

Accused at this point exclaimed, "When we went to wash and lay her out she came to life again, and we all rushed out (laughter).

According to Detective Officer McCabe's statement, when he arrested Mrs. O'Neill she admitted that she got the money, and added, "My aunt was dead from seven o'clock in the morning (laughter). Mrs. Nolan then went to wash her, and she woke up (laughter), and we all got a great fright and ran out. 'Oh aunt,' I said, 'I received your Socity money, and I am going back with it.' She called me and told me to give it to her, as she was in debt. I then gave her the money—£7 17s. During the day she gave me 30s. for two shawls. She said she would buy an ass and cart with the remainder" (laughter.)

Perfect Handcuffs.

Scotland Yard detectives have for years been trying to get a really secure handcuff that would baffle even themselves or experts like Houdini to open without a key. It is well known that the Government regulation handcuff can be opened by most policemen and all habitual criminals by means of a trick. Mr. Nathaniel Hart, a Birmingham blacksmith, has spent five years of night and day toil in making a pair of handcuffs that "no mortal man can escape from." In his early days Mr. Hart was employed in the manufacture of handcuffs. At the age of 30 he set up in business for himself as a blacksmith, but handcuffs, and how to manacle without a defect, have always had a fascination for him. Five years of his spare time has been devoted to the invention of a perfect handcuff. The great difficulty the maker of a handcuff has to contend with is that there is so little room in which a really powerful lock can be placed. Knowing this, Mr. Hart, after countless trials, has at length succeeded in constructing a lock which, when placed within the handcuff, even violent blows with a sledge-hammer can only bend, but cannot break asunder. This particular cuff is in the shape of a figure 8, with what may be roughly described as part of a rifle barrel attached. The lock is made of the finest steel, and is "a lock within a lock." It cannot be picked. The inventor cannot do it himself, and the key took him over a week to make.

Prices of Curios.

At a recent sale at Christie's, in London, of antique furniture, porcelains, etc., some of the prices were as follows: A Louis VI., carved and gilt sofa and four fauteuils, the seats, backs and arms covered with old tapestry worked into fables, in pink borders wreathed with flowers, $840; a Chippendale mahogany cabinet, with glazed folding doors, having carved interlaced beadings, enclosing shelves and small doors beneath, $750; a pair of Regence entredeux commodes, inlaid tulip and king wood, with two doors, shaped fronts and splayed ends, mounted with winged caryatid figures at the corners and foliage borders of chased ormoulu, surmounted by veined red marble slabs, $685; an old Worcester oviform vase and cover, painted with flowers in Oriental taste on a dark blue ground, standing 10 inches, $400; an old Dresden vase and cover and a pair of beakers painted with Watteau figures on a gold ground and encrusted with trailing branches of forget-me-not blossom, the base being a la Louis XV., $245; and a complete Crown Derby dessert service, resplendent in gilt and beautiful blue, painted with groups of birds, $310.

ROUGH BUSH SURGERY

CUTTING A MAN'S THROAT IN THE AUSTRALIAN BUSH.

A Thrilling Story of Rough and Ready Experience in the Isolation of the Woods—The Patient Recovered—Some of the Common Methods of Attempting to Circumvent Accidents—Danger Due to Distance.

Bush surgery has methods peculiarly its own. Simplicity is its keynote. For a snake bite you cut the piece out of your leg with your clasp-knife, and continue your journey, says an Australian writer. For a broken rib you tie a string round your waist. For toothache the treatment is to press a common knitting needle, heated white hot, against the exposed end of the nerve. The patient is usually held down by two strong men for this operation, and sometimes pursues the operator with a gun for the next two or three days; but provided the knitting needle is used firmly and fearlessly a cure is certain. For measles you sit down and smoke until you are well. I have myself nursed a whole family through the scarlet fever, though I knew nothing about the disease, and, indeed, know nothing about it now. For bronchitis you blister the sufferer and turn him out for a week. The theory is all wrong, but it works in practice. People live a long time up country; there aren't many doctors there. I don't say there is any connection, but both are facts.

Of course, there are occasionally "regrettable incidents." If you give cold mutton and apple dumpling to a man recovering from typhoid—why, he dies, that's all; and if a man tries to cut off his own arm with a handsaw, the chances are he makes a mess of it. Still, as a general thing, you "muddle through somehow."

I doubt if we do not know a little more than is good for us about microbes, blood-poisoning, anaesthetics and petty details of that sort. Then the bush itself supplies natural remedies—"pigweed," for instance, in Queensland, an excellent cure for scurvy—while rapid smoking will to a certain extent take the place of chloroform and deaden pain. Nicotine is good for centipede bites.

What I wish to lay stress on is the peculiar danger due to the enormous distances and the isolation of the bush. You cut a vein in an awkward place, and bleed to death because there is no one to tie it up. A slight fracture—even a sprain—prevents you reaching home and you die of exposure, thirst, gangrene, or a complication of all three. You may even be pinned down by a falling tree or an injured horse—though quite unharmed yourself—and never get up again. It is quite a custom for this reason for the stockman when on his rounds to keep a lookout for horses, cattle, or sheep "hung up" in the bush and liable to starve to death. Bush-felling is so dangerous an occupation that insurance companies do not care to "take the lives" of men about to engage in it.

"Bush madness" and kindred complaints, the accidents common to horse-breaking and bush-felling, snake bites (in places), and diseases with an alcoholic origin are the principal practice of an up-country doctor. His surgical experience is limited, and he, therefore, operates on any patient who gives him the slightest provocation to keep his hand in. Fortunately, the bushman is phlegmatic—I have known a shepherd who had to amputate his own finger with an axe, and give it to the dog at dinner-time to save meat. You will thus understand that things are rough and ready. A young doctor in Queensland not long ago spent sleepless nights for weeks in pulling a patient round, picked a quarrel with him during the convalescent stage, and shot him dead!

The above notes will partially explain how I came to assist in the cutting of my friend Mr. Johnson's throat. The scene was a shanty in a gully on the Australian coast, shaded by the customary eucalyptus and watered by the inevitable "creek." There were three of us, all young cadets—Johnson, the hero of the incident, O'Shaughnessy, an Irish gentleman of somewhat reckless disposition, as shall be disclosed, and myself.

Johnson, to gain some private ends, got diphtheria. As we were at the fag-end of creation a doctor's fee would have been several hundred pounds by the time he got there, and Johnson would probably have been dead long before. My only medical knowledge was a slight acquaintance with the extraction of teeth, and this was of little use for diphtheria. O'Shaughnessy, however, had some experience of the disease, or said he had, and immediately proceeded to "do so."

So much so that one night Johnson was gasping for wind, and at the point of death.

"What's to be done?" I asked O'Shaughnessy, who had just come in.

"Tracheotomy!" he decided at once in an offhand manner. "Do you know anything about it?"

I had cut sheep's throats often enough, but that was in order to kill them. We wanted to keep Johnson alive; not turn him into butchers' meat. I offered to operate—at twenty-odd there are few things one does not offer to do—but did not recommend it.

"Then I'll do it myself," declared O'Shaughnessy.

All told, the surgical instruments in the shanty were—a handsaw, a penknife, brad-awl and a shepherd's knife (a large weapon commonly used for skinning sheep). O'Shaughnessy dragged them out, and toyed with them in front of Johnson, who eyed them between his gasps with some anxiety. We rattled them over together noisily, and soon decided on the penknife. O'Shaughnessy took it outside to the grindstone and sharpened it. Johnson listened to him; and knowing O'Shaughnessy's reckless disposition, began incoherent Protestations against the proposed operation. But he was now getting purple, and there was no time for calculating chances. O'Shaughnessy came back and put a final edge on the penknife. We propped Johnson against some rugs and turned a strong light on his throat.

It began to feel a little ghastly. The Southern Cross shone weirdly through the open window—at least I suppose it did, though I had lived several years at the Antipodes before I could make out the Southern Cross at all. I had never felt so creepy since I accepted the invitation of the sword-swallower at a circus to push the sword down his throat. I had killed hundreds of sheep and cattle in the ordinary way of business without a thought—an operation which sometimes caused the new chum to faint—but everything is a matter of custom. The most reckless rough-rider will be an abject coward in a gale at sea; the daredevil V. C. puts up the white flag and surrenders unconditionally when it comes to making an after-dinner speech or getting married.

"It's quite painless, you know, Johnson," I observed, not that I knew anything about it, but I thought it was the professional thing to say.

"Whereabouts do I go for him?" said O'Shaughnessy, brandishing the knife in front of Johnson, who groaned, "In here's quite safe, isn't it?"

"Hardly," I answered—"rather near the jugular!"

Here the patient, whinnied again, but was quickly reduced to submission.

"Then in here?" pinking him under the gills among some of the more important arteries, in the playful way sometimes observed in barbers.

"Probably kill him," I suggested, and from his contortions I fancied the patient agreed with me. Shouldn't try it there if it was a horse"—for I know more about equine than human anatomy—"not a valuable horse."

"We shall be tried for manslaughter if it's a—a failure, won't we?"

"Ah! I hadn't thought of that," I said—the sufferer apparently had, for he gasped freely, "Law's a tricky thing."

"Ah, I remember now—just under the apple of the throat!" exclaimed O'Shaughnessy, recalling his one piece of knowledge about the operation.

The whole thing turned out simple enough in practice. I held my breath as O'Shaughnessy, after fumbling about with the knife as if he were going to carve a fowl, thrust it through the skin under the "Adam's apple," fished out the butt end of the severed larynx and covered it with a handkerchief with a vague idea of keeping out microbes,—but in reality this did some good in protecting it from dust. The bleeding, I was surprised to see, was not more than a spoonful or two. But it was uncanny to watch the breathing going on through the neck instead of at the mouth.

Well, the agonizing suffocation ceased at once. How we should have avoided blood-poisoning or joined up the larynx eventually I had as little idea as O'Shaughnessy, and he hadn't much. By a thousand-to-one chance a doctor passed the shanty next day, and he finished the job.

Johnson recovered. He thanked us cordially for so kindly cutting his throat, although his manner led us to believe that he would never be operated on by an amateur again. But every deed of daring has its risks, and one can face them with so much calmer courage when the risks are taken by somebody else!

Duke of Cambridge's Wife.

The most romantic feature of the late Duke of Cambridge's life was his marriage, which was often incorrectly described as "morganatic," when, in fact, it was legally no marriage at all. Under the provisions of the Royal Marriage Act, no marriage of a member of the Royal Family is valid without the consent of the reigning sovereign, and this was never obtained by the Duke. Why it was not given has often been the subject of wonder, since several members of the Royal Family have since married persons not of royal birth.

The Duke's wife, who was known throughout the remainder of her life as Mrs. FitzGeorge, was an actress, a Miss Farebrother, daughter of a printer in Bow street. She was the reigning beauty of the Lyceum during the Keeley regime, and is still remembered as Abdullah, captain of the Forty Thieves, in one gorgeous extravaganza. The marriage took place at Arbornhill Church, attached to the barracks in Dublin, where Prince George was then quartered with his regiment. It was a quiet affair, and the happy couple proceeded at once to Montrelier House—a capital brick three-storeyed edifice hard by. His marriage was not recognized at Court, and is not referred to in the "Peerages." But the Duke and the actress were very happy, for she was a lady of great personal charm, amiable, and an excellent talker. There were three sons and one daughter, who were kindly treated by Her Late Majesty, and had the entree of the royal palaces, though their mother, the extravaganza actress, daughter of the printer, had not.

The sons are Col. George FitzGeorge, Rear-Admiral Adolphus FitzGeorge, and Col. Augustus Charles FitzGeorge.

Mrs. FitzGeorge, who was greatly esteemed by the members of the Royal Family, as well as by others who knew the Duke of Cambridge personally, died in January, 1888. The Duke's bereavement was severe. Other members of the family shared his regret. For a time he withdrew from public engagements, but in August of the same year responded to the invitation to unveil in the cemetery at Evere, Brussels, the fine monument erected to the memory of the British who fell in the campaign of Waterloo.

THE HAT QUESTION.

Striking Feature Seen by Visitors in the British House of Commons—Grand Old Man as an Equilibrist.

A striking feature of the British House of Commons to the unaccustomed eye is the Hat. Nothing, indeed, seems more astonishing and impolite than the inveterate habit of members to wear their hats in the House. It is a very old custom, the origin of which is unknown. Some have ascribed it to the days of Charles I., and made of it a protest against that monarch's attempted invasion of the Privilege of the House. Unfortunately, however, there are older prints extant showing members in the House with covered heads. Others go back to the days when the representative Commoners held their deliberations under an oak under the open canopy of heaven. But whatever the origin the hat plays a large part in the internal economy of the House of Commons. A member reserves his seat by attending prayers and depositing the article on the spot he occupied during his devotions. During the reign of Mr. Speaker, now Lord, Peel some revolutionary genius began to bring down two toppers, the more dilapidated of which he placed on the bench while adorned with the more shiny one, he felt at liberty to take his ease elsewhere. The momentous matter was referred to Mr. Speaker, who, after due consideration, delivered a solemn opinion that the only headgear permissible for seat reserving purpose was the genuine covering actually in use by the owner. The ingenious scheme was thus ignominiously snuffed out and the House recovered its wonted equanimity.

Sitting on His Head.

With the hat, too, members must salute Mr. Speaker on entering or leaving the House. The lifting of the hat also suffices for the moving or seconding of a motion or a bill where the member desires to reserve his remarks to a subsequent stage of the discussion. Once on his legs the disposal of his Lincoln & Bennett becomes a matter of some concern as there are obvious dangers in the placing of it on the vacant space behind. Indeed, there are dangers in front of him as well as behind him. There have been cases where the hon. member was so carried away by the exuberance of his peroration as to deliver a resounding smack on the topper in front. This is quite enough to rouse the mirth of a House as ready as any pack of schoolboys to explode in uproaring guffaws. But if the forgetful orator only remembers his own headpiece when he feels it collapsing under him, then, indeed, the House is neither to hold nor to bind. In one such extremity a member from the Green Isle rose and thusly delivered himself: "Mr. Speaker, sir, I congratulate the hon. member on his good fortune that when he sat down on his hat his head was not inside." This improvement on the legendary effort of the distressed country's patron saint sent the House into one of its gargantuan roars of laughter in which the Speaker's cry of "Order, order," was totally lost.

A Dexterous Feat.

Although as a general rule, members must address the Speaker with uncovered head, there is one notable exception, which once placed the Grand Old Man in a highly ludicrous light. After the question is put, a member speaking to a point of order must remain seated and have his hat in its proper place. Mr. Gladstone was always in the habit of leaving his hat in his private room. On this occasion the House was about to go to division, when he found it necessary to raise a point of order, but he had no hat. Now, Mr. Gladstone, as all know, possessed a head of unusual dimensions, physically as well as metaphorically, and the hat he borrowed was that of the Attorney-General, whose visible cranium was rather of the Lilliputian order. So the House was immensely tickled at the effort of the G. O. M. to balance the 5¾ hat on a head three inches larger—dividing his swift mind between the maintenance of the point of gravity and the presentation of the point of order. It was a feat of dexterity rivalling that of any professional equilibrist including himself, in other lines.

Retains Youth's Enthusiasm.

Field Marshal Sir Evelyn Wood, says The London Chronicle, still retains the enthusiasm of youth. He beats youngsters at tennis; and in the season is among the best mounted riders in the Row. Sir Evelyn has always loved horses, and one of his griefs in leaving England for the Egyptian campaign of 1883 was the death of his brown pony Puskie on the very day of his departure. Puskie, whose years then numbered 34, was a survivor (perhaps the last of his race) of the Crimean war. Wood, when a midshipman, had bought him for £8, and never had a better bargain; for once when he was carrying Lord Raglan's despatches to the naval camp he lost his way, and but for the right lead of Puskie would have found himself within the Russian lines. Another accomplishment associated less frequently than good horsemanship with a soldier is Sir Evelyn's. He is the most facile of letter-writers. During one arduous campaign, which lasted 450 days, his total post-bag to family and friends at home numbered 450—a letter a day.

Church Creches.

In London and several other cities and towns in England the idea of creches in connection with churches has been adopted with splendid results. It is found that parents go to church together more frequently than would otherwise be the case, and that there is increased interest in the general work of the church. One of the class-rooms of the churches is used as a creche, and those in charge are the younger women of the congregations, who undertake the work in order to relieve the mothers.

MY LADY.

She walks unnoticed in the street;
  The casual eye
Sees nothing in her fair or sweet;
  The world goes by,
Unconscious that an angel's feet
  Are passing nigh.

She little has of beauty's wealth;
  Truth will allow
Only her priceless youth and health,
  Her broad white brow;
Yet grows she on the heart by stealth,
  I scarce know how.

She does a thousand kindly things
  That no one knows;
A loving woman's heart she brings
  To human woes;
And to her face the sunlight clings
  Where'er she goes.

And so she walks her quiet ways
  With that content
That only comes to sinless days
  And innocent;
A life devoid of fame or praise,
  Yet nobly spent.

A RADIUM MINE IN LONDON.

Six Grains of the Indestructible in Each Ton of Refuse.

Incredible, though it may seem, there is a radium mine right in the heart of London. Thousands of people walk over it every day, and never suspect that beneath their feet there is a quantity of the most precious commodity the world has ever known.

At the present time radium is vauled at 12s a milligramme, or one thirty-thousandth part of an ounce. An ounce of pure radium has never been found, and if it could, authorities declare that it would be worth £750,000.

This precious substance is mainly to be found in pitch-blende, an oxide of uranium—of much value as a pigment for coloring porcelain and tinting glass. For many years past a well known firm of analytical chemists and metallurgists in London have been throwing away the by-products obtained from pitchblende in the process of extracting uranium, and in doing so have discarded close upon £1,000,000 worth of radium.

"Of course," one of the members of the firm in question said to the writer recently, "radium is only a recent discovery, and had we known the value of pitch-blende refuse I need hardly say that we should have taken the greatest care of it, instead of having it taken away in dust-carts. As a matter of fact, we paid 3s 6d per ton to have the residue carried away, and it was ultimately used for leveling and laying out roads in the city, and for filling in the foundations of the houses.

"The greater part of the pitchblende used by us was obtained from Joachimsthal, in Austria, now the chief source of the new element. The Austrian Government has now, however, prohibited the exportation of the residues of the mines of Joachimsthal, probably with the idea of making a 'corner' in radium. But formerly we practically enjoyed a monopoly of the mines."

For something like seventy years this particular firm of chemists were engaged in the work of extracting uranium from pitch-blende, and during that time hundreds of tons of radium-laden residues were carted away from their premises. It is estimated that from one to six grains of radium were contained in each ton of refuse, and that somwhere under London close upon £1,000,000 worth of radium has been buried. Furthermore, this radium is still in existence, for one of the chief properties of the substance is that it is indestructible.

The Destruction of Romance.

Most of England's moated houses had their secret hiding-places. In the long gallery of Parham Hall a sliding panel in a window-seat exposed a narrow passage leading to a hole beneath the floor, wherein a proscribed priest might take temporary refuge from a too zealous officer of the Commonwealth, says Oscar Parker in The April Booklovers Magazine. In Birtsmorton Court, in Gloucestershire, a secret passage once ran from a concealed chamber in the oak-panelled dining-room to a tunnel beneath the moat, and so on to an exit beyond. Sir John Oldcastle is said to have been secreted here during the wars of the Roses. The hidden chamber now harbors nothing more romantic than the family provender. A secret room, with a sleeping apartment, was constructed over the kitchen of Moreton Hall, and access to the moat was feasible down a narrow shaft in the wall. Alas! the secret chamber has been modernized into a storeroom for cheese! It is a miracle that romance has any breath left in its emaciated body. The moat was the family fishpond in the good old days, and it was usually kept stocked with carp, pike and perch. From a convenient window a line could be dropped into the placid waters, and the larder replenished at no cost and with little delay. Monster pike of hoary age still survive, it is said, in some of these old moats.

The Harm Noise Does.

Noise is an undoubted factor in impairing the tone of the nerve centres. Whether we are conscious of it or not, it hurts the brain and has a deafening, dazing, bewildering effect on the mental processes. It tires the brain and tends to produce cerebral hyperaemia. To live in a noisy atmosphere is to shorten one's days. Irritability, neurasthenia, insomnia, are common effects. The tympanum or drum membrane of the ear is injured, the circulation of the cerebro spinal fluid is disturbed and the nerve cells themselves suffer as though subjected to mechanical violence.

Don't Always Last.

On a very rainy day an American in London got into an omnibus. Very soon he noticed that drops of water were pattering down upon his head from the roof. At that moment the conductor entered to collect the fares. "What's the matter with the roof?" said the damp passenger. "Does it do this always?" "No, sir," replied the conductor, "only when it rains."

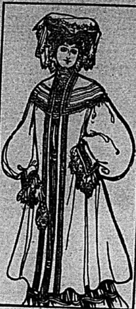
FRILLS AND FASHIONS.

Trimmings Are Horizontal—Smart Gowns For Evening Wear.

Nearly all the trimmings now are horizontal.

The old fashioned shawls can be turned into very pretty evening wraps, and the same is true of wedding veils, which are made up with chiffon over soft satin.

One of the prettiest evening gowns seen recently was of black spotted net over white chiffon and silk. The waist was almost covered by a deep bertha made of three narrow ruffles. The skirt had a shirred hip yoke, and from the knees down was a mass of ruffles; each ruffle was bound with a narrow black velvet ribbon. The short sleeve puffs were decorated with tiny velvet rosettes and the velvet sash had fancifully knotted ends.



WHITE CLOTH COAT.

Another evening dress was of heavy white lace and chiffon. The chiffon skirt, accordion plaited, had a very deep yoke, almost an overskirt, of the lace. The waist was of the full plaited chiffon with a front piece and puffs of lace. The decolletage was outlined with tiny white rosebuds.

A pale green taffeta which is being made for a smart woman has its skirt arranged in heavy plaits from the waist. Above the knees are enormous tucks headed with ruches. Around the waist is a swathed band with knotted ends and little taffeta roses. These roses also ornament the pelerine collar and are intermingled with shades of pale pink and heliotrope.

White frocks will be worn quite as much as ever this spring and summer, and they will be supplemented by the white cloth coat and the white lace hat trimmed with a feather or white roses.

The illustration shows one of these white cloth coats. It has a cape yoke coming well down over the shoulders. It is trimmed with black and white braid.

MENAGERIE WONDERS.

RINGLING BROTHERS EXHIBIT THE RAREST COLLECTION IN THE WORLD—OTHER CIRCUS MARVELS.

The most extensive and valuable collection of wild animals in the world is the menagerie feature of Ringling Brothers' wonderful circus exhibitions. Among the rare creatures to be seen nowhere else, and rated above price, are two giraffes, the only rhinoceros known to be in captivity, the almost extinct gnu, or horned horse, a perfect specimen of the white polar bear, a real baby elephant born in America, standing no higher than its mother's knee, and the only one ever born and successfully reared in captivity, and a gigantic troop of 40 elephants, the largest herd ever showed under canvas, and twice as many as are with any other show in the world. In this priceless collection of odd animal creatures the specimens are all perfect types, and 108 cages, dens and lairs are required to carry them. The big menagerie tent is the largest ever made for a circus, and so big that an army of 5000 men could be easily manoeuvred within it. Naturalists and explorers unqualifiedly pronounce the Ringling Brothers' menagerie the largest and most valuable in existence. Frequently colleges and schools are closed to give students an opportunity to inspect this celebrated wild animal collection. One may practically make a tour of the world in the time devoted to the study of this immense zoological display, and it is safe to say that never again will an opportunity present itself for seeing a great many animals almost extinct. The horse show with Ringling Brothers is another surpassing feature of the wonderful circus, exhibiting 650 superb specimens, 300 of which are performing equines of blue-blooded pedigree. The capital invested in this department alone indicates the progressive spirit of this firm, which is world-renowned as proprietors of the most successful circus institution in existence. This policy is again illustrated this season in the production of a magnificent spectacle, Jerusalem and the Crusades, involving 1,200 characters, a ballet of 300 and a singing chorus of 200, requiring the use of a stage larger than the combined stage space in 100 theatres. More than 2000 costumes, the design and make of Parisian artists, are employed, and the scenes of marching hosts, dancing galaxies, galloping knights, ecclesiastical groupings and swiftly changing dramatic incidents form a spectacular display indescribably fascinating. The music composed for this gorgeous production is rendered by the largest portable grand pipe organ ever built, and a band of 50 selected soloists. The scenic investiture is elaborate and ornate, and the spectacle in its entirety is incomparably the most important and successful historical display ever shown under canvas. The same policy of enlargement and novelty is to be seen in the ring performances this season. Three hundred and seventy-five of the pick and flower of Europe, America and the Orient in the circus profession are to be found in the huge arenic programme. Many of the leading artists in the riding, acrobatic and gymnastic numbers have never been seen in this country before, and are celebrated in their foreign homes. This year it takes 85 cars of double length to transport the immense equipment, horses and personal factors. When the circus is completely set up on the show grounds there are 20 pavilions in all. The street pageant on the morning of show day is the biggest and most varied ever organized. This attraction with Ringling Brothers has always been immeasurably superior to the efforts of all other shows, and this season it is more diversified, resplendent, novel, sensational and longer than ever before. The great shows will be here one day only, Saturday, June 4, and give two performances, at 2 o'clock and 8 o'clock. Numbered reserved seats and admission tickets can be bought circus day at Riggs' music store for exactly the same prices charged in the ticket wagons on the show grounds

PHARAOH'S LAND

Britain's New Deal for a Free Hand in Egypt—Last French Pretention Is Now Extinguished.

Egypt has just entered a new phase of its long history. By the Anglo-French settlement the last French pretension over Egypt has been extinguished. Great Britain has now a free hand in the land of the buried Pharaohs, the eternal pyramids and the silent sphinxes. This means to Egypt property, and to British interests security.

There never was a country that occupied such an extraordinary position as Egypt has done for years. Its complications are almost bewildering. The country is a vassal State of the Sultan of Turkey. Its obligation to Turkey consists of an annual payment of about $3,500,000. The Khedive of Egypt is hemmed in as is no other sovereign in the world. He cannot negotiate a loan without the consent of Turkey. He cannot negotiate a treaty that conflicts with Turkish interests. He is not allowed to build an ironclad, and his army is restricted to 18,000 in times of peace. His Majesty has a distinguished visitor, the British Agent, whose advice he must follow in all public matters. Lord Cromer sits at the right hand of the Khedive and tells him what to do. Failure to obey would mean prompt dethronement. Up till a few days ago Great Britain could not advise any public work, and could not add a new charge to the revenues without the consent of France. Thus the nominal ruler of Egypt is a nominal vassal of a sovereign, while Great Britain is the practical administrator of the country.

All this has come about in a gradual and natural manner. With the story of the financial embarrassment of Egypt the world is quite familiar. There had been a carnival of extravagance under Ismail Pasha. In twelve or thirteen years a debt of $16,000,000 had been increased to $500,000,000. Much of the money had been recklessly squandered. A great deal of it had never found its way into the public treasury. Enormous rates of interest were paid. The burden was greater than the country could bear. Interest on the bonds was not paid.

England and France were appointed receivers for the bankrupt country. They sent representatives, who endeavored to restore order in the financial chaos. But their work was not appreciated by the Egyptians. A rebellion was started by Arabi Pasha. When hostilities began France declined to take up arms and fight for the dual control. England then told France to stand aside while it cleared the decks for action. The bombardment of Alexandria and the capture of Tel-el-Kebir decided for British supremacy. After the rebellion was over the dual control was at an end, and England did not ask France to resume the position it had voluntarily surrendered.

France still retained, however, a financial veto. Any new expenditure, such as the construction of a new canal, or an extension of the system of irrigation, must have the approval of France before it can be made a charge upon the revenues. This has proven the chief embarrassment of the British control. It took three years to get the consent of France to the abolition of forced labor by the Egyptian peasants on public works. An ancient law entitled the Khedive to compel the fellah to work on any public undertaking. This was nothing less than slavery. To abolish the system and substitute free labor meant an outlay of $2,000,000 a year. But England insisted, and after much delay France consented. At every opportunity France has insisted upon the British evacuation of Egypt. It has been drilled into the Egyptians that if they were free France would be their all-sufficient ally. And the French people have been taught to believe that Egypt with its storied wealth has been filched from them by "Perfidious Albion." So Egypt has been a lasting grievance. Yet Great Britain shows no disposition to release her grip. When the country first passed under British control only a temporary occupation was contemplated. But responsibilities have grown up.

All the world concedes that British rule has worked wonders for Egypt. It has, in the first place, restored national credit. Egypt is no longer a defaulter. Its obligations are regularly met, and its Government possesses ample funds. Another effect of British rule has been the suppression to a very large extent of official corruption. Under previous regimes nothing was done without a bribe. Justice was bought and sold. Criminals purchased their acquittal. Government officials levied blackmail on merchants. Corruption was rampant. In twenty years Lord Cromer has given Egypt a condition of administration worthy of any European State, and superior to that of many. This has not been accomplished without great firmness and splendid executive ability. The master British Agent has had to compel the Khedive in spite of himself to dismiss unworthy Ministers. He has had to run the risk of assassination on the part of those whose perquisites he has abolished. Many have been the plots to kill Lord Cromer, but they have been so invariably frustrated that it is now currently believed that he bears a charmed life. To-day he can walk the streets of Cairo as safely as those of London.

But the greatest work of Great Britain has been the restoration of prosperity to the masses of the people. Freed from oppression, relieved of taxation, and assisted in their undertakings, the Egyptians are now contented. The Nile has been brought under control, so that there is a regular supply of water for the purpose of irrigation. Egypt has been won back from the encroaching desert. Even France has been convinced that British rule in Pharaoh's Land is a thing to be tolerated. And what does England gain by all this sacrifice? It has at best secured entrance to a market which it has now thrown open to all the world.

MEN'S SUITS

The Newest of All.

The more exacting and particular a man may be about exclusiveness in fabrics and patterns, even if he insists on all the advantages he expects from a tailor, then the more these new suits which we are showing for the first time will appeal to him.

He will find in them all the style and satisfaction he would in garments that the best tailors could build to his measure, though they cost a little more than half the tailor's price and the same as he would pay elsewhere for ready-made clothes that would not prove as satisfactory.

Throughout these splendid garments the tailoring will be found to be faultless; it is of the highest character known and if anything a little more exacting and thorough than is found on the tailor's best productions. And of more importance than all, they possess that well bred air the tailor's have a knack of giving to the clothes they turn out.

Needless to say, the styles as they are found here are correct, that is expected, or that a perfect fit is assured in every case—we are more particular about that than you could be.

MR. S. A. GARDNER REMEMBERED BY GRATEFUL PUPILS.

On Monday evening, 23rd inst., the entrance class of Queen Victoria School gave the Principal, Mr. S. A. Gardner, a pleasant surprise, when they called in a body at his home on Octavia street and presented him with a beautiful emblem ring and the following address:

Belleville, May 23, 1904

The Entrance Class of '04,

Mr. Gardner, who was entirely taken by surprise, made a suitable reply, referring to their pleasant association in the school room and the work done there, and thanked them for their kindly remembrance of him and the beautiful present. The pupils spent the evening at Mr. Gardner's and had a most enjoyable time.

On May 6 the Dr. will meet there his cousin, Mr. William Johnson, of Belleville, Canada, who is returning from Convention has been held during the month in Palestine, and a series of most interesting and soul-moving services have been held. We have had communications from Mount Carmel and Jerusalem from Mr. Wm. Johnson, of Belleville, Canada, cousin of Dr. Crawford Johnson, and a relative of Mrs. J. W. We are informed that a detective was for a day or two at Deseronto this week, and as a result of his visit all or nearly all the hotel-keepers were caught selling liquor to Indians. Literary Notes.

A GHOST ON SHIPBOARD.

"Then, plainly audible to all, came along the deck the heavy tread of creaking sea-boots. None on board wore boots of that kind. The steps went on to the cabin, where they ceased. There was a faint luminousness within, not proceeding from the swinging-lamp over the desk table, but pervading the room with a cold gleam. At the table was dimly discernible something — some one—or else a shadow of human semblance. The shape seemed to bend over the table as if writing. The dim light dwindled into dusky obscurity. The figure, or shadow, appeared to rise from its seat and retire towards the chart room, where it disappeared. A letter-pad on the desk; the men [illegible] it. On the white surface were three or four lines in a stiff, angular handwriting, to this effect: "Laye youre board North East by East, Seven Knots; then Six Points West of North, 5 Knots, Too Cleere Water; after that Due North. You will find Mee there."—From "A Secret of the North," in the Metropolitan Magazine for June.

CORNET 3000 YEARS OLD.

ETRUSCAN CIVILIZATION FAR SUPERIOR TO THAT OF THE ROMANS.

Rome, May 26.—A very interesting discovery has been made in the Etruscan necropolis of Tarquinia. It consists of a cornet of modern shape, three thousand years old. Two hundred tombs, containing helmets, a breast plate of gold, amulets, vases, etc., have been opened up, showing that Etruscan civilization was far superior to that of the Romans. The collection will be offered for sale after the Government has appropriated one-fourth of it under the law.

A Warning to Others.

Two boys were summoned before the Magistrate this morning charged with playing ball upon Front street. The Magistrate allowed them to go without a fine after advising them not to play ball any more on the public street as it was against the law, and an accident might result therefrom.

Charged With Trespass.

Mrs. M. Johnson was charged with trespass upon property belonging to Mrs. Ross. It appears that the accused went into a house on Wickett street and took up her residence without Mrs. Ross' knowledge. The matter was arranged by Mrs. Johnson agreeing to pay $2.50 per month, which was satisfactory.

WHAT IS CATARRH?

It is an inflammation of the mucous lining of the throat, bronchial tubes and nasal passages, excited by germs that can only be destroyed by fragrant, healing Catarrhozone, which is breathed direct to the seat of the disease, and has never yet failed to cure. Pleasant to use, absolutely certain to cure. Catarrhozone always gives satisfaction. "I suffered from nasal catarrh so badly that I couldn't breathe through my nostrils," writes G. K. Wilmot, of Meriden. "I used Catarrhozone for a few minutes and was relieved. It cured in a short time." No other remedy just like Catarrhozone —it's the best. Two months' treatment $1.00; trial size 25c.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"REUBEN IN NEW YORK."

"Reuben in New York," an up-to-date musical farce, written by John Curran, will be the attraction at the Carman Opera House on Monday, May 30. Unlike most farces, "Reuben in New York" contains a consistent plot, and the story told is a clean and wholesome one. An unusually strong cast has been engaged to interpret the various characters. Among its members are William Kellar Mack, George H. Adams, Joseph Kearney, James Grant, George Pearce, Charlotte Wade, Josephine Newman, Vesta Stanton and Dora Lynne.

The Les Colini-Clairons troupe of novelty dancers are a sensational novelty with Ringling Brothers' World's Greatest Shows this season. There are four men and four women, and their whirlwind terpsichorean specialty is repeating the success for which it was famed in European capitals. The most thrilling achievements of gymnastic heroes are gracefully woven into their whirling dancing performance, with a sympathetic rhythm of motion and bewildering fascination of speed and change it is impossible to picture in words. Every national dance is illustrated in alluring fashion, and new figures involving the supplest agility of the superbly trained athlete are danced with marvellous grace and velocity. The specialty is exhilaratingly novel and forms the greatest exhibition of graceful, difficult and novel dancing ever offered the American public by this greatest circus in the world.

The acting seals and sea lions which perform with Ringling Brothers' famous circus, amazingly illustrate in juggling, comedy effects and musical acts the highest known achievements in animal training. Captain Webb, who was the first to attempt the education of these curious creatures of the deep seas, spent many years of his life in the Arctic regions, and there, far away from civilized life, home and friends, he made a study of their nature and brain scope, and after a long time and the exercise of much patience finally developed the wonderful performance which is now a remarkable feature of Ringling Brothers' World's Greatest Shows. The performance is given on two big stages, and every move of the intelligent animals may be plainly seen from every part of the enormous tent. This trained animal act is beyond question the most marvellous exhibition ever offered for public instruction and entertainment.

MEN'S SUITS

The Newest of All.

The more exacting and particular a man may be about exclusiveness in fabrics and patterns, even if he insists on all the advantages he expects from a tailor, then the more these new suits which we are showing for the first time will appeal to him.

He will find in them all the style and satisfaction he would in garments that the best tailors could build to his measure, though they cost a little more than half the tailor's price and the same as he would pay elsewhere for ready-made clothes that would not prove as satisfactory.

Throughout these splendid garments the tailoring will be found to be faultless; it is of the highest character known and if anything a little more exacting and thorough than is found on the tailor's best productions. And of more importance than all, they possess that well bred air the tailor's have a knack of giving to the clothes they turn out.

Needless to say, the styles as they are found here are correct, that is expected, or that a perfect fit is assured in every case—we are more particular about that than you could be.

A PLEASANT SURPRISE.

MR S. A. GARDNER REMEMBERED BY GRATEFUL PUPILS.

On Monday evening, 23rd inst., the entrance class of Queen Victoria School gave the Principal, Mr. S. A. Gardner, a pleasant surprise, when they called in a body at his home on Octavia street and presented him with a beautiful emblem ring and the following address:

Belleville, May 23, 1904

Dear Mr. Gardner,—

We feel very deeply your kindness in taking so much of your valuable time in preparing us for the Entrance, and your unvarying kindness and consideration for us at all times, and as a slight token of our gratitude we ask your acceptance of this ring.

The Entrance Class of '04,

The pupils spent the evening at Mr. Gardner's and had a most enjoyable time.

"The International Sunday School Convention has been held during the month in Palestine, and a series of most interesting and soul-moving services have been held. We have had communications from Mount Carmel and Jerusalem from Mr. Wm. Johnson, of Belleville, Canada, cousin of Dr. Crawford Johnson, and a relative of Mrs. J. W. Detective Detected Them.

We are informed that a detective was for a day or two at Deseronto this week, and as a result of his visit all or nearly all the hotel-keepers were caught selling liquor to Indians. On Monday next the trials will take place at Deseronto, before Magistrate Bedford, and there is considerable speculation as to the outcome, some hotel-keepers having three and four charges preferred against them.

Literary Notes.

A GHOST ON SHIPBOARD.

"Then, plainly audible to all, came along the deck the heavy tread of creaking sea-boots. None on board wore boots of that kind. The steps went on to the cabin, where they ceased. There was a faint luminousness within, not proceeding from the swinging-lamp over the desk table, but pervading the room with a cold gleam. At the table was dimly discernible something — some one—or else a shadow of human semblance. The shape seemed to bend over the table as if writing. The dim light dwindled into dusky obscurity. The figure, or shadow, appeared to rise from its seat and retire towards the chart room, where it disappeared. A letter-pad on the desk; the men [illegible] it. On the white surface were three or four lines in a stiff, angular handwriting, to this effect: "Laye youre board North East by East, Seven Knots; then Six Points West of North, 5 Knots, Too Cleere Water; after that Due North. You will find Mee there."— From "A Secret of the North," in the Metropolitan Magazine for June.

McINTOSH BROS.

LEFT A TRAIL OF RUIN

Roaring, Raging Cyclone Struck the Town of Amherstburg.

Roof Blown From the Lake View Hotel—Court House Partially Wrecked—Trees Uprooted, Wires Broken, Lake Lights Destroyed, But No One Killed and No One Injured to Any Serious Extent.

Amherstburg, May 27.—A roaring cyclone struck this town shortly after 12 o'clock noon yesterday. It raged for nearly an hour and left a trail of ruin in its wake. No one was killed, so far as can be ascertained, and it is announced that no one has been injured to any serious extent.

The most serious damage is to the Lake View Hotel, the roof of which was whipped off and then carried a clattering sheet of shingles for some distance before it fell to the ground.

Range Lights Blown Down.

Vessel interests will also suffer considerably, as the range lights to guide the boats through the limekilns have been blown down. The lights specially are those located at the Michigan Central tracks.

The tall smokestack of the Electric Light and Power Company was toppled over.

The grist mill was badly damaged and the court house was partially wrecked.

No Warning of Storm.

The storm came from the northwest and was preceded by very little warning.

The fact that there was no loss of life on the river is due solely to luck, there being no pleasure parties out in small boats at the time.

Trees were uprooted, telegraph and telephone wires were blown down, and for some time the interurban service from Windsor and Sandwich was stopped.

Lightning Causes Heavy Loss.

Bowmanville, May 27.—During the heavy thunderstorm which passed over this district Wednesday evening, the barns and stables on the farm occupied by William Brown, lot 30, con. 5, Clarke, were struck by lightning and burned to the ground. Six horses were killed, which were worth about $1,100. Besides the horses killed, was a Durham bull, a number of calves, also 600 bushels of oats, hay, and machinery were destroyed. His loss is about $1,800; insurance about $700.

Victim of Lightning.

Tillsonburg, May 27.—A man named William Crabb, who was working for John Scott of Dereham, was struck by lightning yesterday morning while he was planting corn in the field and was killed instantly. The electric current struck him on the head, ran down across his breast, through his right arm and the corn planter to the earth. The man was frightfully burned and the implement he was using was shattered to atoms. He was a native of South Norwich, was about 22 years old, and unmarried.

Girl's Body in River.

Severn Bridge, May 27.—Yesterday the body of Miss A[illegible], daughter of [illegible] blacksmith, aged [illegible], was found in the river, after her disappearance of three weeks ago. She was last seen by Miss Robinson walking with Herbert Mackenzie, one of a party of surveyors of the James Bay Railway. Mackenzie has not been seen since, and his father and brother have arrived here. They believe he was drowned.

Drowned in Mississippi.

Winnipeg, Man., May 27.—Harry Singleton, a young Englishman, 26 years of age, who has been working in Assinaboia district, was drowned on Monday in the Mississippi River on his way to seek work.

Accidentally Shot.

Winnipeg, May 27.—J. A. McDonald of Qu'Appelle, while cleaning a gun Wednesday afternoon, was shot through the abdomen, with fatal results. He was 26 years of age and unmarried, and came west recently from Glengarry, Ont.

Head Severed By Saw.

Parry Sound, May 27.—A fatal accident occurred in the Parry Sound Lumber Company's mill yesterday morning. Robert Tuck, working close to a bandsaw, in trying to release his hand hook, which was stuck in a plank, was drawn against the saw and was instantly killed, his head being completely severed from the body at the shoulders. This was the first day of the running of the mill this season. Tuck was an experienced mill-hand. He was a single man.

Ten Killed.

Louisville, Ky., May 27.—Ten persons were killed and eighteen injured by an explosion yesterday morning on the Monongahela Coal and Coke Company's boat, Fred Wilson, plying between Pittsburg and Lousiville.

Ultimatum To Hutton.

London, May 27.—(C.A.P.)—The Australian Government has informed General Hutton he must either give the contents of the secret messages passing between him and the British authorities or retire.

Allans Will Compete.

London, May 27.—(C.A.P.)—It is reported that the Allan Line will compete with the Red Star reduction in the fare from London to Montreal via New York.

Union Bank Wins.

Brockville, May 27.—At the Assizes yesterday, Mr. Justice McMahon gave a decision in favor of the Union Bank in their action to recover $1,075 from John Sheridan, which the latter found last June. It was proven to have been part of the $5,000 which disappeared in the transfer at this station in May, 1903.

PEOPLE V. THE RAILWAYS

Is Present System of Railway Ownership to Be Changed?

Are the People to Own the Railways?—Issue Plainly Stated By the Conservative Leader, Mr. R. L. Borden—Declares Government Ownership of Railways the Issue Upon Which the Conservative Party Will Appeal to the Country.

Ottawa, May 27.—R. L. Borden yesterday put the Opposition fairly and squarely on record as in favor of Government ownership and control of a Transcontinental Railway. Public ownership of the Transcontinental Railway is the issue upon which the Opposition will appeal to the country. The bold statement Mr. Borden qualified with the admission that the sanctity of contract demands the protection of the legitimate right of the promoters of the undertaking. There would be no repudiation. The promoters would not be put to any loss, but at the same time the country would not be required to pay to them any prospective or speculative or unreasonable profits.

For Government Ownership.

"If," said Mr. Borden, "it is the will of the people of Canada, as declared by their voice at the next election, that another railway from ocean to ocean shall be built, owned and controlled by the people of Canada and not by the Grand Trunk Railway Company; if it is the will of the people that we shall assume not only nine-tenths, but ten-tenths of the obligations necessary to construct another transcontinental road, and by that means to own and control a national railway highway from the Atlantic to the Pacific, the Conservative party, if returned to power, is prepared in accordance with the will of the people so expressed to place upon the statute book of Canada such legislation as will enable that result to be accomplished with the least possible delay. It is for the people to decide. We shall abide, indeed, we must abide, by their verdict, but let them understand that they have a choice, that the door is not yet closed. By expropriation or by any other fair and just policy we shall carry out the will of the people. Let them determine whether Canada shall have a Government-owned railway or a railway-owned Government."

"If," persued the leader of the Opposition, "these promoters see fit to join with the Government in driving the measure through Parliament by the aid of an obedient majority they must take that course with their eyes open and with the understanding that the right of the people of Canada to a voice in so great an enterprise is not to be denied and will not be disregarded."

Mr. Borden disclaimed any ill-will towards the Grand Trunk Railway. It would receive justice and that justice would take the form of running rights over the extended Government line that would give it complete [illegible]. With this concession, however, there would be stipulations adequately conserving and protecting the public interest, especially the interests of Canada's national ports.

Mr. Borden's Amendment.

Mr. Borden's amendment consolidating the foregoing expressions of views concluded thus: "That the bill proposes to ratify and confirm agreements imposing upon the country enormous obligations for the construction of a Transcontinental Railway, a large portion of which is to become the property of a railway corporation to whom the remaining portion is to be leased for fifty years on terms onerous to the country. That the obligations undertaken by the country under the proposed agreements will provide almost entirely for the cost of constructing the proposed railway, while the obligation assumed by the Grand Trunk Company is comparatively small. The House is of opinion that instead of ratifying the proposed agreement it would be more in the public interest that the Dominion should assume the whole obligation necessary for erecting across the continent the present Government system of railways, thereby completing a Transcontinental Railway from the Atlantic to the Pacific entirely owned by and under the control of the people of Canada."

Criticised the Government.

Leading up to this emphatic declaration of policy Mr. Borden energetically criticized the Government for not appealing to the people before proceeding to carry out such a prodigious railway scheme. It would increase the national obligation by over fifty per cent. It would prejudice, if not destroy the idea, and would indefinitely retard any advancement in state ownership.

"Constitutional usage demands that the Government should submit this question to the people," declared Mr. Borden.

Criticizing the contract in some of its most objectionable features, he declared that the Grand Trunk would continue to carry its winter traffic to Portland. The Grand Trunk would take freight where it would pay best, and that was to Portland. He pointed out that the Government would have no running rights over the western division after fifty years, although such rights were firmly secured to the company over the eastern division. The Government was assuming over three-quarters of all the obligations necessary to build the road from Winnipeg to the coast without securing compensatory advantages. The Government was permitting the Grand Trunk to obtain in return for its very modest support $25,000,000 of common stock of the Grand Trunk Pacific, while the Government itself for ten times that support obtained not one dollar. And finally the Government was securing no greater control of rates than that created under the general law applying to all railways.

Disregard of Public.

Referring to the complex character of the contract Mr. Borden said that even members of the Cabinet did not understand it. Certainly Mr. Emmerson did not appear to grasp it. The Prime Minister had told the House that the Grand Trunk Pacific was liable to pay 3 per cent. as rental of the eastern division. As a matter of fact, it would not be liable to pay one cent. The statement had been made that the new contract would not impose any additional burden on the people, that the Grand Trunk was under legal obligation to provide working capital and necessary betterments, neither of which statements was true.

Now is the time to obtain a national transcontinental railway, but how? By building a difficult portion of it at a cost of $76,000,000 and give it to the Grand Trunk Pacific for ten years for nothing? Charge for forty years a rental of 3 per cent., which was probably better than the Government could borrow the construction money for. For a century the Grand Trunk Pacific was to have running powers over this eastern division; it would be allowed to build branch lines, turn the unprofitable ones over to the Government at the end of fifty years, and was to be given a subsidy on its branch line from North Bay, which line, according to the Prime Minister, would enable the company to carry its freight to Portland. Yet the Government had refused to take the power to prevent this being done.

Extend the I.C.R.

Only by extending the Intercolonial to the Georgian Bay could it be assured that freight taken down to North Bay would pass through Canadian channels and to Canadian ports. Government ownership was favored at one time by Dr. Russell as the only salvation for the ports of the Maritime Provinces, but he was now fighting shy of that policy, and although in a letter to The Globe in 1899 he advocated strongly the extension of the Intercolonial to Georgian Bay, to-day, five years later, he blamed the Opposition for having rushed into this same alternative policy without due consideration.

That was when Dr. Russell was animated by a strong Canadian sentiment, and when he declared that if anybody could find a better plan for the extension of the Intercolonial than by the acquisition of the Canada Atlantic he would like to know it.

Mr. Borden then discussed the progress State ownership had made elsewhere in the world, and pointed out that the Grand Trunk had not been able to repay its loan of $15,000,000 made by the country as far back as 1855, which indebtedness at simple interest amounts to more than $50,000,000, and a compound interest to more than $100,000,000.

No Political Interference.

There was no necessity to continue political control of interference in the management of Government railways. The people were prepared to support an Administration making a strong determined effort to dispense with that. The railway service [illegible] eventually become very great and a special service to which no one would be admitted who had not served an apprenticeship, beginning at the lowest stage at an early age and gradually working up. Public convenience and public safety were so much concerned that public opinion would not tolerate the appointment of inexperienced or incapable men to positions of responsibility or importance.

We already, said Mr. Borden, have Government ownership in Canada to the extent of 1,551 miles. That public opinion would not favor its abolition was shown by the coldness with which the proposition to turn the Intercolonial Railway over to the C.P.R. was received. The feeling in favor of Government ownership was really growing stronger.

"We favor Government ownership," observed Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

"Then," replied Mr. Borden, "why not apply it to the western division as well as to the eastern division? And if he favors Government ownership, why not apply Government ownership?"

"Shall we supply the money and three-quarters of the credit necessary for the building of a great transcontinental line to be transferred to and controlled by what is virtually a United States corporation?" asked Mr. Borden. "No. Let us rather extend our obligations by one-tenth and thus own and control a national transcontinental highway in the true sense."

Mr. Fielding Replies.

Hon. Mr. Fielding replied to the leader of the Opposition.

Col. Sam Hughes asked if it was not true that the Minister of Finance was ready to leave the Cabinet with Hon. A. G. Blair, but repented at the last moment and stayed in the field.

Mr. Fielding gave this allegation an unqualified denial, and repudiated with some heat the aspersions that had been cast upon him. Mr. Fielding defended the concessions that had been granted to the company. He did not think the extension of time for the completion of the western section would be necessary. The other concessions he considered reasonable.

Mr. Fielding challenged the leader of the Opposition on the latter's advocacy of public ownership of railways. He was prepared to take issue with Mr. Borden on that question before the country.

Mr. Fielding poked fun at the Oppositions advocacy of public ownership. The leader of the Opposition in his amendment had not declared for public ownership as a principle He had merely declared that it was slightly preferable to the wicked bargain made between the Government and the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company. He felt sure that genuine advocates of public ownership would not be misled by the amendment. Mr. Fielding admitted that public ownership was every day becoming more popular, but he held that it was more popular as a theory than as a practice.

Mr. Fielding concluded at 11.20, having talked nearly four hours.

Mr. Haggart, who replied, commented on the extraordinary silence of the Minister of Railways on the G.T.P. railway scheme.

Emmerson Broke Silence.

At 1 o'clock this morning the Minister of Railways broke his long and conspicuous silence on the subject of the Grand Trunk Pacific contract. Mr. Emmerson waxed eloquent on the necessity of a second Transcontinental line, and blamed the Opposition for obstructing its consummation.

The Schoolboy Bully.

And the bullies in the school. I guess there will always be bullies in all schools. There were some mean ones in the kindergarten. The boy bully was always a coward, of course; a bit of a sneak as well, cringing to the big boys and brutal to the little ones. In the presence of the teacher he was half crazed with terror, crying out: "What have I to do with thee?" But the weak pupil, whom he could handle, he mauled without mercy. It was his nature to be brutal. Rather than not have anything to worry he would torture a hog, even though he had to live with the animal to get at him.—Robert J. Burdette, in Ladies' Home Journal.

Self Approval.

THE WEIGHT OF MONEY.

Deceptive Appearance of Metal as Well as Paper.

"The weight of money is very deceptive," said an employee of the treasury. "For instance, a young man came in here one day with a young woman. I was showing them through the department and happened to ask him if he thought the young girl was worth her weight in gold. He assured me that he certainly did think so, and after learning that her weight was 106 pounds we figured that she would be worth in gold $28,647. The young man was fond enough of her to think that was rather cheap.

"Another thing that deceives many people," he continued, "is the weight of paper money. Now, how many one dollar bills do you think it would take to weigh as much as one five dollar goldpiece?"

On a guess the visitor said fifty, and the clerk laughed.

"I have heard guesses on that," he said, "all the way from 50 to 500, and from men who have handled money for years. The fact of the matter is that with a five dollar goldpiece on one scale you would only have to put six and one-half dollar bills on the other scale to balance it.

"The question afterward was put to several people and elicited answers all the way from 20 to 1,000, the majority guessing from 300 to 500.

"Taking the weight of gold coins and bills given at the treasury, it was figured that a five dollar goldpiece weighs .296 of an ounce avoirdupois. The employee at the treasury who handled the paper money said that 100 bills weigh four and one-half ounces. That would make one bill weigh .45 of an ounce, and between six and seven bills would balance the goldpiece.

On the proposition of how much money one can lift, figures were obtained at the treasury. Where certain numbers of coins were placed in bags and weighed as standards, for example, the standard amount of gold coin is $5,000, which weighs 18½ pounds. Five hundred silver dollars weigh 35½ pounds, while $200 in halves, or 400 coins, weigh eleven pounds.

Two hundred pounds of coin money of various kinds is made up as follows: Silver dollars, $2,617; half dollars, $3,036; quarter dollars, $3,657; dimes, $3,015.80; nickels, $917; pennies, $295.61.

In one dollar bills the same weight would amount to $71,111.—Washington Star.

It is said that these figures have been confirmed by an official despatch. Fighting, it is added, is still going on in the vicinity of Kinchou.

The Russian Loss Heavier.

London, May 28.—The Tokio correspondent of The Daily Chronicle says he learns that the Japanese troops are now within 20 miles of Port Arthur, and that the Russians suffered heavier casualties than the Japanese, who have taken guns and material and a few prisoners. He predicts a further surprise, as Japan is now increasing her efforts in all directions. The Tokio correspondent of The Daily Chronicle says that the Japanese captured many guns at Kinchou.

Japs Put Russians to Rout.

London, May 28.—The Tokio despatch to the Associated Press and Japanese official accounts are the only detailed descriptions that have yet reached London of the brilliant Japanese victory at Kinchou, which is hailed by the London press as establishing an even stronger claim than did the Japanese operations on the Yalu River to their superiority on land as well as by sea, since in the case of Kinchou the Russians had ample time to carefully prepare their positions.

It appears that at the conclusion the victory was immediately followed up, for The Morning Post's Tokio correspondent asserts that the Japanese have swept the Russians from their defences west of Talienwan. And if The Daily Telegraph's generally well-informed correspondent is correct, and the Japanese are nearing Port Arthur, the Russians must have suffered a complete rout at Kinchou. That this is the case also would appear from rumors of the capture of the Russian artillery.

Veterans For the Storming.

According to The Daily Mail's Tokio correspondent, the fifth Japanese division of veterans, which is destined for the storming of Port Arthur, already has landed on the Liaotung Peninsula.

The Daily Telegraph's correspondent at Japanese headquarters, communicating under date of May 26, says there is no change in the situation of the first army, but there are frequent outpost encounters.

"I suppose," he adds, "that the lull is due for preparations of a great battle in the direction of Liaoyang."

The Daily Mail's Sinminting correspondent, telegraphing under date of May 25, declares there are only 2,000 troops at Mukden.

Navy Helped Land Force.

Tokio, May 28.—The following report has been received from Vice-Admiral Togo:

"The gunboats Thukishi, Heiyen, Amagi and Chokai, and the first torpedo boat flotilla, under Capatain Nishi Yama, reached Kinchou Bay on the evening of Wednesday. From dawn of Thursday the vessels co-operated with the army in bombarding Suchaton. The Amagi and the Chokai went in in the morning and the enemy retreated from Suchaton, but they continued to fire from a position behind Suchaton. Our casualties were 10, including Hayashi of the Chokai, who was killed."

How St. Petersburg Heard.

St. Petersburg, May 28.—The news of the Japanese victory at Kinchou was published on a Russian holiday, the anniversary of the coronation of Emperor Nicholas. The news caused the celebrations of Tsarkoye Selo to be shortened. Only a brief service was celebrated in the chapel instead of the customary litany, and the Emperor spent the remainder of the day in the transaction of business.

Gained the Strongest Point.

Tokio, May 28.—A Japanese officer of high rank made the following statement to the Associated Press:

"The Japanese in attacking Kinchou and Nashan Hill had to fight against great odds. The Russians were in full command of the strategic advantages afforded by nature, and these advantages were augmented by the newest inventions of defence. The forts on Nashan Hill were armed with heavy guns. The Japanese had only field guns, heavy guns being unavailable on account of the difficulties of transportation. Our army deserves great credit for having driven the Russians from this stronghold. It was a feat previously considered to have been impossible.

"I fear our losses have been heavy, but we have gained the strongest point barring our way to the investment of Port Arthur."

Significance of Kinchou.

London, May 28.—Baron Hayaski, the Japanese Minister, discussing the recent fighting north of Port Arthur, said yesterday: "Kinchou will be occupied as a first base. The neighboring hills will be strongly fortified in order that they can be held indefinitely. For food supplies and ammunition Port Dalny will be a second base. The possession of Kinchou will be of invaluable aid in the campaign against Port Arthur. The hills command positions of the country for several miles in the direction of Port Arthur. I presume from the action at Kinchou that the Russians intend to make another stand at Port Dalny. Their justification for defending Kinchou must have been the belief that their numbers were able to cope with ours so I expect that practically all the available Russian troops have been moved out from Port Arthur in the attempt to head off the investment."

THE BATTLE OF KINCHOU.

The Routed Russians Are Being Pursued Toward Port Arthur.

Tokio, May 28.—The Japanese army swept the Russians from Kinchou Thursday morning, and in a desperate attack stormed the almost impregnable position of the Russians on Nanshan Hill, west of Talienwan. The battle raged in the hills all through the night, and fragmentary telegrams from the Japanese headquarters report that the engagement is still in progress and that the Japanese are still pursuing the Russians south from Nanshan and the head of Talienwan Bay.

The Russians had made elaborate preparations to check the Japanese movement south on the Liaotung Peninsula towards Port Arthur. They had fortified the high ground on the south shore of Talienwan Bay, their works extending to the east and west. The extreme Russian right was at Hushangtao, and the extreme left at Nanshan Hill. This hill was the strongest part of the line. A series of batteries, strongly placed, crowned its crest, while rifle pits extended around its sides. Mines had been placed lower down on the hill and around the base on the northern and eastern sides were stretched well-made wire entanglements. Another line of defences also protected with wire entanglements extended from Yenchiatung, near the head of Talienwan Bay, due north of Liuchiatien, which lies south of Kinchou. A strong Russian force was posted at Kinchou. It consisted of infantry and artillery.

Japs' Clever Tactics.

The Japanese first occupied the line of hills to the east of Kinchou. Their position had formed an almost perfect right angle, showing its southern front to Talienwan and the western front to Kinchou. Chiulichan Village was the apex of this angle, the extreme right of the Japanese line resting at Chenchatien, while the extreme left was at Cheltsuho, a village due east of Chiulichan. Back of this angle the attacking force assembled in complete security.

The Russians apparently attempted to draw the Japanese attack last Saturday for their batteries opened fire slowly on the enemy on that day. The Japanese, however, refused to be drawn into an attack until the positions of the Russians, their guns and their strength, had been fully developed.

Drew Enemy's Fire.

To this end the Japanese began a series of careful manoeuvres, their officers working their way close enough to the Russian position to draw the enemy's fire. They thus secured fragments of shells for the purpose of assertaining the calibre of the Russian guns. They discovered that the batteries on Nanshan Hill included four howitzers of about 15

WHY NOT GOVERNMENT CONTROL?

When the Government was asked why the Grand Trunk Railway should be given $25,000,000 of G.T.P. stock for nothing, the reply was that the purpose of that was to give the Grand Trunk permanent control over the Grand Trunk Pacific. Upon which Mr. R. L. Borden very pertinently pointed out that it was the Government of the country, not the Grand Trunk corporations, which should hold permanent control over the railway on which they propose to spend nearly two hundred millions of public funds. And with this contention we believe most patriotic and disinterested Canadians will agree.

Another part of the Government's answer was that the £25,000,000 of Grand Trunk Pacific stock was not given to the Grand Trunk for nothing, but in return for the Grand Trunk's guarantee of the Grand Trunk Pacific's bonds on the Pacific section. To this part of the Government's answer, Mr. Borden replied that if the Grand Trunk Pacific common stock was to be given in return for the guarantee of bonds, then the Government should hold three times as much of that as the Grand Trunk, because the Government is to guarantee three-fourths of the bonds and the Grand Trunk only one-fourth. Mr. Borden's contentions were certainly unanswerable, and he accordingly submitted the following amendment to be added to the bill:

"(8) Provided always that when and so often as any share of the capital stock of the Pacific company shall be so given to the Grand Trunk Company, or be allotted or handed over to the Grand Trunk Company under the provisions of section 11 of the Act incorporating the Pacific Company, thereupon three of the like shares shall be given, allotted and handed over to the Dominion of Canada in part consideration for the aid given to the Pacific Company"

In spite of the entire reasonableness of this amendment, and the importance of giving the country, not the Grand Trunk, control of the Grand Trunk Pacific, the Government called upon its vote-it-through-brigade to vote that amendment down, and down it was voted. Let the electors ask themselves why the Government is so persistent in refusing to hold any control over this railway, and is so determined to hand over everything to the control of the Grand Trunk. Well may the Halifax Herald ask: Why is the Government so determined to give the Grand Trunk the monopoly, and to deprive the people of Canada of all control? Is a Government that thus tramples upon the public interests in order to aggrandize a private corporation, worthy of any further public support?

Foot Elm Cures Foot Trouble.

One of the worst kinds of trouble a person can have is trouble with the feet. Some folks are afflicted with feet that itch, burn, ache or tire easily. Others have feet that swell, sweat excessively and offensively, blister or chafe, others again are troubled with painful corns and bunions.

No matter what the trouble may be, the remedy is "Foot Elm." For many years it has proved its worth. There is nothing to equal it. It is antiseptic, soothing, healing and cooling, and there is no foot ache or ailment it cannot quickly cure.

When the scalp throws off either dandruff or a gummy substance, it is an evidence of scalp disease, and no time should be lost in correcting it. You certainly would not hesitate to take treatment were you to look at this matter through a magnifying glass. When highly magnified it resembles a working mass of insects. These creatures absorb the nutriment or life-sap of the scalp causing the scalp to become dry and feverish, resulting in the loss of hair and finally baldness. Seven Sutherland Sisters' Hair Grower and Scalp Cleaner works wonders in all such cases. It thoroughly eradicates all trace of scalp bacteria and makes the hair grow unusually long, strong and beautiful. One 50 cent bottle is enough to show you that it will do all this and even more. MAGNIFICENT SPECTACLE.

JERUSALEM AND THE CRUSADES REGALLY DEPICTED BY RINGLING BROTHERS.

Ringling Brothers' World's Greatest Shows lead their huge circus programme this year with a magnificent dramatic spectacle, Jerusalem and the Crusades, involving a cast of 1,200 characters, a ballet of 300, and a singing chorus of 200 More than 2,000 costumes, designed and made by Parisian artists of world-wide fame, are worn, and the music, composed especially for this grand production, is rendered by the largest and only portable grand organ ever made, and a selected band of fifty soloists. The musical embellishment is peculiarly effective and permeates the entire production. Never in the history of the circus has there been offered to the public a spectacle of the magnitude, the originality and fascinating feature of this stupendous performance. No circus in existence could afford the fabulous expenditure of money invested by the Ringling Brothers in this radiant and dramatic interpretation of the beautiful and dramatic stories of the Crusades. The subject portrays life in the ennobling days of chivalry, when loyalty, bravery, justice and gentleness went hand in hand, and courtesy to an enemy and woman was a cheerful duty. The men and women of this age are inspiring pictures of devotion to high ideals, and depict in glorious flower the sentiment of chivalry from which the stirring crusades sprung. This spectacle opens upon a brilliant scene of preparation for the Crusades, multitudes move about the vast space before the great cathedral of Claremont, France, from whence the invading army started, scanning the tournament notices and instruments to be used by the contesting knights in the tourney, which is to celebrate the departure of the warrior hosts. Bejeweled and enpurpled royalty; obsequious servitors, gaily garbed; ecclesiastics, sparkling with precious ensignia of rank; mounted knights, with shields and helmets inlaid with gold and precious stones; monks, seminarians and other lowly children of church devotion and work; court ladies in daintily fashioned fabrics of glistening sheen; nobles of blue-blooded bearing and dress; soldiers, grim and glittering in armor of steel; singing maidens, dancing girls with garlands, pilgrims, vassals, pages, sword, shield and helmet bearers, and countless other pictorial types of the period intermingle kaleidoscopically in this massive and enthralling scene of changing splendors. The most exciting of ancient sports, including jousting tilts, sword combats, spearing exercises, equestrian exploits, athletic competitions and other thrilling pastimes are reproduced in the splendid tournament. A horse ballet is introduced to illustrate the wonderful equine education of three squadrons of the highest bred animals in the world. The marching pageant as the Crusaders leave upon their holy mission is the most magnificent and bewilderingly beautiful procession display ever seen under canvas.

All the barbaric radiance and voluptuous luxury of the Egyptian court in the mediaeval days of the first crusades are depicted in the environment and action of the next gorgeous scene. A ballet divertisement is presented for the enjoyment of the Egyptian ruler and his numerous court. The enormous scope of stage room is taxed to the utmost by the brilliant gathering. Dancing girls flood the stage, and gracefully glide through bewitching conceits of terpsichorean invention. The costumes are creations of art, fashioned by Parisian masters and models of exquisite elegance and taste. No spectacle of modern times has been staged with the lavish disregard of expense and with such overwhelming success, as this production by Ringling Brothers of Jerusalem and the Crusades.

The marvellous shows will exhibit here on Saturday, June 4, and give two performances, afternoon at 2 o'clock and night at 8 o'clock.

The grand street pageant, the largest, most varied in sensational feature and gorgeously decorative ever organized, and more than twice as long as any other show ever gave, will leave the show grounds show day at 10 o'clock.

AT THE HOSPITAL FOR SICK CHILDREN.

HOW A SKILFUL DOCTOR AND DEVOTED NURSE SAVED A LITTLE PATIENT.

Here is a fine bit of word painting from the Toronto Telegram, depicting a case at the Sick Children's Hospital. It should make pleasant reading for many in this locality who have contributed to the institution's support:

Big Ben had just struck twelve—midnight—and the night without was dark and cold. Within all was still, save for the frequent sound of a little cough which came from one of the cosy and snowy white little beds in the dimly-lighted ward. Listen! There it is again and with it a tiny murmur from beneath the coverlet of the little sufferer's bed.

Big Ben again! One o'clock, and the graceful form of a tender nurse passed swiftly but noiselessly across the floor.

"Are you awake dear?"

"I—I—want a d-drink pl—."

What a sight! Come, strong healthy men—you who have little children in robust health in your homes of luxury—sleeping in curtained beds of rich design, their faces sweetly smiling in their sleep while on their lips, rosy with health, a loving mother's goodnight kiss still rests. Come, and look upon this little body making its fight for life as valiantly as any battlefield hero. She never knew what the word luxury meant—her home has been a home of shadows. But within that perishable little body there lives an imperishable soul and to-night it is preparing for its flight into a world where all tears shall be wiped away and wherein there shall be no more sorrow or pain.

"My dolly is just—No, no, no! It wasn't me—Aren't these flowers lovely?"

"She had better have an ice bath at once."

The night doctor had come now to the side of the little bed and looked silently for a few moments at the burning little head on the pillow. And now, in a spirit of brave determination, he had picked up the gauntlet that outraged nature had flung at his feet in defiance, and the fight for the little girl's wasted body began. One by one, other patient little sufferers in the ward opened their eyes and with scarcely a stir the little sympathizers lay listening with nervous ears to the fitful, rambling sentences clicked out by a parched tongue.

Big Ben again! Five o'clock—and the first grey streaks of early morning are creeping stealthily over the sky and casting strange but pleasant shadows through the tall windows of the ward. The silence within is sublime. But how about the little girl?

"She lives!"

Science in the masterful hands of the doctor, and the sweet, devoted and gentle care of the nurse, triumphed over the gaunt claimant for the little life, and to-day she sat up in her little cot, her face wreathed in smiles, and talked brightly of The Lakeside Home.

A PRESENT FOR THE OLD FOLKS.

FOR THE STOMACH'S SAKE.

An eminent physician says, "human life should last five times the years it takes to mature"—thus if twenty-one is maturity we should live over a hundred years, but there are not many reach the century mark. A great deal more longevity would exist if the stomach did not get crippled and played out—That organ gets plenty of abuse, and is deserving of attention—It is the starting point of most ailments, and it needs the first attention when symptoms of sickness appear. If an elderly stomach can be kept working right, you may be sure of a ripe and contented old age, comparatively free from physical burdens. The great new discovery, ANTI-PILL, the Great System Treatment, has a grand effect in helping old and deranged stomachs. Any aged person who will address a Postal to Wilson-Fyle Co., Niagara Falls, Ont., will get a free trial bottle by return mail.

Sold in Belleville by J. S. McKeown.

Are you feeding your body and neglecting your brain power?

A dull brain is the result of an improperly fed stomach. Your brain wastes away with use the same as your body does. It must be built up and sustained with brain-nourishing food the same as your muscles, bones and tissues. The food element that makes brain is found in the outer coatings of wheat. This is the very portion of the wheat that the white-flour miller discards and with it the greatest portion of the muscle-forming elements. He leaves little else than the heat and fat-producing basic principles of the grain. In

SHREDDED WHOLE WHEAT BISCUIT AND TRISCUIT

The Natural Foods

you get the whole of the wheat, which contains every element that the human body requires and in exactly the correct proportions.

Eating Shredded Whole Wheat Biscuit and Triscuit means living according to Nature's laws—feeding each element in the body with the exact food in the exact quantity Nature has prescribed for each element in the body. The result is sound teeth, strong bones, elastic muscles, firm flesh, good, steady nerves, a quick, receptive brain, and the requisite heat and energy for the body.

Triscuit, the ideal toast, is made of the whole of the wheat—it tastes better than white bread toast and is infinitely better for you—try it toasted for breakfast to-morrow morning.

FRIDAY'S SESSION SHORT.

Brief Debate on Hon. Sydney—Fisher's Bill Respecting Sale of Seeds.

The rules of the House were suspended to permit of the receiving of a petition to incorporate the Farmers' Bank of Canada.

The following bill were introduced:

An act respecting the Montreal Terminal Railway, Mr. Marcil.

An act respecting the Central Life Insurance Co., Mr. Morrison.

An act respecting the Ottawa Fire Insurance Co., Mr. Rosamond.

An act respecting the Kingston and Dominion Central Railway Co., Mr. Hardy.

Mr. Guthrie's bill to amend the criminal code, 1892, was dropped.

Sir Richard Cartwright introduced a bill to amend the General Inspection Act. Its object is to reduce semi-annually the fees charged under the existing law.

Restricting Sale.

Hon. Sydney Fisher moved a resolution restricting the sale of seeds of cereals, grasses, clovers and foreign plants, sold for the purpose of seeding containing the seeds of certain weeds, establishing a standard of timothy, red clover and alsike seeds marked No. 1 or otherwise designated as being of first quality, providing for the examination of such weeds and providing penalties for contravention of the act.

A bill along these lines was introduced at the last session of Parliament, but it was not pressed.

Mr. Fisher explained that under the new bill no one would be allowed to sell seed marked the highest quality unless it was up to a certain standard. He said he had many letters from farmers endorsing the bill. The bill would be put through with the present session of Parliament, but it would not come into operation befor July 1, 1905.

The Budget Speech.

Mr. Fielding stated that the budget speech would probably be delivered next Thursday, if not early in the following week. He promised to make a definite announcement on Monday or Tuesday.

The House then went into committee of supply, taking up the estimates of the Department of Agriculture. An appropriation of $8,000 for renewing and improving the condition of the exhibit of the Imperial Institute, London, caused a brisk discussion. It transpired that of the $8,000 about $6,000 goes for salaries, and other fixed charges, while only $2,000 will be spent on improvements.

A Disgrace to Canada.

E. B. Osler declared that the Canadian exhibits at the Imperial Institute are a disgrace to Canada, and should be improved or abolished. An expenditure of $2,000, he said, could not begin to make the exhibit a credit to Canada. It would be better to have no exhibit, he assured Mr. Fisher, than the exhibit which Canada has at the present time in the Imperial Institute.

The item was passed.

The House adjourned at 6 o'clock.

"It is, indeed, by Jove! Still, I suppose we can go to a restaurant."—Brooklyn Life.

Most people don't eat too much—according to their appetites.

The trouble is that appetite (in these cultivated days) is no longer the trustworthy guide it was designed to be. It's apt to play hob with the machinery.

The beauty of "FORCE" is that it fits any appetite, and makes digestion wait upon it.

Heat Conservation
A hot oven and a cool kitchen is what every housewife is looking for this summer. It is absolutely impossible with a coal range, and almost as impossible with the ordinary gas range. The Oxford Gas Range
makes a hot oven and a cool kitchen a practical certainty. The oven is lined with asbestos—this keeps the heat in and leaves the kitchen cool. It also heats the oven more quickly to a higher degree and with less gas than any other range. The illustration shows that immediately outside an oven hot enough to cook a roast it is comfortably cool.
We would like to show you this and many other improvements peculiar to the Oxford Gas Range. Won't you call at one of our agencies? We can prove to you that this range does away with kitchen drudgery. If you can't call, write for our leaflet—it will interest every housewife.

CHAPTER I.

"MURDER!"

THE dance was over. From the great house on the hill the guests had all departed, and only the musicians remained. As they filed out through the ample doorway, with their instruments under their arms, the first faint streak of early dawn became visible in the east. One of them, a lank, plain featured young man of ungainly aspect, but penetrating eye, called the attention of the others to it.

"Look!" said he. "There is the daylight! This has been a gay night for Sutherlandtown."

"Too gay," muttered another, starting aside as the slight figure of a young man coming from the house behind them rushed hastily by. "Why, who's that?"

As they one and all had recognized the person thus alluded to, no one answered till he had dashed out of the gate and disappeared in the woods on the other side of the road. Then they all spoke at once.

"It's Mr. Frederick!"

"He seems in a desperate hurry."

"He trod on my toes."

"Did you hear the words he was muttering as he went by?"

As only the last question was calculated to rouse an interest, it alone received attention.

"No; what were they? I heard him say something, but I did not catch the words."

"He wasn't talking to you or me, either, but I have ears that can hear an eye wink. He said, 'Thank God, this terrible night is over!' Think of that! After such a dance and such a spread, he calls this night terrible and thanks God that it is over. I thought he was one to enjoy this kind of thing more than most folks."

"So did I."

"And so did I."

The five musicians exchanged looks, then huddled in a group at the gate.

"He has quarreled with his sweetheart," suggested one.

"I'm not surprised at that," declared another. "I never thought it would be a match."

"Shame if it were!" muttered the ungainly youth who had spoken first.

As the subject of this comment was the son of the gentleman whose house they were just leaving they necessarily spoke low, but their tones were rife with curiosity and it was evident that the topic deeply interested them. One of the five who had not previously spoken now put in a word.

"I saw him when he first led out Miss Page to dance, and I saw him again when he stood up opposite her in the last quadrille, and I tell you, boys, there was a mighty deal of difference in the way he looked at her the last time from what he did the first. You wouldn't have thought him the same man. Reckless young fellows like him are not to be caught by dimples only. They want cash."

"Or family, at least, and she hasn't either. But what a pretty girl she is! Some fellow as rich as he and as well connected would be satisfied with her good looks alone."

"Good looks!" High scorn was observable in this exclamation, which was made by the young man who I have before characterized as ungainly. "I refuse to acknowledge that she has any good looks. On the contrary, I consider her plain."

"Oh, oh!" burst in protest from more than one mouth. "And why does she have every fellow in the room dangling after her, then?" asked the player on the yellow flageolet.

"But she hasn't a regular feature."

"What difference does that make when it isn't her features you notice, but herself."

"I don't like her."

A laugh followed this.

"That won't trouble her, Sweetwater. Sutherland does, if you don't, and that's much more to the point. And he'll marry her yet. He can't help it. Why, she'd witch the devil into leading her to the altar if she took a notion to have him for her bridegroom."

"There would be consistency in that," muttered the fellow just addressed. "But, Mr. Frederick"—

"Hush! There's some one on the doorstep. Why, it's she!"

They all glanced back. The graceful figure of a young girl dressed in white was to be seen leaning toward them from the open doorway. Behind her shone a blaze of light—the candles not having been yet extinguished in the hall—and against this brilliant background her slight form, with all its bewitching outlines, stood out in plain relief. There was an anxious bend to it, however, which none of them had ever observed in it before.

"Who was that?" she began in a high, almost strident voice, totally out of keeping with the sensuous curves of her strange, sweet face. But the question remained incomplete, as well as unanswered, for at that moment her attention, as well as that of the men lingering at the gate, was attracted by the sound of hurrying feet and confused cries coming up the hill.

"Murder, murder!" was the word panted out by more than one harsh voice, and in another instant a dozen men and boys came rushing into sight in a state of such excitement that the five musicians recoiled from the gate, and one of them went so far as to start back toward the house. As he did so he noticed a curious thing. The young woman whom they had all perceived standing in the door a moment before had vanished, yet she was known to profess the keenest curiosity of any one in town.

"Murder, murder!" A terrible and unprecedented cry in this old, God fearing town. Then came in hoarse explanation from the jostling group as they stopped at the gate: "Mrs. Webb has been killed! Stabbed with a knife! Tell Mr. Sutherland!"

"Mrs. Webb!"

As the musicians heard this name, so honored and so universally beloved, they to a man uttered a cry. Mrs. Webb! Why, it was impossible. Shouting in their turn for Mr. Sutherland, they all crowded forward.

"Not Mrs. Webb!" they protested. "Who could have the daring or the heart to kill her?" "God knows," answered a voice from the highway. "But she's dead—we've just seen her!"

"Then it's the old man's work," quavered a piping voice well known as that of the village shoemaker's. "I've always said he would turn on his best friend some day. 'Sylum's the best place for folks as has lost their wits. I"—

But there a hand was put over his mouth, and the rest of the words became an inarticulate gurgle. Mr. Sutherland had just appeared on the porch, and these were not men to let their voices be heard in his presence.

He was a superb looking man, with an expression of mingled kindness and dignity that invariably awakened both awe and admiration in the spectator. No man in the country—I was going to say no woman—was more beloved, nor was any held in higher esteem. Yet he could not control his only son, as every one within ten miles of the hill well knew.

At this moment his face showed both pain and shock.

"What name are you shouting out there?" he brokenly demanded. "Agatha Webb."

"Is Agatha Webb hurt?"

"Yes, sir; killed," repeated a half dozen voices at once. "We've just come from the house. All the town is up. Some say her husband did it."

"No, no!" was Mr. Sutherland's decisive, though half inaudible response. "Philemon Webb might end his own life, but not Agatha's. It was the money"—

Here he caught himself up, and, raising his voice, addressed the crowd of villagers more directly.

"Wait," said he, "and I will go back with you. Where is Frederick?" he demanded of such members of his own household as stood about him.

No one knew.

"I wish some one would find my son. I want him to go into town with me."

"He's over in the woods there," volunteered a voice from without.

"In the woods!" repeated the father in a surprised tone.

"Yes, sir; we all saw him go. Shall we sing out to him?"

"No, no; I will manage very well without him." And taking up his hat Mr. Sutherland stepped out again upon the porch.

Suddenly he stopped. A hand had been laid on his arm and an insinuating voice was murmuring in his ear:

"Do you mind if I go with you? I will not make any trouble."

It was the same young lady we have seen before.

To be continued.

Japanese Had 12000 Killed

centimetres calibre, ten old-style cannon of between 9 and 15 centimetres calibre, and two quick-firing guns of 12 centimetres. The Japanese discovered also a number of large emplacements, but they did not learn the number of guns contained therein. These emplacements faced to the north and to the east.

The guns fired by the Russians developed a range of 8,500 metres. Eight heavy guns, posted on the Russian right, in the vicinity of Hushangtao, also were discovered, and another strong Russian position developed by these reconnaisances was on another hill southwest of Nanshan Hill, where the Russians had a series of shelter trenches.

Russia's Fatal Gap.

On the shore of Talienwan Bay, close to the head of the bay, the Russians had established a series of positions. Here were set up searchlights, which nightly played over the Japanese angle in the hills to the northeast.

Further reconnaisances developed the fact that west of Liuchautien the Russians had no defences. Extending to the northward from Yenchiatien to the west coast of the Liaotung Peninsula there were no defences whatever, except the force routed at Kinchou. This gap in the defence was a fatal defect in the Russian position, and when it was perceived the Japanese extended their right to the north and east, enveloping Kinchou and the Russian extreme right. The Japanese left also was extended to Wangchiatung, on the shore of Talienwan Bay, and the centre moved forward.

Wednesday morning, at 5.30, the Japanese attacked Kinchou and for three hours they had an artillery duel with the batteries on Nanshan hill. The Russian gunners searched the Japanese lines with their fire, but failed to inflict much damage.

Resumed at Sunrise.

The battle was resumed at dawn on Thursday. Three Japanese gunboats then entered Kinchou Bay, and in co-operation with the artillery on shore, shelled the Russian positions on Nanshan hill. A Russian gunboat in Talienwan Bay steamed close to the shore and shelled the Japanese left. From dawn the batteries on both sides hammered away at each other. At an early hour the Japanese infantry moved forward, and at 5.20 on Thursday morning they entered Kinchou, the Russians retiring to the south. The fighting continued into Thursday night, the Japanese pressing to the south and storming Nanshan hill. They followed the retreating Russians through the southern hills.

The reports received here fail to cover the events on the Russian right. It is probable, however, that the Russians have abandoned these positions. No information is given concerning losses, they probably were heavy on both sides. The Russian resistance at Nanshan hill was stubborn. The Japanese made a series of assaults before the Russians finally yielded the position. The Russians abandoned this hill at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, retreating toward Nanquanling, where it is understood a second line of defences exist.

The Russians may rally at this line of defences unless they have been disordered by the defeat at Kinchou and Nanshan. The Russians had a series of mines planted at Tafangchan station, on the railroad, which were exploded. The station was destroyed.

The Japanese forces were under fire for sixteen hours.

The general staff here has received telegrams from the commanders commending the bravery and fortitude of their men.

A Bloody Affair.

Subsequent reports received here indicated that the storming of the Nanshan hill yesterday was a bloody affair. The Japanese centred their fire on the Russian batteries, in which work they were aided by four gunboats from Kinchou Bay. They succeeded in silencing many of the enemy's guns.

The Russians had constructed a series of trenches around the hill on a terrace protected by wire entanglements and other such devices.

The Japanese made a series of rushes, but they were in vain. The deadly rifle and cannon fire of the enemy checked them repeatedly.

Finally, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, the Japanese re-formed and stormed the crest of the hill. The Russians held to their position doggedly, and it was 7 o'clock in the evening before the Japanese finally gained possession of the ridge.

"NOT IF IT COST TEN DOLLARS A bottle would I be without Polson's Nerviline," writes J. A. Ruth, a farmer living near Trenton, Ont. "Nerviline is the best household liniment I know. We use it for stomach troubles, indigestion, headache and summer complaint. I know of nothing better to take in hot water to break up a cold, or to rub on for rheumatism or neuralgia." Every farmer should keep a few bottles of Nerviline handy and have smaller doctor bills. Large bottles 25 cents, at druggists.

MEN'S SUITS

The Newest of All.

The more exacting and particular a man may be about exclusiveness in fabrics and patterns, even if he insists on all the advantages he expects from a tailor, then the more these new suits which we are showing for the first time will appeal to him.

He will find in them all the style and satisfaction he would in garments that the best tailors could build to his measure, though they cost a little more than half the tailor's price and the same as he would pay elsewhere for ready-made clothes that would not prove as satisfactory.

Throughout these splendid garments the tailoring will be found to be faultless; it is of the highest character known and if anything a little more exacting and thorough than is found on the tailor's best productions. And of more importance than all, they possess that well bred air the tailor's have a knack of giving to the clothes they turn out.

Needless to say, the styles as they are found here are correct, that is expected, or that a perfect fit is assured in every case—we are more particular about that than you could be.

Fine Suits

The new single and double-breated styles—of fine Blue and Black Cheviots and Serges, Black unsheared Worsteds, Fancy Imported Cassimeres in the latest colorings and Overplaid Effects. Fancies that are exclusive with us and the tailors.

Case of Suicide in City Last Evening.

THOMAS ROGERS, A WANDERER FROM BUFFALO, HAD EVIDENTLY GROWN WEARY OF THIS WORLD.

What was evidently a case of deliberate suicide occurred in this city last evening about 4.45 o'clock, the self-destroyer being a man who had spent the previous evening in the police cells, where he had applied for protection. He gave the name of Thomas Rogers, his age as 64, his birthplace England, his occupation farmer and his home as Buffalo, N.Y. When the man got up yesterday morning he appeared to be in distress of some kind, and Constable Hayes, like the warm-hearted fellow he is, tried to find out what ailed the old fellow, in order to, if possible, aid him. Rogers parried all questions and, beyond saying that his wife and daughter had died thirteen years ago, and he had since suffered great trials, refused to tell the officer anything about his past life. He left the police station, and the men on duty gazed after him compassionately, for he looked, as they expressed it, "like a man who had seen better days." Rogers was seen around the city by a few members of the force during the day, but did not act in such a manner as to attract attention.

The last act in the tragedy was enacted a few minutes before 5 o'clock, when a message came to the police station that a man had drowned himself near Allan's wharf, which is on the west side of the river. Officer Hayes and the Chief were on duty in the police court room at the time, and the former made all haste downstairs and to the scene of the tragedy. Some little boys pointed out to where the top of a man's cap could be seen just under water; the officer secured a boat and, with two other men, pulled out and brought in the body, which was in an upright position, apparently standing on the bottom. A glance at the corpse showed Constable Hayes that the earthly troubles of Thomas Rogers, whom he had tried to befriend in the morning at the police station, were over.

Some boys, who saw him, said he walked down to the dock, stood for some time and finally got into a punt and pushed off from the shore, afterwards deliberately getting over the side into the water. The boys say he at first made as though to swim to the shore, then turned, swam out for some little distance, threw up his arms and went down. They immediately gave the alarm, and the police were notified, but it was probably half an hour after when Officer Hayes arrived on the scene.

It was evidently a case of deliberate suicide.

The remains were taken to Frost's undertaking rooms and prepared for burial. The dead man was about 5 feet 11 inches in height, would weigh about 180 pounds, had a full beard, trimmed about a week ago, was baldheaded and well-dressed. He had on a corduroy cap, grey tweed coat and vest and blue serge pants. A spectacle case found in a pocket was stamped with the name of a Buffalo optician, but the letters were so worn as to be undecipherable. Two notebooks were in another pocket; one new, containing no entries; the other having several pages torn out, as though to prevent any possible identification.

Under the circumstances an inquest was not deemed necessary.

So ends the last chapter in the life story of a man who had evidently, at one time, been possessed of a fair share of everything that men value in this world. What brought him to commit suicide in a strange land is one of the mysteries which may, perhaps, never be unravelled. Peace to his ashes.

On Thursday the unfortunate man sold to Mr. A. Wardhaugh a valise containing some clothes. There was also a New Testament, upon the fly leaf of which was written as follows:

A Merry Christmas
to
Mr. Thomas Rogers.
John 5, 39. G.D.H., 1900.

WHAT IS CATARRH?

It is an inflammation of the mucous lining of the throat, bronchial tubes and nasal passages, excited by germs that can only be destroyed by fragrant, healing Catarrhozone, which is breathed direct to the seat of the disease, and has never yet failed to cure. Pleasant to use, absolutely certain to cure. Catarrhozone always gives satisfaction. "I suffered from nasal catarrh so badly that I couldn't breathe through my nostrils," writes G. K. Wilmot, of Meriden. "I used Catarrhozone for a few minutes and was relieved. It cured in a short time." No other remedy just like Catarrhozone—it's the best. Two months' treatment $1.00; trial size 25c.

Inside Facts About Apollinaris.

As such an enormous quantity of Apollinaris water is consumed each year (over thirty millions of bottles) so high an authority on matters pertaining to health as the London "Lancet" recently sent one of its special commissioners to the spring, which is at Neuenahr, Germany, in order to place before the medical profession an authoritative description of the bottling of this water. The report of this commissioner, published in a recent issue of the "Lancet," shows that he was given access to every nook and corner of the vast establishment in which the spring is situated and that he saw from beginning to end the process by which the water is bottled there, ready for delivery to all parts of the world. This report is full of interesting scientific details describing the methods of bottling and shows that the purity and healthfulness of the water as it comes from the spring is preserved; it says that the chemical analyses which he made are in accord with those given at various times by the late Professor Virchow, Professor Liebreich, the late Sir Edward Frankland, and other authorities, and that the water wherever it is bought is identical with the water taken directly from the spring, as Apollinaris is bottled only at the spring and only with its own natural gas. The supply of both water and gas from the spring is considerably in excess of the present enormous demands.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

ALBERT'S FIELD DAY CONCERT.

Last night was Albert College's annual Field Day concert and lovers of music were given a rich musical treat in the sacred cantata, "Penitence, Pardon and Peace," presented by the Albert College Choral Society. The solo parts were well taken by Misses Manning and McNeal, and Messrs. Clute and Dyer, and a well-trained and well-balanced band of singers supported the soloists and added volume and strength to the choruses. Prof. Cameron is to be congratulated on his indefatigable efforts in the training of the chorus, and Prof. Hunt on his choice of such a cantata. It is hoped that the performance may be repeated before the close of the college year. Part two of the programme consisted of a recitation by Miss Myra Brereton, "Two Home Comings," a beautifully pathetic piece and exceedingly well presented; a song by Prof. Cameron, a recitation by Miss Trotter, these two last numbers being heartily encored, and an "Eastern Temple Drill" by a number of young ladies. The distribution of prizes and medals won in the afternoon competitions closed an eventful day.

"REUBEN IN NEW YORK."

There are many times when it is good to sit through a strong play of serious interest; times, too, when comic opera acts as a nerve stimulant, but probably nothing in the way of an entertainment acts with such a real tonic effect as a genuinely funny farce which keeps an audience in a continuous state of laughter, and for this reason the heartiest of welcomes should be accorded to the great sensation of the season which is styled "Reuben in New York." The company is culled from among the world's best farceurs, and augmented by a band of funny men and a bevy of pretty girls, whose singing, dancing and grotesque gyrations will aid mucbly in keeping the risibilities of the audience working overtime with infectious laughter at the opera house, Monday, May 30.

A BIG CIRCUS DAY.

THE FAMOUS FOREPAUGH AND SELLS BROTHERS ARENIC COMBINATION COMING

"I am," said Dr. Samuel Johnson, "the great friend of public amusements, for they keep the people from vice," and although there were no circuses in the ponderous old philosopher's day, could he enjoy the one bearing the title of Forepaugh and Sells Brothers Enormous Shows United it would doubtless strengthen his opinion of the good sense of his dictum. It is as conspicuous for good management, unobjectionable entertainment and wholesome fun as for the possession of almost unlimited resources, both in performance and presentation. The date here is Friday July 1. The first appearance in America of the Bruin Lecussons, the famous French family of seven equestrians of both sexes, introducing their commingled bareback and four-in-hand park brake acrobatic performances, deserves special mention, as the only entire new circus feature known to the arena for the past fifty years. In cycling sensations the show is phenomenally strong and thrilling. The achievement of Diavalo in "looping the loop" on a bicycle is a dare-devil accomplishment that has given him world-wide prominence. Prodigious Porthos, the French professional expert, who on his cycle leaps across a chasm 50 feet wide, is a parallel feature. Mons. Hubert is still another French sensationalist, who also makes his first appearance in this country. In one of his equestrian acts lifting a sulky by its thills, he leaps therewith unto the bareback of his horse, and, in another, after performing remarkable feats of jugglery in a park cart, drawn around the race course he finishes by balancing the cart on his chin. Then again, the Szarvasi French Troupe of Hungarian Magyars make their first anywhere from home appearance, in singularly emotional dances and wildly strenuous acrobatic performances, peculiar to the strange people to which they belong.

Its military features the show is notably strong and unique. It presents the Aurora Zouaves, those musketeers and marchers of international renown. The names of the circus celebrities is legion. Those dancing mountains, the Forepaugh elephants, and their military brethren, the Sells Brothers Mastodons, are acknowledged the world over to have more wisdom in their heads and more tricks in their trunks than any others of their species.

These are merely glimpses, but sufficient to suggest rare and abundant entertainment for all.

M'KENZIE'S BODY FOUND

Half Mile Further Down Stream From That of Miss Agnew.

Buried Side By Side at Waskago Beside the Grave of the Mother of Miss Agnew—Rail of the Bridge Was Broken and They Were Thrown Into the Swiftly Running Stream—Fatal and Other Accidents Elsewhere.

Severn Bridge, May 28.—The body of Herbert McKenzie was found late Thursday night, about half a mile down the stream, below where the body of Miss Agnew was discovered. The remains of the two were buried side by side yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock at Waskago. They were laid beside the body of the mother of Miss Agnew, who died several years ago. The present Mrs. Agnew is the stepmother of the deceased girl. Investigation shows that the railing of the bridge over the stream was broken. The river runs very swift at this point, and it is thought that the two were sitting on or leaning over the bridge when it collapsed and threw them into the stream. Neither could swim, and it is surmised that the young man in his effort to save Miss Agnew was swept from her to death, and she seeing the fate he had met gave herself up. There is widespread sympathy for the parents of the two victims.

Mrs. McNichol's Body Found.

Hamilton, May 28.—On May 19 Mrs. Thomas McNichol disappeared. As her mind was deranged on account of the death of five of her children, her friends feared that she had taken her life. Ever since they have been in a distressing state of suspense. Yesterday morning their worst fears were confirmed by the finding of her body floating on the bay near the Magee-Walton Co.'s ice-house.

Drowned in a Cistern.

Ridgetown, May 28.—An English family named Mohrmann, which lately arrived here, engaged with Henry Buller, and Wednesday evening they had the misfortune to lose by drowning their four and a half year old son. The little fellow in playing around in some way fell into the cistern.

River Drivers Drown.

Montmagny, Que., May 28.—Joseph Lacombe of Montmagny and Joseph Guillmette of St. Raphael were drowned Thursday afternoon while driving logs for Messrs. Price Bros. & Company on Riviere du Sud. Joseph Lacombe was married, and the father of a large family.

Weather Causes Worry.

Listowel, May 28.—Joseph McIlroy, a farmer on the third concession of Wallace, attempted to commit suicide yesterday morning. He was found in his barn loft with his throat cut, but still living. It is supposed that he was discouraged by the contrary weather, which has retarded seeding and spring work in this section. His recovery is improbable.

Car Fell on Him.

Meaford, May 28.—Elmer Rows, employed at the Seaman Kent Co.'s factory, was yesterday instantly killed at 12 o'clock. A heavy car of lumber was being transferred from the dry kiln to the factory, and in some manner it left the track, falling on Rows, killing him instantly.

Killed in Runaway.

Winnipeg, May 28.—Robert Abbe of Westwood, Man., near Rapid City, was thrown from a lumber wagon by a runaway team and instantly killed yesterday. He came from England.

THE AMHERSTBURG CYCLONE.

The Loss Is Estimated at Twenty-Five Thousand Dollars.

Amherstburg, May 28.—The property damaged by Thursday's cyclone is estimated at about $25,000. The wind struck the town when most of the people were at their mid-day meal, and owing to this fortunate circumstance no one was killed or injured by flying debris. The area of the storm was three miles wide.

Conscription For Britain.

London, May 28.—The report of the Royal Commission of the volunteer and militia forces practically recommends conscription as the only means of providing a home defence army adequate for the protection of the country in the absence or partial absence of the regular troops. The Commissioners estimate that such a scheme would provide about 350,000 trained men annually at a cost probably less than that of the present militia system.

Canada Should Propose.

Ottawa, May 28.—Hon. A. B. Morine of Newfoundland addressed the Canadian Club of Ottawa last night on the subject of confederation with the Dominion. He repeated substantially the views which he expressed recently in an interview at Toronto. His enthusiasm in favor of union was evident, but his hopefulness was less marked. He held strongly to the opinion that Canada should make a definite proposition to the island.

Decision Reserved.

Toronto, May 28.—Decision was yesterday reserved in the appeal of the Grays in the election irregularities.

How Russia Got Left.

It is related in London that Lord Selborne, first lord of the Admiralty, heard at a dinner party in London at the eleventh hour of the Russian intention to buy two Chilean warships. His Lordship went home by way of the Chilean Embassy and offered a few thousands more than the price named. The sale was effected then and there. So it happened that whereas Japan got two cruisers via the South American power Russia got none.

The easiest way to outwit a liar is to tell the truth.

The Fraternal Societies of Belleville

SHORT SKETCHES OF THEIR HISTORY AND PRESENT STANDING.

THE ODDFELLOWS.

Early on the following morning D. D.G.M. Murney and the Belleville brethren started for Peterboro, leaving the "missionaries" to follow more leisurely. Their leisure, however, instead of being devoted to sleep, as it might well have been, was occupied in giving instructions to the officers of Ontario Lodge. A ten hours' trip over not the smoothest of roads, brought the deputation to Peterboro—away in the back woods, as it might justly be termed in those days. It was late in the evening, but the Belleville brethren, who had arrived an hour or two before, had stirred up the people, and all were ready for business. Two members of No. 2 were resident here, George B. Hall, M.P., and L. Ferguson; and three members of No. 6: Chas. Perry (a brother of J. Ham Perry, now P. G.M. of Ontario), Wm. Claxton and Henry Easton. It was necessary only to confer the Degrees on Bros. Claxton and Ferguson; and the charter members of the new lodge were fully qualified. A room in the Court House was secured, through the kindness of Sheriff Conger (who was initiated the same evening) and Otonabee Lodge, No. 13, duly instituted, with the following officers: George B. Hall, N.G.; Chas. Perry, V.G.; W. Claxton, Secretary; Henry Easton, Treas. Immediately afterwards eight of the leading citizens were initiated, and the work was done in good style. They had the use of the entire Court House; a full supply of paraphernalia had been brought from Belleville; all the brethren were in excellent humor for work; and as the Ritual of those days (it was the old Ritual) allowed considerable scope for a lively ceremony, we may assume that all the candidates received full value for their admission fees.

After riding all day and working nearly all night, it was not surprising that the missionaries should miss the stage Thursday morning, and be compelled to hire a conveyance in which to prosecute their journey to Port Hope. The Belleville brethren now returned home, and the deputation reached their destination late in the afternoon, accompanied by only Bro. W. Fraser, of No. 13.

The appendix to the volume thus describes the rise and fall of Victoria lodge, No. 6:

The first lodge in Canada West was organized mainly through the exertions of Ed. Murney, Esq., M.P.P. for Hastings, a prominent barrister and politician of Belleville. The application for the Charter was signed by Donald Ross, Ed. Murney, J. A. Glassford, Alex. Judd and A. H. Myers. The lodge was opened on the 17th June, 1845, by P.G. D. Milligan, of Montreal, who had been commissioned a special deputy for that purpose. The officers installed for the first term were: Donald Ross, N. G.; E. Murney, V.G.; Alex. Judd, Sec.; Francis McAnnany, Treas; G.C. Bogart, W.; E. W. Holton, C.; H. Corby, R.S.N.G.; J. P. Morden, L.S. N.G.; Thorp, R.S.S.; Yeomans, L.S.S.; James Fitzgibbon, R.S.V.G.; J. H. Meacham, L.S.V.G.; E. L. Herchimer, I.G.; J. K. Lyons, O.G. The lodge had a very prosperous career for some years, large numbers being added to the membership. In February of 1847 a handsome lodge room was dedicated to the service of the Order, in a building especially erected for the purpose. As was customary in those days, the furnishing of the room was decidedly luxurious. As years passed by, however, and the novelty of Oddfellowship wore off, the early enthusiasm abated, and great indifference was shown by the members. The few who attended with any degree of regularity lost heart to a great extent, and we find in March 6th, 1851, a motion introduced to surrender the Charter. This was lost, however, and an attempt made to bring back some of the [illegible], by passing a resolution allowing all the members more than $3 in arrears to give their notes for the amount owed, payable with interest out of future claims for benefits. That did not seem effectual, however, and the motion to surrender was re-introduced about nine months after, and a committee appointed to attend to the matter. No action seems to have been taken; there does not appear to have been life enough left even to surrender. Meetings were held at intervals; sometimes every week; sometimes every month, sometimes not for six months, till the 15th July, 1853. After that date Victoria ceased to exist. The following is a list of Noble Grands of the lodge, in the order in which they filled the chair: Donald Ross, E. Murney, Alex. Judd, Nathan Jones, Francis McAnnany, Smith Bartlett, Merrick Sawyer, E. W. Holton, G. C. Bogart, B. Dougall, G. Neilson, E. P. Holton, S. M. Washburn, Jas. Canniff, Robert Robertson, W. R. Burnham, Jas. Brown, J. D. Pringle, B. Canniff, Henry Harrison, B. F. Davy, W. Lee.

The lodge started in Picton fared little better than Victoria lodge of Belleville, for we find the following reference to it in the appendix:

The charter members of this lodge were qualified for the purpose in Victoria No. 6, of Belleville, to whose exertions its institution was largely due. It was opened at the residence of Mr. D. L. Fairfield, by Bros. Hardie and Dickson on the evening of March 9th; the applicants being D. L. Fairfield, A. D. Dougall, Jas. R. Wright, Alex. Patterson, Wm. H. Wallace and Henry Corby. The first elected officers were: Henry Corby, N.G.; Jas. R. Wright, V.G.; D. L. Fairfield, Secretary, and Adam D. Dougall, Treasurer. The lodge had a fair degree of prosperity for a time. But when it commenced to loan its funds to individual members on their personal security, it adopted a mode of investment which has almost always proved fatal. In its last few years, like most of its sister lodges, it had a poor attendance at meetings. Finally, in December, 1851, they paid up their debts; and having a balance of £89 6s. 3d. left, divided it among themselves, and closed the lodge doors.

Moira Encampment, No. 8, was instituted in Belleville on Feb. 25, 1847, and we are tersely told, "died during or before 1852."

So ended the first era of Oddfellowship in this district. The next era was more lasting and prosperous, but it was not till 1871 that the brethren of the Three Links in this city again took up the work of "Friendship, Love and Truth." We see by the minute book that Belleville Lodge, No. 81, I.O.O.F., was instituted on Wednesday, December 13th, 1871, by Bro. John Gibson, of Stratford, M.W. Grand Master of the Order in Ontario, assisted by the following brethren from Kingston Lodge, No. 59, viz.: P. G. R. Patterson as D. G. Master; P. G. S. Glendorffer as G. Warden; Sec. W. D. Gordon as G. Sec., and Bro. Geo. Lee as G. Treasurer. The following brethren from Kingston were also present: G. W. Andrews, Thos. Dumble and John Topsell.

The first officers of Belleville Lodge, who were also its charter members, were:

R. Tracy, N.G.
W. H. Scholes, V.G.
W. A. Beamish, R.S.
J. A. Post, P.S.
John G. Moore, Treas.

After the officers had been installed the following gentlemen were duly ballotted for and initiated: E. B. Fralick, W. J. Diamond, A. McGinnis, H. L. Bottoms, J. P. Stanton, John Courtney, J. A. Charters, W. J. Smyth, Geo. A. Simpson, G. W. Fanning, Wm. Crowther, Wilson Boulter, Alex. Robertson, J. A. G. Crozier, Thos. McGinnis and William Pike.

After initiating the above members the lodge adjourned for refreshments, and upon reassembling the N.G. appointed the following subordinate officers:

Warden—E. B. Fralick.
Conductor—W. J. Diamond
O.G.—A. McGinnis.
I.G.—H. L. Bottoms.
R.S.N.G.—J. P. Stanton.
L.S.N.G.—John Courtney.
R.S.S.—Alex. Robertson.
L.S.S.—W. J. Smyth.

The V.G. then appointed:

R.S.V.G.—J. A. Charters.
L.S.V.G.—G. W. Fanning.

The above-named officers were duly installed, and the members went home at 1 o'clock in the morning.

Belleville Lodge, No. 81, I.O.O.F., was off to a good start.

At the next meeting the following gentlemen were elected and initiated: Messrs. G. W. Dickson, Geo. Ritchie and Alex. Baker.

At the meeting on Dec. 27th there were proposed Messrs. Hugh Walker, A. McFee, F. M. Clarke, A. W. Cronk, H. C. Snyder, but they were not initiated till the next meeting. And so closes the list of Belleville Lodge's members in the first year of its history.

At the above meeting, viz., on December 27th, Dr. Tracy was appointed lodge physician.

At the meeting on Jan. 10, 1872, the officers were re-elected for the ensuing year.

The lodge then met on Wednesday evenings.

Mr. Hugh Walker was the lodge's first chaplain.

The initiation fee in 1872 was:

From 21 to 25—$5.
From 25 to 30—$6.
From 30 to 35—$8.
From 35 to 40—$10.
From 40 to 45, $1 for each year added.
From 45 to 50, $2 for each year added.

At the meeting on May 15, 1872, the lodge must have changed its meeting night, for the next meeting was on Thursday, May 23, and Thursday continued the meeting night thereafter.

The Business Man

Though swiftly his business keeps bringing in wealth,
He groans, "What's the use, for I've now lost my health.
My friends were more careful, Abbey's Salt took each day,
And they are still young, while I'm old and gray."

When success depends on health, one can't afford to take risks with his digestive organs. A man can't think of business and biliousness together.

Many a serious error in judgement has been made because the brain has been befogged by an upset stomach or a torpid liver.

ABBEY'S SALT, taken in the morning keeps the blood cool, sends the business man to his office with active brain—and the mental and physical power to grasp every problem.

MEN'S DISEASES

There is seldom a day that we are not consulted in regard to a condition that, if we were to have seen it in its early stages, the sufferer would have been relieved, cured and saved considerable expense. This we consider is due to lack of knowledge on the part of the doctor who has previously treated the case; therefore, we say to you, if you are suffering from any disease or condition peculiar to men, or if you have been a victim and been disappointed in not getting a permanent cure elsewhere, we would ask that you come to our office for personal examination or write us for a Question Blank for Home Treatment. We will explain to you OUR SYSTEM OF TREATMENT, which we have originated and developed after our whole life's experience in the treatment of special diseases of men. We will give you, FREE OF CHARGE, an honest and scientific opinion of your case. If we find you are incurable we will honestly tell you so. He, with a companion, whose name could not be ascertained, went out for a canoe ride shortly after 6 o'clock, and when a short distance above Nurse's Hotel, in some manner the canoe was upset and Moore was drowned before his comrade could render him aid. Young Moore was only 24.

JAPANESE INFANTRY WERE LITERALLY MOWN DOWN.

Bloody Rushes in the Japanese Assault on Nanshan Hill.

In Early Charges Every Man Participating Was Shot Down Before He Reached the Russian Trenches—A Stroke of Good Fortune—Nanshan Was Splendidly Defended, But Eventually the Japs Swept up the Hill.

Tokio, May 30.—The Japanese assault on Nanshan Hill was one of the fiercest and bloodiest affairs in modern warfare. In the earlier rushes of the engagement every man participating was shot down before he reached the first line of Russian trenches. It was found necessary to stop these infantry charges and renew the artillery fire from the rear before the final and successful assault on the Russian position could be made. The success of this assault was brought about by one detachment of Japanese troops, more intrepid than their comrades, who succeeded in piercing the Russian line.

A Stroke of Fortune.

A splendid stroke of fortune was the discovery and destruction by the Japanese of the electric wires leading to the mines at the eastern foot of Nanshan Hill. This prevented the Russians from exploding these mines when the Japanese infantry crossed the ground where they had been placed. It is possible that the fortune of the day hinged upon these mines. If the Russians had been able to explode them at the right time the losses among the Japanese troops would have been tremendous, and it is possible also that the Russians would have been able to hold the hill.

Nanshan Splendidly Defended.

Nanshan was splendidly defended. Nearly fifty guns of various sizes were mounted on the various emplacements and there were also numbers of two batteries of quick-firing pieces. This artillery was sheltered behind loopholes trenched on the terraces of the hill. The infantry manning the field pieces ran with them around the hill, thus using these guns for the protection of most important points. The Japanese began the fight by bringing all their field guns into action and concentrating their fire on the emplacements on the hill. By 11 o'clock in the morning the principal Russian batteries had been silenced. The two Russian field batteries then withdrew to Nanquanling Hill, and from there continued the fire on the Japanese until nightfall.

Rushing the Line.

After the Russian batteries had been silenced the Japanese artillery opened on the enemy's trenches, the Japanese infantry advancing meanwhile to within rifle range. The Japanese gradually worked to within 400 metres of the Russian lines, where they encountered wire and other entanglements. They succeeded in discovering an opening in these obstacles, and getting finally to within 200 metres of the Russian trenches they rushed for the line.

Swept Up the Hill.

Several successive charges were made, but every officer and man in the attacking parties was shot down, 20 or 30 metres from the line. The charges were then stopped and the Japanese artillery renewed its preparatory fire on the enemy's position. Towards evening a detachment of Japanese carried a section of the Russian trenches, breaking through the enemy's line. Hundreds of comrades of these men, inspired by their success, sprang forward and then the entire Japanese line swept up the hill, driving the Russians from their positions. It was in the desperate infantry charges that the Japanese sustained the bulk of their losses.

Russians Lost 78 Guns.

Washington, May 30.—The following cablegram has been received at the Japanese legation:

"Tokio, May 29.—Gen. Oku, commanding the army attacking Kinchou, reports that, in the attack on Nanshan Hill, the fourth division formed the right wing, the third division the left wing, and the first division the centre. The enemy consisted of one division of the field army and two batteries of field artillery, besides fortress, artillery and marines. The third division, taking advantage of the enemy's left wing, which was weakened by the bombardment from our fleet at Kinchou Bay, finally succeeded in carrying the enemy's position, while other divisions immediately followed it up. Thereupon, the enemy retreated in confusion, exploding magazines at Tafangshin. The trophies of battle consist of 68 guns and 10 machine guns, besides many other things. Our casualties are estimated at about 3,500. The enemy left on the battlefield over 500 dead bodies.'

Fighting at Dalny Begun.

London, May 30.—Nanquanling and Sanchilipu, strong positions in the outer defences of Port Arthur, have been abandoned by the Russians without a battle, and the victorious Japanese, showing little fatigue from the hard won fights of Kinchou and Nanshan Hill, have begun an attack on Dalny. So run the latest reports from Tokio. It is understood that the garrison in Dalny is not large and the Russians will be unable to send reinforcements in their hurried retreat to Port Arthur. Fifty Russian guns have been captured.

The sacrifice of Nanquanling by the Russians causes considerable surprise. It consisted of a well-placed fort on the top of a high hill, commanding the railroad, and the only way toward Port Arthur. The railway station at Sanchilipu, northwest of Dalny, was blown up by the retreating Muscovites.

Reports of Japanese commanders to the Government at Tokio estimate the losses to the Mikado's army at 3,500 dead and wounded, and the Russian loss is believed to be close to 2,000. More than 500 Russian dead were counted on the field at Nanshan alone.

TO SUPPORT THE NAVY.

Johannesburg Mass Meeting Endorsed the Principle of Colonial Co-operation—Speech By Lord Milner.

London, May 30.—(C.A.P.)—A Johannesburg mass meeting addressed by Mr. Wyatt enthusiastically endorsed the principle of colonial cooperation in the support of the navy. Lord Milner said the colonies were vitally interested in the welfare of the navy and all ought to contribute to its maintenance and expense. The navy should be more than English, and should be as much Canadian, African and Australian. Colonial contributions towards the maintenance of the navy were steps in the direction of Imperial Federation. He did not care whether the Federal Council of the Empire, sat at Ottawa, Sydney or South Africa, provided in the future the British people held together.

Should Have Representation.

Sir George Farrar claimed that the Transvaal in return for its naval contribution should have representatian on the Defence Committee.

The Standard declares that Lord Milner's speech was at the psychological moment. Following on the startling report of the Royal Commission that something must be done towards giving all the inhabitants of the King's dominions a full understanding of the problem, it says that Canada has not yet mastered the proposition, but it has been comprehended by Australia, the Cape, Natal and Newfoundland.

FOUGHT ELEVEN HOURS.

British Then Expelled the Thibetans From Village of Palla.

London, May 30.—The Daily Mail's correspondent at Chumbi, India, says the British expedition, on May 26, after a fight of 11 hours, expelled the Thibetans from the village of Palla, close to the British camp at Gyangtse. A British lieutenant and three Sepoys were killed and three officers and nine men were wounded. The Thibetans suffered heavily and thirty-seven of them were taken prisoners. Palla is a walled stronghold, from which the Thibetans started building works with a view of outflanking the British position.

Thibetan Investment Raised.

Gyangtse, Thibet, May 30.—The Thibetans have abandoned their investment of the British rear and communication with the mission has been restored.

Give Slaves For Arms.

Berlin, May 30.—A writer in The Vossiche Zeitung yesterday asserts that the rebellious Herreros in German Southwest Africa pay the English and Portuguese traders for weapons and the ammunition in slaves as well as in cattle.

But even if there is water standing on Victoria Park, we fail to see why certain good people should have "hooked away" from Sunday School yesterday afternoon in order to look at it.

The manager of the Associated Press, Mr. Melville E. Stone, is alleged to have stated that were it not for women not a line of scandal would be printed in an American newspaper. The Montreal Gazette supports this proposition, adding: "The charge is a hard one, but its truthfulness is to a certain extent borne out by the fact that of the many newspapers published particularly for men, and which enjoy very few female readers, scandal is conspicuous by its absence. They print only the real news."

GOOD WORD FOR THE COOK.

(Bulletin, Sydney.)

There's a great fuss made over singers, writers, painters, players, dancers and jockeys. These people have had the run of illustrated papers and social columns long enough. If there were more commendation given the woman who cooks a wholesome dinner for a man, and less eclat accorded the one who, after it, entertains him by placing her heels above her head, it would be better for the community at large.

This is the kind of political literature they publish in the United States, the following being from Town Topics, New York:

When Willie Hearst is President
And in the White House lives
And Mrs. Hearst—that's Millicent—
A staid reception gives,

Will she, to entertain her guests,
Dance in a French quadrille?
The kind she did upon the stage
Before she wedded Bill?

'Twas in "The Girl from Paris" that
She hopped o'er sister's back!
When Willie Hearst is President
Will she retain that knack?

If she does 'twill be delightful,
It really will be grand;
She surely would be an ideal

MORE OF SIFTON'S SILLINESS.

(Ottawa Citizen.)

The City of Ottawa is at present supporting fifty penniless Austrian immigrants who have been dumped into Canada by steamship companies and are being passed on from one city to the next to feed and care for. Surely this country has enough vagrants to look after without the Government bonusing steamship companies and immigration agents to unload more on us.

The Iron Moulders' Union of Montreal have become dissatisfied with the Labor Gazette published by the Labor Department of the Dominion Government, and will ask the Government to abolish it. It is claimed that the Labor Gazette is published in the interest of the American and Canadian Manufacturers' Associations. If the Montreal news published in the Labor Gazette is as reliable as that formerly published in relation to Belleville, the Montreal moulders are strictly correct in their contention that the publication is no good. The Labor Gazette, in fact, is nothing but a medium for glorifying the Laurier Government, and the sooner the waste of public money in connection with its publication is stopped the better.

OUT-OF-DATE SERMONS.

(New York Outlook.)

The message that is delivered Sunday after Sunday from the average pulpit is vapid and meaningless to the man of affairs of to-day. Your man of the present requires a different preaching than did his father. He wants you to say something and to say it without flourishes and in as short a time as possible. He has no time or patience with theories.

SUDDEN DEATH ON SATURDAY EVENING.

MRS. DAVID M. GREEN FALLS A VICTIM TO HEART DISEASE.

At a few minutes after 7 o'clock on Saturday evening, death came suddenly to Mrs. David M. Green, at the family residence, Dundas St. The deceased had been in rather poor health for some time, but their was no indication that the end was near. She had shortly before death partaken sparingly of the evening meal and was sitting upon a bed upstairs when suddenly she fell to the floor. Some members of the family immediately hastened to her assistance, but the vital spark had fled. Heart disease had done its work. Mrs. Green was born at Rockwood, near Guelph, in the year 1852, being thus in her 52nd year. Nearly all her life she had resided in the west. Three years ago the family took up their residence in Belleville. The deceased was a member of the John Street Presbyterian Church, and esteemed by all who knew her for the Christian spirit she exemplified. A husband and a family of three sons and two daughters are called upon to mourn the loss of a devoted wife and loving mother. The sons are Lorne, of London; John and Charles, of this city; the daughters are Misses Edna and and Marguerite, both at home.

MISSIONARY CONVENTION AT SHANNONVILLE.

LADIES OF THE BELLEVILLE DISTRICT HAVE A PLEASANT AND PROFITABLE TIME.

A most interesting and helpful convention of the Women's Missionary Society of the Belleville district was held in Shannonville Methodist Church on Friday, May 27. The opening exercises at 10 a.m. were conducted by Mrs. W. Casey, District Organizer. A cordial address of welcome was read by Mrs. (Rev.) Coombe, of Shannonville, and replied to in a pleasing manner by Mrs. (Rev.) Thompson, of Foxboro.

Mrs. J. H. Young was again chosen Secretary and was given a standing vote of thanks for her efficient services for the past year.

Encouraging reports were given by nine different auxiliaries and four Mission Bands, all showing increase in interest, membership and funds. A number of memorials were received, and these were well discussed. This closed the morning session, and the Shannonville ladies invited the delegates and visitors to their homes and entertained them royally.

Mrs. (Rev.) Real opened the afternoon session at 1.30 with a Bible reading on Christian Stewardship, showing that we were only obeying a Divine command, and doing our duty when we gave systematically and proportionately unto the Lord.

The praise service was conducted by Mrs. (Rev.) Brown. Many testified to the goodness of God and the help the W.M.S. had been to them.

Mrs. Platt gave a most interesting address on the women of Turkey in the interior, which was appreciated by all.

Miss Springer, of the Deaconess' Home, Toronto, gave an outline of the grand work done by that society. A motion was made and carried that an extra collection be taken to help in the building fund of the new home, which amounted to $14.00.

Delightful music was contributed during the sessions by Miss Holton, Miss Landers and Miss Platt.

Rev. Coombe gave greetings from the district meetings and Mrs. (Rev.) Maybee from the W.C.T.U.

The collection for the Auxiliary amounted to $19.95.

Rev. Mr. Maybee closed the convention with the Benediction and the members departed to their homes with fresh courage and enthusiasm for another year's work.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"REUBEN IN NEW YORK" TO-NIGHT.

In "Reuben in New York" which Manager John Curran will present here to-night, we are told that the author has surpassed all expectation and produced a farce a long ways better than that of any upon the stage. It is said to be screamingly funny and to contain a succession of droll situations and a libretto absolutely corruscating with smart squibs associated with the most fanciful and amusing of plots. The incidents, as may be surmised, depict the doings of Reuben on his trip to New York. Manager Curran, we are told, will stage this production most gorgeously and will cast his characters with players whose names will be a guarantee that will rank among the best in their profession.

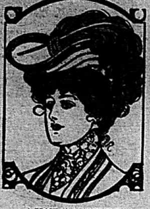
FOR DRESSY WEAR.

Chiffon Cloth Has Come to Stay. Black and White Effects.

The chou will soon have to give way to the little double bow which is being seen on so many waists and gowns.

In jeweled effects bluish and greenish tints are favored, and these are mounted in dull rose gold. Green in all its shades is becoming once more popular, and it is a good thing, for few other tints look as well for spring and summer wear.

Chiffon cloth has come to stay, for it is dainty as well as serviceable and can be finely tucked and shirred. Chiffon dresses are now being made of faint colorings in dull browns and moleskin tints. Shirring is the almost invariable trimming. Dyed lace forms a frequent trimming, and a bertha or cape collar of this is always handsome.



A BLACK AND WHITE HAT.

The black cloth gown made of very fine material is extremely chic, particularly when it is trimmed with openwork embroidery which allows glimpses of a bright taffeta lining to be seen, such as a deep red or green. Among the smartest novelties are Monte Carlo toques in the long pointed shape, all covered with fruit—currants, raisins, plums even—and draped with lace.

The beauty of many of the new gowns consists in their carefully shaded trimmings.

The black hat trimmed with black and white ostrich feathers is always smart, whether in summer or winter.

The illustration shows a white straw hat trimmed with a single black feath-

AFTER DEATH.

Poem Which Marks the Highest Achievement of Sir Edwin Arnold.

He who died at Azan sends
This to comfort faithful friends—
Faithful friends! it lies, I know,
Pale and white and cold as snow;
And ye say, "Abdullah's dead!"
Weeping at my feet and head.
I can see your falling tears,
I can hear your cries and prayers,
Yet I smile and whisper this:
"I am not that thing you kiss;
Cease your tears and let it lie;
It was mine, it is not I."

Sweet friends! what the women lave
For its last bed in the grave
Is a tent which I am quitting,
Is a garment no more fitting,
Is a cage from which at last
Like a hawk my soul hath passed.
Love the inmate, not the room;
The wearer, not the garb; the plume
Of the falcon, not the bars
Which kept him from the splendid stars.

Loving friends! be wise, and dry
Straightway every weeping eye.
What ye lift upon the bier
Is not worth a wistful tear.
'Tis an empty seashell, one
Out of which the pearl is gone.

The shell is broken, it lies there;
The pearl, the all, the soul, is here.
'Tis an earthen jar whose lid
Allah sealed, the while it hid
That treasure of his treasury,
A mind which loved him; let it lie!
Let the shard be earth's once more,
Since the gold shines in his store!
Allah Mu'hid, Allah most good!
Now thy grace is understood.

Now the long, long darkness ends,
Yet ye wail, my foolish friends,
While the man whom ye call "dead,"
In unbroken bliss instead
Lives, and loves you; lost, 'tis true
By any light that shines for you;
But in light ye cannot see
Of unfulfilled felicity,
And enlarging Paradise,
Lives the life that never dies.

Farewell, friends! Yet not farewell;
Where I am ye, too, shall dwell.
I am gone before your face
A heart-beat's time, a grey ant's pace.
When ye come where I have stepped,
Ye will marvel why ye wept;
Ye will know, by true love taught,
That here is all, and there is naught.

Weep awhile, if ye are fain—
Sunshine still must follow rain!
Only not at death, for death—
Now I see—is that first breath
Which our souls draw when we enter
Life, that is of all life centre.

Know ye Allah's law is love,
Viewed from Allah's throne above;
Be ye firm of trust, and come
Faithful onward to your home!
'La Allah illa Allah! Yea,
Mu'hid! Restorer! Sovereign!" Say!

He who died at Azan gave
This to those that made his grave.

Mind is the beginning of civilization, but the ends and fruitage thereof are of the heart.

Fight Stops Train.

Vienna, May 30.—While 300 Hungarian recruits were waiting for the train at Neusohl a quarrel was started among some of their number. The belligerents took possession of the permanent way as their battlefield, and for three-quarters of an hour all traffic was at a standstill while the recruits fought with the utmost fury, regardless of everything about them. The fury of the fight may be gauged by the fact that two of the recruits were killed and twenty-eight received serious injuries.

To Oppose Mr. Rockefeller.

London, May 30.—At the meeting of the Broxburn Oil Company at Glasgow Saturday the chairman, Sir David Richmond, said that there was a prospect of a Dutch-Russian combine, backed by the house of Rothschild, to oppose the Standard Oil Company of America in European markets.

Playing Down to Him.

Young couple (who expect the visit of a very miserly relative, from whom they have expectations) are clearing the room of every sign of luxury. Wife (earnestly)—We must do all we can to make uncle feel at home. Husband (caustically)—Then we had better let the fire out.—Punch.

The Korean Wife.

In Korea the rooms of a wife or mother are the sanctuary of any man who breaks the law. Unless for treason or for one other crime he cannot be forced to leave those rooms, and so long as he remains under the protection of his wife's apartments he is secure from the officers of the law.

Bound to Be Comfortable.

An author who had been jailed for debt wrote to his wife: "Do me the favor to send me my Shakespeare, my nightgown and slippers, my pipe and all letters asking for autographs and containing stamps. I want to be comfortable and at peace with the world."

Kilkenny castle is one of the oldest inhabited houses in the world, many of the rooms being much as they were 800 years ago.

"MUSCLES IN KNOTS"

Joints all stiffened and swollen—dagger-like pains, sufferings that no man can describe—this is the experience of thousands of Rheumatism's victims.

Do you know that there isn't a case, no matter how acute or how long standing, that South American Rheumatic Cure will not relieve almost in a trice and work a permanent cure. Its action on a system so disordered is marvellous. It works quickly, quietly, effectually and harmlessly, and leaves no bad after effects. It does not cure all diseases, but it does cure rheumatism.

Russia Gives China Terms Upon Which She Will Evacuate.

Virtual Admission That Japan Will Drive the Russians From That Chinese Province—Japs Are Equally Sure, and Inform China That Port Arthur Will Soon Fall and Asks If China Will Resume or Shall Japan Hold It—Kinchou Losses.

London, May 30.—The Tientsin correspondent of The Daily Express says that Paul Lessar, the Russian Minister to China, has informed Prince Ching that Russia will finally evacuate Newchwang, provided China grants a concession for a railway from Kalgan across Chinese Mongolia to Kiakhta, 80 miles from Lake Baikal, or that Russia will evacuate Manchuria outright if China leases the Ili territory to Russia.

Jap Demand on China.

London, May 30.—The Standard's Tientsin correspondent telegraphs that Uchida, the Japanese minister at Pekin, has demanded an immediate reply to the inquiry previously sent to the Waiwupu, as to whether China is prepared to hold and administer the territory the Japanese have conquered, otherwise Japan must appeal to other powers to undertake the responsibility at the expense of China.

The Daily Telegraph has a despatch from Shanghai that says it is reported there that Minister Uchida has notified the Chinese Government at Pekin that Port Arthur will soon be captured, and has asked whether China is ready to resume possession of the district, or shall Japan hold it.

Russian Letters Captured.

Tokio, May 30.—Certain Russian correspondence, which has been intercepted by the Japanese at the blockade of Port Arthur, gives the information that some Russian torpedo boat destroyers have been sunk by mines outside of Port Arthur, as well as the details of the placing by the Russians of the mines which effected the destruction of the Japanese battleship Hatsuse, May 15. The letters were taken from a junk seized by the Sixth Japanese squadron, blockading Port Arthur. One letter said that a torpedo boat destroyer had successfully placed a series of mines during the night which preceded the loss of the Hatsuse. How many Russian torpedo boats were lost is not mentioned, but it is indicated that there were at least two.

Dalny Practically Evacuated.

Che Foo, May 30.—Dalny has been practically evacuated, according to the statements of Sikh and Russian refugees arriving here yesterday by junk. THE MYSTERY OF AGATHA WEBB.

By Anna Katharine Green,

Author of "The Leavenworth Case," "Lost Man's Lane," "Hand and Ring," Etc., Etc. Copyright, 1900, by Anna Katharine Green.

CHAPTER I.

"MURDER!"

THE dance was over. From the great house on the hill the guests had all departed, and only the musicians remained. As they filed out through the ample doorway, with their instruments under their arms, the first faint streak of early dawn became visible in the east. One of them, a lank, plain featured young man of ungainly aspect, but penetrating eye, called the attention of the others to it.

"Look!" said he. "There is the daylight! This has been a gay night for Sutherlandtown."

"Too gay," muttered another, starting aside as the slight figure of a young man coming from the house behind them rushed hastily by. "Why, who's that?"

As they one and all had recognized the person thus alluded to, no one answered till he had dashed out of the gate and disappeared in the woods on the other side of the road. Then they all spoke at once.

"It's Mr. Frederick!"

"He seems in a desperate hurry."

"He trod on my toes."

"Did you hear the words he was muttering as he went by?"

As only the last question was calculated to rouse an interest, it alone received attention.

"No; what were they? I heard him say something, but I did not catch the words."

"He wasn't talking to you or me, either, but I have ears that can hear an eye wink. He said, 'Thank God, this terrible night is over!' Think of that! After such a dance and such a spread, he calls this night terrible and thanks God that it is over. I thought he was one to enjoy this kind of thing more than most folks."

"So did I."

"And so did I."

The five musicians exchanged looks, then huddled in a group at the gate.

"He has quarreled with his sweetheart," suggested one.

"I'm not surprised at that," declared another. "I never thought it would be a match."

"Shame if it were!" muttered the ungainly youth who had spoken first.

As the subject of this comment was the son of the gentleman whose house they were just leaving they necessarily spoke low, but their tones were rife with curiosity and it was evident that the topic deeply interested them. One of the five who had not previously spoken now put in a word.

"I saw him when he first led out Miss Page to dance, and I saw him again when he stood up opposite her in the last quadrille, and I tell you, boys, there was a mighty deal of difference in the way he looked at her the last time from what he did the first. You wouldn't have thought him the same man. Reckless young fellows like him are not to be caught by dimples only. They want cash."

"Or family, at least, and she hasn't either. But what a pretty girl she is! Some fellow as rich as he and as well connected would be satisfied with her good looks alone."

"Good looks!" High scorn was observable in this exclamation, which was made by the young man who I have before characterized as ungainly. "I refuse to acknowledge that she has any good looks. On the contrary, I consider her plain."

"Oh, oh!" burst in protest from more than one mouth. "And why does she have every fellow in the room dangling after her, then?" asked the player on the yellow flageolet.

"But she hasn't a regular feature."

"What difference does that make when it isn't her features you notice, but herself."

"I don't like her."

A laugh followed this.

"That won't trouble her. Sweetwater. Sutherland does, if you don't, and that's much more to the point. And he'll marry her yet. He can't help it. Why, she'd witch the devil into leading her to the altar if she took a notion to have him for her bridegroom."

"There would be consistency in that," muttered the fellow just addressed. "But, Mr. Frederick"—

"Hush! There's some one on the doorstep. Why, it's she!"

They all glanced back. The graceful figure of a young girl dressed in white was to be seen leaning toward them from the open doorway. Behind her shone a blaze of light—the candles not having been yet extinguished in the hall—and against this brilliant background her slight form, with all its bewitching outlines, stood out in plain relief. There was an anxious bend to it, however, which none of them had ever observed in it before.

"Who was that?" she began in a high, almost strident voice, totally out of keeping with the sensuous curves of her strange, sweet face. But the question remained incomplete, as well as unanswered, for at that moment her attention, as well as that of the men lingering at the gate, was attracted by the sound of hurrying feet and confused cries coming up the hill.

"Murder, murder!" was the word panted out by more than one harsh voice, and in another instant a dozen men and boys came rushing into sight in a state of such excitement that the five musicians recoiled from the gate, and one of them went so far as to start back toward the house. As he did so he noticed a curious thing. The young woman whom they had all perceived standing in the door a moment before had vanished, yet she was known to profess the keenest curiosity of any one in town.

"Murder, murder!" A terrible and unprecedented cry in this old, God fearing town. Then came in hoarse explanation from the jostling group as they stopped at the gate: "Mrs. Webb has been killed! Stabbed with a knife! Tell Mr. Sutherland!"

"Mrs. Webb!"

As the musicians heard this name, so honored and so universally beloved, they to a man uttered a cry. Mrs. Webb! Why, it was impossible. Shouting in their turn for Mr. Sutherland, they all crowded forward.

"Not Mrs. Webb!" they protested. "Who could have the daring or the heart to kill her?" "God knows," answered a voice from the highway. "But she's dead—we've just seen her!"

"Then it's the old man's work," quavered a piping voice well known as that of the village shoemaker's. "I've always said he would turn on his best friend some day. 'Sylum's the best place for folks as has lost their wits. I"—

But here a hand was put over his mouth, and the rest of the words became an inarticulate gurgle. Mr. Sutherland had just appeared on the porch, and these were not men to let their voices be heard in his presence.

He was a superb looking man, with an expression of mingled kindness and dignity that invariably awakened both awe and admiration in the spectator. No man in the country—I was going to say no woman—was more beloved, nor was any held in higher esteem. Yet he could not control his only son, as every one within ten miles of the hill well knew.

At this moment his face showed both pain and shock.

"What name are you shouting out there?" he brokenly demanded. "Agatha Webb."

"Is Agatha Webb hurt?"

"Yes, sir; killed," repeated a half dozen voices at once. "We've just come from the house. All the town is up. Some say her husband did it."

"No, no!" was Mr. Sutherland's decisive, though half inaudible response. "Philemon Webb might end his own life, but not Agatha's. It was the money"—

Here he caught himself up, and, raising his voice, addressed the crowd of villagers more directly.

"Wait," said he, "and I will go back with you. Where is Frederick?" he demanded of such members of his own household as stood about him.

No one knew.

"I wish some one would find my son. I want him to go into town with me."

"He's over in the woods there," volunteered a voice from without.

"In the woods!" repeated the father in a surprised tone.

"Yes, sir; we all saw him go. Shall we sing out to him?"

"No, no; I will manage very well without him." And taking up his hat Mr. Sutherland stepped out again upon the porch.

Suddenly he stopped. A hand had been laid on his arm and an insinuating voice was murmuring in his ear:

"Do you mind if I go with you? I will not make any trouble."

It was the same young lady we have seen before.

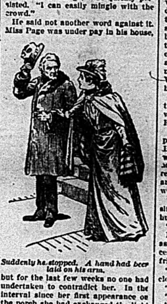
The old gentleman frowned, he who never frowned, and remarked shortly:

"A scene of murder is no place for women."

The face upturned to his remained unmoved.

"I think I will go," she quickly persisted. "I can easily mingle with the crowd."

He said not another word against it. Miss Page was under pay in his house, but for the last few weeks no one had undertaken to contradict her. In the interval since her first appearance on the porch she had exchanged the light dress in which she had danced at the ball for a darker and much more serviceable one, and perhaps this token of her determination may have had its influence in silencing him. He joined the crowd, and together they moved down hill. This was too much for the servants of the house. One by one they, too, left the house till it stood absolutely empty. Jerry snuffed out the candles and shut the front door, but the side entrance stood wide open, and into this entrance, as the last footstep died out on the hillside, passed a slight and resolute figure. It was that of the musician who had questioned Miss Page's attractions.



Suddenly he stopped. A hand had been laid on his arm.

CHAPTER II.

A BLOODY SLEEVE.

Sutherlandtown was a seaport. The village, which was a small one, consisted of one long street running parallel with the coast and numerous cross streets running down from the hillside and ending on the wharfs. On one of the corners thus made stood the Webb house, with its front door on the main street and its side door on one of the hillside lanes. As the group of men and boys who had been in search of Mr. Sutherland entered this last mentioned lane they could pick out this house from all the others, as it was the only one in which a light was still burning. Mr. Sutherland lost no time in entering upon the scene of the tragedy. As his imposing figure emerged from the darkness and paused on the outskirts of the crowd blocking up every entrance to the house, a murmur of welcome went up, after which a way was made for him to the front door.

But before he could enter some one plucked him by the sleeve.

"Look up!" whispered a voice into his ear.

He did so and saw a woman's body hanging half out of an upper window. It hung limp, and the sight made him sick notwithstanding his threescore years of experience.

"Who's that?" he cried. "That's not Agatha Webb's head and shoulders."

"No, it's Batsy, the cook. She's dead too. We left her where we found her for the coroner to see."

"But this is horrible!" murmured Mr. Sutherland. "Has there been a butcher here?"

As he uttered these words he felt another quick pressure on his arm. Looking down, he saw leaning against him the form of a young woman, but before he could address her she had started upright again and was moving on with the throng. It was Miss Page.

"It was the sight of this woman hanging from the window which first drew attention to the house," volunteered a man who was standing as a sort of guardian at the main gateway. "Some of the sailors' wives who had been to the wharfs to see their husbands off on the ship that sailed at daybreak saw it as they came up the lane on their way home and gave the alarm. Without that we might not yet have known what had happened."

"But Mrs. Webb?"

"Come in and see."

There was a board fence about the simple yard within which stood the humble house forever after to be pointed out as the scene of Sutherlandtown's most heartrending tragedy. In this fence was a gate, and through this gate now passed Mr. Sutherland and his would be companion, Miss Page. A path bordered by lilac bushes led the way to the house, the door of which stood wide open. As soon as Mr. Sutherland entered upon this path a man appeared from the house and came directly toward him. It was Amos Fenton, the constable.

"Ah, Mr. Sutherland," said he, "sad business, a very sad business! But what little girl have you there?"

"This is Miss Page, my housekeeper's niece. She would come. Inquisitiveness, the cause. I do not approve of it."

"Miss Page must remain on the doorstep. We allow no one inside excepting yourself," he said respectfully, in recognition of the fact that nothing of importance was ever undertaken in Sutherlandtown without the presence of Mr. Sutherland.

Miss Page courtesied, looking so bewitching in the fresh morning light that the tough old constable scratched his chin in grudging admiration. But he did not reconsider his determination. Seeing this, she accepted her defeat gracefully and moved aside to where the bushes offered her more or less protection from the curiosity of those about her. Meanwhile Mr. Sutherland had stepped into the house.

He found himself in a small hall with a staircase in front and an open door at the left. On the threshold of this open door a man stood, who at sight of him doffed his hat. Passing by this man, Mr. Sutherland entered the room beyond. A table spread with eatables met his view, beside which, in an attitude which struck him at the moment as peculiar, sat Philemon Webb, the well known master of the house.

Astonished at seeing his old friend in this room and in such a position, he was about to address him when Mr. Fenton stopped him.

"Wait!" said he. "Take a look at poor Philemon before you disturb him. He was sitting just as you see him when we broke into the house a half hour ago, and we have let him be for reasons you can easily appreciate. Examine him closely, Mr. Sutherland; he won't notice it."

"But what ails him? Why does he sit crouched against the table? Is he hurt, too?"

"No; look at his eyes."

Mr. Sutherland stopped and pushed aside the long gray locks that half concealed the countenance of his aged friend.

"Why," he cried startled, "they are closed! He isn't dead?"

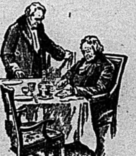
"No; he is asleep."

"Asleep?"

"Yes. He was asleep when we came in and he is asleep yet. Some of the neighbors wanted to awake him, but I would not let them. His wits are not strong enough to bear a sudden shock."

"No, no, poor Philemon! But that he should sit sleeping here while she—but what do these bottles mean and this parade of supper in the room they were not accustomed to eat in?"

"We don't know. It has not been eaten, you see. He has swallowed a glass of port, but that is all. The other glasses have had no wine in them, nor have the victuals been touched."



"I don't see anything but this poor sleeping man," he began.

"Seats for three and only one occupied," murmured Mr. Sutherland. "Strange! Could he have expected guests?"

"It looks like it. I don't know that his wife allowed him such privileges. But she was always too good to him and I fear has paid for it with her life."

"Nonsense! He never killed her. Had his love been anything short of the worship it was, he stood in too much awe of her to lift his hand against her, even in his most demented moments."

"I don't trust men of uncertain wits," returned the other. "You have not noticed everything that is to be seen in this room."

Mr. Sutherland, recalled to his duty by these words, looked quickly about him. With the exception of the table and what was on and by it there was nothing else in the room. Naturally his glance returned to Philemon Webb.

To be continued.

Nothing so suddenly obstructs the perspiration as sudden transitions from heat to cold. Heat rarifies the blood, quickens the circulation and increases the perspiration, but when these are suddenly checked the consequences must be bad. The most common cause of disease is obstructed perspiration, or what commonly goes by the name of catching cold. Coughs, colds, sore throat, etc., if attended to in time are easily subdued, but if allowed to run their own course, generally prove the fore-runner of more dangerous diseases. Nine-tenths of the consumptives date their affliction from a NEGLECTED COLD, and the diseases that are caused by wet feet, damp clothes, or exposure are more numerous than are generally supposed. One of the most efficacious medicines for all diseases of the throat and lungs is Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It promotes a free and easy expectoration, which frees the lungs from viscid phlegm by changing the secretions from a diseased to a healthy state.

Only 900 people in 1,000,000 die of old age.

Dr. J. D. Kellog's Dysentery Cordial is a speedy cure for dysentery, diarrhoea, cholera, summer complaint, sea sickness and complaints incidental to children teething. It gives immediate relief to those suffering from the effects of indiscretion in eating unripe fruit, cucumbers, etc. It acts with wonderful rapidity and never fails to conquer the disease. No one need fear cholera if they have a bottle of this medicine convenient.

Few men realize what large dividends they can draw on kindness.

How to Cleanse the System.—Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are the result of scientific study of the effects of extracts of certain roots and herbs upon the digestive organs. Their use has demonstrated in many instances that they regulate the action of the liver and kidneys, purify the blood, and carry off all morbid accumulations from the system. They are easy to take, and their action is mild and beneficial.

Cut the trunk, the branches fall of themselves.

Always on Hand.—Mr. Thomas H. Porter, Lower Ireland, P.Q., writes: "My son, 18 months old, had croup so bad that nothing gave him relief until a neighbor brought me some of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, which I gave him, and in six hours he was cured. It is the best medicine I ever used, and I would not be without a bottle of it in my house."

A tailor made woman is one of the noblest works of man.

Messrs. Northrop & Lyman Co. are the proprietors of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, which is now being sold in immense quantities throughout the Dominion. It is welcomed by the suffering invalid everywhere with emotions of delight, because it banishes pain and gives instant relief. This valuable specific for almost "every ill that flesh is heir to," is valued by the sufferer as more precious than gold. It is the elixir of life to many a wasted frame. To the farmer it is indispensable, and it should be in every house.

A self made man has his private opinion as to what is the noblest work of God.

Give Holloway's Corn Cure a trial. It removed ten corns from one pair of feet without any pain. What it has done once it will do again.

Look out for the man with an imagination strong enough to draw a dollar out of your pocket.

A Wonderful Cure. — Mr. David Smith, Coe Hill, Ont., writes: "For the benefit of others I wish to say a few words about Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery. About a year ago I took a very severe cough, had a virulent sore on my lips, was bad with dyspepsia, constipation and general debility. I tried almost every conceivable remedy, outwardly and inwardly, to cure the sore, but all to no purpose. I had often thought of trying Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, so I got a bottle, and when I had used about one half the sore showed evident signs of healing. By the time that bottle was done it had about disappeared and my general health was improving fast. I was always of a very bilious habit and had used quinine and lemon juice with very little effect. But since using three bottles of the Vegetable Discovery the biliousness is entirely gone and my general health is excellent. I am 60 years old. Parties using it should continue it for some time after they think they are cured. It is by far the best health restorer I know."

The truthfulness of what a man says doesn't always depend on the amount of noise he makes in saying it.

It does not seem as though there were as many as thirty-one days in any month, the way rent day rolls around.

Some second thoughts occur several minutes later.

The Beautiful House

The woodwork of your house, the furniture, the lacquered, japanned and enameled iron work, may be new, but if you will use "Liquid Veneer" it will become sparkling in brilliancy and attractive as a diamond. And if the same is faded, scratched, or if the varnish has gone the way of all flesh, "Liquid Veneer" will resurrect the whole scheme. It will take that half sick furniture and put a new face on it that is as brilliant as the sun. It is not a "furniture polish," it is not sticky, never catches the dust; it is easily applied in a few minutes with a cloth, no rubbing is necessary. It is a cleaner, disinfectant, then imparts a most bright and finished surface. Try a sample bottle only 5c, 1-2 pint bottle 50c. For sale only by,

THE MAPLE LEAF.

First Worn as an Emblem by Native Canadians in 1860.

The fifth volume of the papers and records of the Ontario Historical Society, just issued from the press, contains an unusually interesting series of papers contributed from time to time to the transactions of the association. The most interesting of the documents published in this issue of the records is The Globe's report of a public meeting held in the St. Lawrence Hall on the twenty-first of August, 1860, "to take measures with a view to native Canadians taking part with distinctive badges in the procession on the occasion of the arrival in Toronto of the Prince of Wales," now King Edward VII. The meeting was well attended, and among those present were many prominent citizens, including the Rev. Dr. Ryerson, Mr. David Reesor, Col. Denison, Mr. W. H. Boulton, Mr. J. H. Morris, and Dr. Richardson, who still survives. Several resolutions were adopted with a view to occupying in a systematic and creditable way the place assigned to "native Canadians" by the program committee and one of them asked that "all joining the procession should wear the maple leaf as an emblem of the land of their birth." The request was very generally complied with, not merely in Toronto, but wherever the Prince subsequently traveled in Canada.

It is interesting to note that some exception was taken to the inclusion of only "native" Canadians in the invitation, but Mr. Morris was ready with an admirable defence. The Prince was coming to this country on the invitation of the "Canadian" Legislature, and he should be able, on his return to his native land, to say that he had seen "Canadians." This he could not do if the people turned out "in one uniform mass without banners to distinguish those who were born in Canada from those who were not. The three national societies and other societies not of Canadian origin will occupy in great numbers a prominent position on the day of the Prince's arrival, showing that they are English, Irish, or Scotch, or of such descent; in other words, that they are not 'Canadians'; we walk in the same procession in a separate body to show that we are 'Canadians,' and not that we love the British Isles less, but 'Canadians' more. This step will lay the foundation of a nationality and give to the inhabitants of 'Canada' a distinguishing name."

It is needless to call attention here to the manner in which this prediction of forty-four years ago has come true. Mr. Morris, who was a man of high culture and of exceptional precision of speech, knew exactly what he meant by "nationality," and few Canadians, especially those who are "native and to the manner born," will have any difficulty in understanding him. Nor is it necessary to say much about the effective way in which Mr. Alexander Muir's stirring lyric, "The Maple Leaf Forever," has been the means of diffusing and intensifying Canadian national sentiment.

Newfoundland's Trade.

In view of the probability of Newfoundland soon becoming a Province of the Dominion, its trade statistics will be of interest to Canadian manufacturers. The latest figures at hand are those for the fiscal year 1902. In that year Newfoundland's total foreign trade amounted to $17,389,209 as compared with a trade of $10,415,796 for the fiscal year 1898, an increase of over 66 per cent. in four years. The imports were valued at $5,188,863 in 1898 and at $7,836,685 in 1902, an increase of over 51 per cent., while the exports were valued at $5,226,933 in 1898 and at $9,552,524 in 1902, an increase of over 82 per cent. in four years. In 1898 the exports exceeded the imports by $38,070; in 1902 the exports exceeded the imports by $1,615,839.

The island of Newfoundland has an area about one-third larger than that of Scotland, and the colony also owns the territory of Labrador with its extensive Atlantic coast line. It is rich in mineral resources, has vast timber areas as yet untouched by the axe, and its fisheries are of immense value.

Combinations of Purple.

Royal purple is one of the most appropriate shades for combined day and evening wear. It is not a color that can be worn by all, but with those who can wear it it is worthy of consideration. A glorious mixture is composed of purple and a peculiar shade of bright pink. Strange as it may sound, this is really a becoming combination when softened by lace and can be worn by many who cannot wear purple alone.

MAGNIFICENT SPECTACLE.

JERUSALEM AND THE CRUSADES REGALLY DEPICTED BY RINGLING BROTHERS.

Ringling Brothers' World's Greatest Shows lead their huge circus programme this year with a magnificent dramatic spectacle, Jerusalem and the Crusades, involving a cast of 1,200 characters, a ballet of 300, and a singing chorus of 200. More than 2,000 costumes, designed and made by Parisian artists of world-wide fame, are worn, and the music, composed especially for this grand production, is rendered by the largest and only portable grand organ ever made, and a selected band of fifty soloists. The musical embellishment is peculiarly effective and permeates the entire production. Never in the history of the circus has there been offered to the public a spectacle of the magnitude, the originality and fascinating feature of this stupendous performance. No circus in existence could afford the fabulous expenditure of money invested by the Ringling Brothers in this radiant and dramatic interpretation of the beautiful and dramatic stories of the Crusades. The subject portrays life in the ennobling days of chivalry, when loyalty, bravery, justice and gentleness went hand in hand, and courtesy to an enemy and woman was a cheerful duty. The men and women of this age are inspiring pictures of devotion to high ideals, and depict in glorious flower the sentiment of chivalry from which the stirring crusades sprung. This spectacle opens upon a brilliant scene of preparation for the Crusades, multitudes move about the vast space before the great cathedral of Claremont, France, from whence the invading army started, scanning the tournament notices and instruments to be used by the contesting knights in the tourney, which is to celebrate the departure of the warrior hosts. Bejeweled and enpurpled royalty; obsequious servitors, gaily garbed; ecclesiastics, sparkling with precious ensignia of rank; mounted knights, with shields and helmets inlaid with gold and precious stones; monks, seminarians and other lowly children of church devotion and work; court ladies in daintily fashioned fabrics of glistening sheen; nobles of blue-blooded bearing and dress; soldiers, grim and glittering in armor of steel; singing maidens, dancing girls with garlands, pilgrims, vassals, pages, sword, shield and helmet bearers, and countless other pictorial types of the period intermingle kaleidoscopically in this massive and enthralling scene of changing splendors. The most exciting of ancient sports, including jousting tilts, sword combats, spearing exercises, equestrian exploits, athletic competitions and other thrilling pastimes are reproduced in the splendid tournament. A horse ballet is introduced to illustrate the wonderful equine education of three squadrons of the highest bred animals in the world. The marching pageant as the Crusaders leave upon their holy mission is the most magnificent and bewilderingly beautiful procession display ever seen under canvas.

All the barbaric radiance and voluptious luxury of the Egyptian court in the mediaeval days of the first crusades are depicted in the environment and action of the next gorgeous scene. A ballet divertisement is presented for the enjoyment of the Egyptian ruler and his numerous court. The enormous scope of stage room is taxed to the utmost by the brilliant gathering. Dancing girls flood the stage, and gracefully glide through bewitching conceits of terpsichorean invention. The costumes are creations of art, fashioned by Parisian masters and models of exquisite elegance and taste. No spectacle of modern times has been staged with the lavish disregard of expense and with such overwhelming success, as this production by Ringling Brothers of Jerusalem and the Crusades.

The marvellous shows will exhibit here on Saturday, June 4, and give two performances, afternoon at 2 o'clock and night at 8 o'clock.

The grand street pageant, the largest, most varied in sensational feature and gorgeously decorative ever organised, and more than twice as long as any other show ever gave, will leave the show grounds show day at 10 o'clock.

WOMAN EMPIRE MAKER.

Miss Violet Brooke-Hunt and Her Extraordinary Career—Established Soldiers' Institutes in South Africa.

While a few Canadians may ask: Who is Miss Violet Brooke-Hunt? I know full well that many officers and soldiers throughout Canada will not require to be told who she is, writes Lally Bernard, in The Toronto Globe.

A pretty girlish figure, a face literally radiating kindliness, the brightest brown eyes, full of laughter and intelligence, and you have the very model of splendid English womanhood that Tennyson loved to draw. Miss Brooke-Hunt was kind enough to give me a pleasant hour in her little "den" in the flat at Albert Gate Court, where she lives with her mother and sisters, and there I found her surrounded by pictures and books, and a thousand and one relics of the eventful years into which she has crowded more action and thought than that of the average woman who reaches the sign post of three score years and ten. Now what is the secret of the youthful buoyancy and yet mature wisdom of this young empire-maker? First of all, a happy, healthy, childhood and girlhood in the country, where she resided under the roof of her grandfather, W. P. Price, M.P., in Glouchestershire, and where she was the companion of her brother in many of his sports and pastimes.

Before she was fifteen Miss Brooke-Hunt had been encouraged by her grand-parent to start a boys' club in connection with the institutes and libraries on the estate, and she constantly listened to the discussions of the old squire on economic questions, which found practical exemplification in the work done in this miniature world. Later on she spent a short period at Cheltenham College, where the head mistress found her bent so clearly indicated that she allowed her to take up political and social economics, history and literature, in which subjects she won high distinction. Later came a move to Gloucester, and the result was the founding of a branch of the university extension lecture work by one girl. It is needless to say that the lectures were on history, economics and sociology, and that the lecturer, bringing her youthful enthusiasm into the work, scored a huge success. This girl of eighteen managed to bring boys and men of the artisan class into intense sympathy with the work and from this movement grew the club known as the "Gordon Wanderers," where, under the auspices of the Home Arts and Industries, technical instruction was given the lads, who supported the institution by their savings. Albert Court Gate was close to the Knightsbridge Barracks, and when fate brought Miss Brooke-Hunt and her family to London, she found that many of the young privates in the Guards were boys from her old institutes, who had from time to time enlisted and left their native country.

Realizing that soldiers have more than human enemies to fight when on active service, Miss Brooke-Hunt managed, in spite of many difficulties, to find her way to South Africa and there to establish soldiers' institutes. She went out on a troopship, and found plenty of work for her active mind on the voyage, as there were all sorts of entertainments, etc., to be devised for the men. The experiences in South Africa of this intrepid leader of men are embodied in her book, "A Woman's Memories of the War," written with the spirit of a true sportswoman.

A "Life of Lord Roberts for Boys," and "A Story of Westminster Abbey for Boys and Girls" are two of Miss Brooke-Hunt's most recent contributions to literature.

To-day finds this enthusiastic young Imperialist busy as the Organizing Secretary of the woman's branch of the Tariff Reform League, and I had the pleasure of listening to her speech at the initial meeting of the league at the house of Lord Glenesk, in Piccadilly. That speech was a revelation to me of what a woman's grasp of the subject might mean. I was immensely struck with the manner and matter of the speech.

The Union Hack Club, for soldiers and sailors, to be established close to Waterloo Station, is a project in which Miss Brooke-Hunt is greatly interested. The committee has already nearly thirty thousand pounds in hand, but rquire fifty thousand, and this Miss Brooke-Hunt is inclined to think is soon forthcoming.

Several medals have been bestowed upon the young Imperialist at different times. One, the Order of St. John of Jerusalem, Canadians know of in connection with ambulance and nursing work. Then comes the Order of Our Lady of Grace, next the South African war medal, and last, but not least, by reason of the story attached to it, is the coronation medal, which was presented to Miss Brooke-Hunt by the King at the great colonial review in 1902. It was presented to her in the presence of so many of the men she had worked for during those three months of high festival, as a result of their direct communication with the King, whom they asked as a personal favor to allow their friend and comrade to share the honor done them.

The pretty little sunlit drawing-room at Albert Court is full of souvenirs of colonial gratitude. From every part of the Empire have some presents of jewellery or plate in recognition of the kindness shown the officers and men of the various regiments. A handsome silver bowl and a massive pair of silver candlesticks testify to the gratitide of Canadian soldiers, while Ceylon sent a beautiful silver bowl resting on the backs of three carved elephants, South Africa sent jewels and a magnificent ostrich feather fan, and Cape Colony a handsome silver inkstand. In the very best sense Miss Brooke-Hunt is a "man's woman," with a wonderful insight and understanding of the needs, and possibly at the same time the weaknesses, of the class in which she is most interested.

MEN'S SUITS

The Newest of All.

The more exacting and particular a man may be about exclusiveness in fabrics and patterns, even if he insists on all the advantages he expects from a tailor, then the more these new suits which we are showing for the first time will appeal to him.

He will find in them all the style and satisfaction he would in garments that the best tailors could build to his measure, though they cost a little more than half the tailor's price and the same as he would pay elsewhere for ready-made clothes that would not prove as satisfactory.

Throughout these splendid garments the tailoring will be found to be faultless; it is of the highest character known and if anything a little more exacting and thorough than is found on the tailor's best productions. And of more importance than all, they possess that well bred air the tailor's have a knack of giving to the clothes they turn out.

Needless to say, the styles as they are found here are correct, that is expected, or that a perfect fit is assured in every case—we are more particular about that than you could be.

CHURCH CHIMES OF YESTERDAY.

Rev. D. F. Bogert Preaches Annual Sermon to Sons of England.

Notes of Services in Different Places of Worship in This City.

Sons of England at St. John's.

Headed by their standard bearer, carrying the Union Jack, the Sons of England made a brave appearance yesterday while on their way to St. John's Church, where the Rev. D. F. Bogert preached to them. Spectators were very favorably impressed with the neat appearance of the members of the junior lodge. There was a good turn-out of the "Sons," and the pretty little church was quite full when the service began. Rev. Mr. Bogert took as his text the first six verses of the 4th chapter of the epistle to the Ephesians. In welcoming the Sons of England to St. John's Church, he said, he would remind them they had come of their own free will and without any special invitation. It was fair to assume, then, that they had an object in coming. The social religious sentiment lay at the root of all church parades. In church they sank all individuality. The danger in society church parades was that men might lose sight of the object of their going to church, which was the worship of Almighty God. He would ask the Sons of England, was that the chief object of their coming here to-day? If so, they would go to church every Sunday, as well as on the day of their annual church parade. Alas! this, he was afraid, was not the case with all members of the Sons of England, who were much like other men in that respect. Now that the members of the society had come to his church, he could not, as a minister, neglect the opportunity to say some things which he felt were called for. The Rev. gentleman spoke in terms of praise of the Sons of England society, and said its motto and purpose was a good one. They were banded together for purposes of charity and benevolence, and to keep alive the dear old memories of their native land. Every lodge of the Sons of England was, or should be, a centre of loyal enthusiasm. Theirs was a great and noble calling, and he urged them to take the advice of St. Paul and walk worthy of the vocation to which they had been called, otherwise they would fail and their society disappear off the face of the earth. They must not think, because the objects and aims of the society were good, that it could be a substitute for the Church of God. His experience as a society man led him to believe that many members of the craft made that mistake, and a sad one it was. Speaking of church union, which was much discussed nowadays, the preacher said it must grieve the blessed Saviour to see into how many different sects his holy church had been split. The matter of church union was now occupying the minds of the deepest thinkers, but when it would be brought about only Christ Himself could know. While the Church of England hoped for union it was manifestly impossible for it to go to others—they must come back to the old apostolic church, which was the original church founded by the apostles in the first century. It would be unreasonable to expect the Church of England to unite with a church which had no apostolic ministry; the other denominations must come back to their mother; any union upon the basis of mere denominationalism would be worse than no union at all. The Church of England could not give up the things which had been placed in her trust by her Lord and Master. Why was he (the preacher) saying this to them? (the Sons of England). Because many of them had left the Church of England and gone to other bodies. Others did not go to church at all, and contribute to its support. If every Son of England were a son of the Church of England; if he were as loyal to her as he was to his society, he (the preacher) could not help thinking that the union of Christian churches would be near at hand. The greatest agent in making England great had been the Church of England. Some said one church was as good as another, and that they were all trying, in their own way, to get to Heaven. This was decidedly wrong. Where in the New Testament could they find authority for 500 different denominations of Christ's church? The Church of England had fought the battle against Paganism, and had, with her back to the wall, for centuries withstood the aggressions of Rome. St. Paul in the text said they must be of one body and one spirit. Why, then, did men persist in rending the blessed Saviour's robe into ribbons? They, as Sons of England, professed to love the Motherland and their King. The preacher paid a glowing tribute to King Edward, and said his was a beautiful example of the life of a worthy son of the Church of England, who regularly took his part in her services and his place at the Lord's Table. It would be well if more of the King's subjects followed the King's example. Most people wanted religion made easy, but God could only teach us what we were willing to learn. The knowledge of God was the highest wisdom, but we only came into it little by little. By attending church regularly, we would come to know God better, and learn to walk in His ways. In conclusion the preacher said that what he had said to the society was spoken in love and with a deep sense of responsibility, and he hoped it would be accepted in the spirit in which it was uttered. "I," said the Rev. gentleman, "though not a member of your society, love the Motherland, love the Bible and love my King, but before them all I love my church, which is the Church of England and the church of England's sons."

Other Church Services.

Rev. Dr. McGregor, of Pickering, made a very favorable impression in St. Andrew's yesterday.

Col. Halliwell gave an address on Missions in Christ Church last night, and Mr. H. Wrightmeyer sang "Face to Face."

Miss Springer, of the Deaconess' Home, Toronto, and Miss Morton, evangelist, had the services at the Tabernacle yesterday.

Rev. Mr. Hubly, of Sussex, N. B., preached able sermons at Emmanuel Church yesterday. At the evening service the choir sang "Praise Ye Jehovah" in splendid style.

At John St. Church last night Mr. Peter Forin sang, in excellent voice, a solo entitled "Be With Us Evermore."

"God, the only Cause, and Creator," was the subject of the lesson in the Christian Scientist Church yesterday, and the lesson was an interesting one.

LITTLE JANIE PAYNE HAD NARROW ESCAPE.

STRUCK BY ENGINE ON SATURDAY NIGHT, BUT FORTUNATELY ESCAPED WITHOUT FATAL INJURIES.

A very narrow escape, indeed, was that of Miss Janie Payne, 12 years of age, who on Saturday night, about 7.30 o'clock, was standing on the side of the railway crossing at Grier street. She was watching a freight train which was going west and did not see a way freight, called in railroad parlance a "high ball," which was coming east. The result was that the little one was struck in the side by the steam box of the engine and thrown into the ditch. Luckily the train was running slowly at the time. The fireman saw the accident, and he jumped off the engine, picked the little girl up and laid her on the grass. Medical aid was summoned, and it was seen that she had sustained some internal injuries, as well as a few scratches on the face. Shortly afterwards she was removed to the hospital, and the authorities of that institution say that, from present indications, no very serious results are to be apprehended.

The little sufferer is a daughter of Mr. Charles Payne, who resides on Barnham street. Her mother, it appears, is ill in bed, and Janie had been, by her sister, permitted to visit some friends on the west side of the river, which accounts for her being on Grier street on Saturday night.

It destroys the germs, heals the inflammed membranes and cures any case, no matter how obstinate or long standing. The $50,000,000 World's Fair St. Louis.

District Passenger Agent McDonald of the Grand Trunk Railway, who recently returned from St. Louis, states that it is hard to find suitable language to describe the magnitude and beauty of the greatest Exposition ever held.

The site of 1240 acres being two miles long and one mile wide, is covered with beautiful buildings, broken with lagoons, canals, grand courts, monuments, statuary, parks, etc., all forming a picture that must be seen to be realized.

An electrical railway, called the Intramural, makes it easy to get from one part of the grounds to another, and follow out the daily programme, enjoying an hour listening to "Sousa's" or other famous bands, or taking in a lecture or address, or art gallery.

When you consider the immensity of the buildings, one alone having over 20 acres of floor space, and reflect that they are filled with the choicest of exhibits from all over the world, one exhibitor trying with another to obtain the coveted gold medal, it seems to suggest the thought of what a grand opportunity and an education it will be to the young men and women of our land, to spend a week or two at St. Louis this year. Really no intelligent man woman or child can afford to miss this great world's treat.

The beautiful electric lighting of the Pan American Exposition which few thought would ever be approached is entirely eclipsed by this monster fair.

One of the features of the fair, is the "Inside Inn," a hotel accommodating 6,000, splendidly run, and at reasonable rates.

The total expenses of a trip to St. Louis based on half railway rates, is within the reach of all, and permits stop over at Chicago and other points, and the trip is made quickly and comfortably.

It is the intention of the Grand Trunk to run through cars from Montreal and Toronto to St. Louis, commencing June 13th, and possibly before.

The Canadian Press Association were unanimous in their praise of the Grand Trunk and Illinois Central route, and with the Exposition

Bounders Were Beaten.

The West Belleville Bounders played a match with a nine picked from the vicinity of the Station on Saturday afternoon, and an excellent game was put up by both teams. The Bounders say they were short some of their regular team, and that accounts for their defeat. Both pitchers did good work; Page, of the West Bellevilles, twirled a fine game, but Walker's curves seemed to be a puzzle to many of the Bounders best batters, they fanning at critical points, when hits meant runs. Score by innings:

West Bellevilles ...	2	1	1	0	0	0	0	0	1	—5

HONOR FOR SILENT WARRIORS

Those Who Are As Nothing in the Eyes of Men May Be First in the Sight of God—A Memorial Day Sermon to the Unknown Heroes of the Civil War of the United States.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1904, by William Baily, of Toronto, at the Dep't of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 29.—In this sermon for Memorial Day the preacher pleads for justice and recognition for those who, though wearing no uniforms and bearing no weapons, yet served their country in its crisis as faithfully and patriotically as ever did soldier at the front of the battle line. The text is Matthew xix, 30, "Many that are first shall be last; and the last shall be first."

From time immemorial nations have honored their military chieftains. All Carthage knelt in reverence before the tombs of Hamilcar and Hannibal. All Italy praises Garibaldi and Victor Emmanuel. In England the Duke of Wellington and Lord Napier sleep within St. Paul's cathedral under the most magnificent dome of all London. Westminster Abbey is the last resting place of scores of generals and admirals who have made England's name famous upon the land and upon the sea.

Not only do the modern nations honor their dead military chieftains, but also the living soldiers who have shed their blood upon hard fought battle-fields. They honor not their generals only, but the humble privates who once carried the muskets in the ranks, or the petty non-commissioned officers, or the lieutenants, or captains of small company commands. When these soldiers die they are laid in the grave with military honors. When, as wornout veterans they are unable to look after themselves, then the best of "soldier homes" are provided for their housement. England has placed the royal palace in the Isle of Wight, where Queen Victoria passed most of her life, at the service of her convalescent sailors. France has her beautiful retreat of the Invalides for her aged soldiers, in the midst of which is the huge sarcophagus of her greatest warrior, whose dying request was this: "It is my wish that my ashes may repose on the banks of the Seine, in the midst of the French people whom I loved so well." The finest sites near our own national capital and Milwaukee and Danville and Santa Monica are filled with the veterans of our own army, who were just as brave as any that wore the Confederate gray or the Federal blue, who laid down their lives upon the blood soaked soil of Vicksburg, Chancellorsville, Lookout Mountain or Atlanta.

On this Memorial Day I praise the unpraised southerner as well as the unpraised northerner. I believe the Civil War, bloody as it was, awful and terrific as it was, mortal as it was, with 1,000,000 dead, was worth all the sacrifice it cost. Why? Because once and for all it settled the vital and far reaching question that the United States Government forever was to be bounded on the east by the Atlantic, on the west by the Pacific, on the north by the Great Lakes and on the south by the Gulf. Though the United States proper comprises an area of 3,025,600 square miles, yet in that vast area, great as it is, there will never be room for more than one Government any more than two queens can live within the same beehive. This question of one Government had to be settled once for all by the sword. If it had not been settled by a bloody conflict between the north and the south it certainly would have had to be settled later by a bloody conflict between the east and west. Thus I honor to-day the unpraised hero who in 1861 lived below the Mason and Dixon line as well as the unpraised hero of Michigan and Pennsylvania and New York and Maine.

First, on this Memorial Day, let us honor the statesmen in the Cabinet and the Legislators in the Capitol who conducted the National Government during those four years of trial. In the northern Capitol at Washington and in the Confederate Capitol at Richmond there were men as brave as those in the armies. Their duties were onerous, their responsibilities serious, their patriotism intense.

It is so easy to speak sneeringly of our Washington Legislators. It is so easy to call the United States Senate the "millionaires' assembly" or the "club of the old fogies." It is so easy to say the House of Representatives is a collection of nonentities, who are ruled for the most part by one or two men who crack the party whip over the backs of their fellows. But, my friends, I believe that by such speeches injustice is often done to able men. We have a right to assume that men who have been chosen by their fellow citizens to represent them in Congress are worthy men, and when we disparage them we disparage the citizens who elected them. The first great battles are not fought out with sword and cannon but with tongue and pen in Legislative Assembly. The outcome of the terrific conflict of 1861 to 1865 would never have been the maintenance of the Union if Congress had not loyally supported President Lincoln during that eventful period. Aye, there were giants in those days. But the giants upon Capitol Hill, whose moral courage and unswerving loyalty were tried and proved, deserve our honor as much as do the giants fighting at the front.

On this Memorial Day the brother who stayed at home and worked the farm should be praised as well as the young man who went to the front and was mentioned for a heroic deed in the commander's despatch. The young man who sank his personality in the more common but equally needful duties of home life might have been even braver and more unselfish than the soldier boy who marched down the main street of his native town or city.

Let me illustrate what I mean by praising the boy who stayed at home to work the farm. Some time ago I was attending a soldiers' reunion. It was a most impressive spectacle, that assembly of aged men. Yes, the ranks of the old soldiers are thinning very rapidly. We shall not have them with us long. But, though these veterans were very old when they began to tell their campfire stories, as their narrative proceeded they seemed to become boys again. Among the stories told was one I shall never forget. "Did you have any brothers in the army?" I asked an aged soldier. "Yes, one," was the answer. "There were three boys of us. We all wanted to go, but father and mother were getting old, and some one had to stay at home and look after the old folks and our younger sisters. So one night we had a family convocation. After the family talk we three sons and mother and father decided that two of us boys could go to the war, but that one should stay at home and work the farm. Who were to go? Who was to stay at home? We all wanted to go and fight and so we decided to draw lots. Mother held the book and put in the three slips of paper with one marked 'Stay at home.' We drew. John and myself went to the front. Harry stayed at home." "Did your brother regret that he had to stay?" "Oh, yes. But some one had to stay, and so he simply swallowed his disappointment. Yes, we two boys could never have gone to the front but for Harry's faithfulness to the old folks." Was he not just as patriotic as the two who went forth to battle?

In this Memorial address we would accord praise to all who did the country service—the contractors who furnished the blankets and the shoes and the tents and the food and the guns, the patriotic bankers, the railroad men, like Thomas Alexander Scott, who did such valuable service in rushing the troops to their ultimate destinations. We would praise the newspaper editors, who moulded public opinion so that the right men were elected to Congress, and the newspaper reporters, who risked life and limb to carry back the news from the front, of what husbands and fathers and brothers had suffered under the tornadoes of shot and shell in the last battle. We would praise such men as James K. McClure of The Philadelphia Press, with whom Lincoln was in closest contact, and Joseph Medill of The Chicago Tribune and James Gordon Bennett of The New York Herald. These men never were able to wear a Grand Army button. They could tell no campfire stories at the Grand Army reunions, but they had their part in the great struggle.

It is a very grave question whether Abraham Lincoln could not better have parted with almost any one of his major-generals than he could have lost that genius of railroad organizing, Thomas Alexander Scott. It is a very grave question whether U. S. Grant would not have been deposed from his command and sent back home in disgrace had it not been for Charles A. Dana, who, as the personal representative of Lincoln, went to the front and exposed and denounced the false scandals which were being circulated about the "silent warrior" of the west. It is a very grave question whether Salmon P. Chase could have ever successfully financiered the United States bonds which paid the running expenses of the war Government, costing at that time millions upon millions of dollars each month, unless he had been backed up by Jay Cooke, the Philadelphia capitalist, who was to Lincoln what Robert Morris was to George Washington in the Revolution. So to-day I impartially praise the patriotic soldier, the patriotic railroad man, the patriotic editor, the patriotic financier, the patriotic contractor.

We have read all about the noble services of Dwight L. Moody to the soldier boys at the front. We know that many a dying soldier boy was able to answer "Here!" to the roll call of heaven because some faithful chaplain on earth had prepared him for that "Fall in!" on the other side of the grave. We know that many and many a dying message sent to the mother or the wife at home was penned by the faithful chaplains who looked after the boys of their regiments as a father might care for the children about his own fireside. But what about that gray-haired old minister of the village church? Did he not serve any patriotic purpose? Did he not lift high the standard of the patriotic soldier when he delivered the eulogy over the casket enwrapped in its country's flag?

We cannot to-day too much praise the work of the gospel minister during the agonies of America's four years of carnage. One day a man applied to General Jackson for a position in his army. "What is your business?" asked Jackson. "I am a minister of the gospel," was the reply. Then Jackson, the Christian soldier, said: "My friend, I can give you no position as high as that which God has given to you. Go back to your own church. In the name of Jesus Christ, give comfort to the widows whose husbands have been shot; to the children whose fathers, on account of this bloody war, will never come back; to the young maidens who can never again see their sweethearts. Go back and preach the gospel of sacrifice to the young men who must be enlisted from your town. Go back! In God's name, go back!"

But I have still another long list of unpraised heroisms. I would not praise the boy in blue or the boy in gray for what he did in 1861 and 1865 more than I would praise him for what he did after peace had been proclaimed. It was a spectacle that astonished the world, a spectacle unprecedented in history, that of the soldiers of those two huge armies laying down their muskets and taking up the plowshare. To their honor be it said that they were ready to turn their backs upon strife and, side by side, work together in the vocations of peace. The vast armies of America going forth to battle is not nearly as impressive, from a historic standpoint, to the student of sociology, as those armies almost instantly melting away and then and there their ex-members fraternizing with one another and striving to the uttermost to build up the country with as much earnestness as they had shown in fighting each other to the death.

Without any doubt, Robert E. Lee was one of the finest characters America ever produced. Would you like to know what was to me the greatest act of that grand life? I find it not in his actions before the war. I find it not in his wonderful equipoise and gentleness and marvelous powers during the war. But after Appomattox the chief nobility of that life glowed before his fellow countrymen as a single star might outshine all the other stars in the heavenly firmament. After the war was over a rich financial company of New York City, in order to catch the southern trade through Robert E. Lee's popularity, offered Lee $25,000 per year at a salary to become its manager. What said General Lee? "No, I cannot come. I must stay among my own people to help teach them to become true Christian citizens, to help teach them how to have faith in their God and patriotic love for their whole land." Robert E. Lee turned his back at that time upon the most princely salary then offered in the city of New York. In order to teach his people to love a reunited country and to have faith in God he accepted a humble position as the president of one of Virginia's bankrupt schools. Rather than live for mercenary gain he quietly and yet nobly and unselfishly went to live among the shattered walls of Washington College in Lexington. He lived there until the close of his life. Some people may tell you that the greatest service the American soldier did for his country was when he suffered upon the field of battle. I tell you that the greatest service the Confederate army and the Federal army ever did for their native land was when they dissolved and when their Christian soldiers became the earnest, consecrated advocates of Christian peace. So to-day I praise no less highly than the soldier who went out in 1861 to fight his country's battles the soldier in 1866 returning to civil life and striving in home and factory and store to heal the wound of the nation and reunite its people in the bonds of Christian love.

Some time ago I stood on the top of the Washington monument and looked off upon the battlefields of America and dreamed my dreams. I saw hundreds of thousands of human bones bleaching in the sunlight, gnawed of the vulture and the wolf. I heard the muffled drums beating the tattoo at sunset. As the artillery wagons rumbled away to the rear, and star twinkled to star, I heard sentinel by the glare of the campfire call to sentinel: "All's well. All's well along the Potomac!"

There go the booming of the cannon and the sharp commands of the officers. "Steady, boys; steady, steady!" There is the ping of the bullet, and the dying soldier clutches at his heart as he moans, "My babies, O God, my poor babies!" and then drops dead. There comes the blood curdling Confederate cry, "Hi! Hi! Hi! Hi! Hi!" There is the long line of set faces behind the glittering bayonets. The heavens redden and glow. The flames leap and hiss and dance and make merry over the burning homes. The falling beams go crash, crash, crash! The rivers are deep with flowing blood; the grave trenches are filled with a million dead.

As I turn and look upon the great white dome of the Capitol the old national flag flaps and waves. Its stars glitter like the eyes of the maidens who, after awhile as old women, read and reread the torn and the yellow letters which their heroes just before the fatal battle wrote about the bridal homes which were destined never to be built. And as I look upon the old flag again the white stripes look like the white bandages which were put about the shattered arms. The long, deep streaks of red prove that its folds had once been dipped into pools of human blood. Then the great white dome of the Legislative Hall, glistening in the sunlight, looks as though it were built out of the broken tombstones of Arlington Heights and Gettysburg and the Wilderness.

Then, as I look up and down the great Pennsylvania avenue, I seem to see the united armies of the boys in blue and of the boys in gray marching, marching, marching. I see the lines melt away. Following with my eye one soldier, I see him take his discharge, and he starts for home. I cannot tell whether this discharged soldier is now heading for the Michigan hills or for the Georgia plantations. In his civilian dress he has no distinctive insignia telling me whether he fought under Grant or under Lee. Then I see this soldier coming up to the farm gate and being welcomed home by his dear ones. Now his wife nearly faints away for joy. Then in the evening hour I see him gather the little children about him. He opens the old book; he reads a chapter; the family kneel in prayer; then the lights are put out, and I know the war is forever ended.

Come, ye Christian heroes of the past, both praised and unpraised; come with your sacred memories and your buried dead. Come, ye Chris- your buried dead. Come, ye Christian heroes of the future, with your cradles and unborn generations; come, ye nations about to be born for Christ; come all times and all millenniums! Down in prayer and kneel to him who will yet be crowned King of kings and Lord of all! Halleluiah, for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth!

"SOO" MONEY PAID OVER

Ontario Cabinet Completes Transaction Saturday.

Provisions Under Which the Bonds Are to Be Guaranteed By the Government Declared By Order-in-Council to Have Been Complied With—New "Soo" Company Organized at New York—Many Millions Turned Over.

Toronto, May 30.—The "Soo" reorganization scheme has been completed. Within a week the extensive plant at Sault Ste. Marie should be in full operation. At a special meeting of the Ontario Cabinet on Saturday morning, presided over by Hon. J. M. Gibson, in the absence of the Premier, an order was passed, declaring that the provisions under which the bonds of the company are to be guaranteed by the government, have been complied with.

The order declares: "That the Government of the Province of Ontario is satisfied that the provisions of section 7 of the act entitled 'an act respecting aid to the Algoma Central and Hudson Bay Railway, and associated industries at Sault Ste. Marie,' passed during the session of the Legislative Assembly of Ontario, have been complied with, and that all conditions precedent to the delivery of the Government guarantee referred to in the said section 7 of the said act have been performed."

It was wired to the Government representatives in New York, and the necessary cash was handed over to the Canadian Improvement Company by Orvis Brothers, stock brokers, of New York, representing the Government.

The whole transaction was completed on Saturday.

New "Soo" Company Formed.

New York, May 30.—The Herald says: Consummation of the reorganization plan of the Consolidated Lake Superior Company was effected Saturday at the offices of the Morton Trust Company. The great Lake Superior corporation has disappeared. Out of its ruins has arisen the Lake Superior Corporation, which succeeds to all its rights and is now the owner of all its property, with a much reduced capital of $40,000,000 of stock, $3,000,000 of income bonds and $10,000,000 of first mortgage collateral trust five per cent. gold bonds, making in the aggregate $33,000,000 of securities. According to Mr. Dos Passos, Speyer & Co., whose loan is now liquidated, receiving a cheque for about $2,583,000. In the transaction many million dollars were turned over Saturday, the contributions having been made by the stockholders, the underwriting syndicate and the $2,000,000 contributed by the Ontario Government through Blair & Co. In all these transactions the Morton Trust Company acted as a sort of clearing house, receiving and disbursing all the money. The board of directors of the Lake Superior Corporation will be named this week.

Mr. Gamey Examined.

Toronto, May 30.—R. R. Gamey, M.P.P., on Saturday went to London and appeared before Mr. Cowan, local registrar, for examination for discovery in the suit of Lawyer McEvoy for slander. The action is based on an alleged remark by Mr. Gamey, said to have been made at one of the meetings, that McEvoy stole the leaves from the Crossin Piano Company's books.

Mr. Gamey was examined by Mr. Jarvis on behalf of McEvoy and was asked if he had made the statement complained of. He said he had not. The examination lasted only a few minutes. W. J. Hanna, M.P.P., appeared for Mr. Gamey.

Due to Heavy Eating.

Butler, Pa., May 30.—Col. M. S. Quay, senior Senator for Pennsylvania, passed away Saturday after an illness more or less persistent for the last year, and which the doctors diagnosed as chronic gastritis. Col. Quay, in health, was a great eater, and his troubles in later years dated from overdraughts on his vital system due to heavy eating, smoking and the great nervous strains which he underwent. Senator Quay celebrated his 70th birthday last fall.

Threatened His Family.

Corinth, May 30.—Albert Pound, who has been living with his wife and two small children, on a farm about three miles west of the village, was arrested Saturday for threatening to murder his family, and committed for further trial and expert examination at St. Thomas. Evidence given goes to show that he has had spells of insanity, and in one of these fits, having had trouble with some boys, he came in the house and commenced sharpening a razor, telling his wife the whole family would be dead in half an hour.

Difficulties of a Census.

Johannesburg, May 30.—The unaudited figures of the Transvaal census just published show a total population of 1,268,816—viz., whites 299,327, natives 945,598, other colored persons 23,891. As evidencing the difficulties of the enumerators, it may be stated that one trooper of the constabulary was drowned in the Zoutpansberg region and another was mauled by a lion in the Sable district, while many contracted fever.

Ashore With 450 Laborers.

Kingston, Jamaica, May 30.—The British steamer Rosetti, having on board 450 laborers from the United Fruit Company's plantation, went ashore off Port Royal Saturday night, while on her way to Bocas del Toro, Costica, and up to the present time all efforts to refloat her have proved futile. The vessel lies in an exposed condition.

RAILWAY TOOK PART.

Judge Winchester Recommends That Toronto Council Have Power to Cancel Franchises of Such Corporations.

Toronto, May 31.—Judge Winchester, in his report on the election investigation presented to the Mayor yesterday morning, finds the Toronto Railway Company guilty of taking part in the election, at least to the extent of $30, to secure the return of Mr. Richardson; that there was bribery in the payments of money to "Ginger" Robinson on behalf of Messrs. Richardson, Ramsden and McMurrich, because it was for the men's votes as well as services; that a case was not made out against ex-Controller Wm. Burns for voting twice; that prima facie cases were made out against Frank T. and Thomas W. Slattery for voting twice for controller, and submits eleven recommendations, including a numbered ballot, for municipal elections, Council to have power to cancel the franchise of a company that wrongfully engages in an election; that Council have power to order a recount; that there be only one ballot, and that Council appoint both deputy returning officers and poll clerks.

The Judge states that the investigation occupied 22 days, and 398 witnesses were examined. He reviews the evidence taken at considerable length.

Attack on Port Arthur By the Japs is Scheduled.

Japanese Transport Landing Troops in Northeast Corea—Rainy Season Has Been Struck and the Downpour Is Very Heavy—Fall of Port Arthur, Say the Highest Classes, Ought to Denote the End of the War

London, May 31.—The attack on Port Arthur, The Chronicle's Tokio correspondent telegraphs, is expected to begin about June 15. Correspondents leave here June 10, in time to see the capture probably about June 20. The correspondent also says that about 10,000 Russians have been sent up the Liao River in junks to Tieling.

The Morning Post's Shanghai correspondent wires that several Japanese transports are landing troops in Northeast Corea.

According to correspondents at Japanese headquarters, up to May 29, nothing important had developed beyond outpost encounters. Japanese troops are largely engaged in building roads and bridges.

The Standard's correspondent says that the force that landed at Takushan appears to have struck the fringe of the rainy season. The downpour has been very heavy.

Czar Fears Public.

Gen. Kuropatkin, the Telegraph's correspondent at St. Petersburg, says, is fighting two enemies, one at home, the other in Manchuria. While his military reputation is undergoing a terrible ordeal, he also is accused of failure as Minister of War to make proper preparations for war. The Emperor is alleged to be so dissatisfied that he would dismiss both Alexieff and Kuropatkin were it not that he fears the effect of public opinion.

The general impression among the highest classes is that the fall of Port Arthur ought to connote the end of the war, and that if the Japanese succeed in this aim, Russia's best interest would be to make peace, but nobody, the correspondent avers, possesses the moral courage to make such a suggestion to the Emperor.

Japs Occupy Aiyangpienmen.

London, May 31.—A despatch to The Central News from Tokio, yesterday, says the Japanese captured a quantity of powder and fifty-six railroad cars at Liushutun. The despatch also says that the Japanese, after defeating the Cossacks at Aiyangpienmen, northeast of Fengwangcheng, occupied that place and reinforcements were sent forward to support them.

The Report Has Color.

St. Petersburg, May 31.—There is no confirmation of the general staff of the reported defeat of 2,000 Cossacks at Aiyangpienmen (northwest of Fengwangcheng), but the message from General Kuropatkin recording the Japanese advance from Kuandiansiang (Kwantien) to Siamatsza, lends color to the Tokio report in view of the fact that Aiyangpienmen lies between the above points.

Kuro Reports Jap Advance.

St. Petersburg, May 31.—The war office has received the following despatch from Gen. Kuropatkin, under yesterday's date: "I this morning received a report stating that the Japanese advance on Kwantien has begun from Siamatsza. The numbers of the enemy are not known."

Chased By the Japanese.

London, May 31.—The Standard's Che Foo correspondent says that a Russian gunboat, believed to be the Bobr, which was in action at Talienwan Thursday, has arrived from Port Arthur. She was chased by Japanese, but was able to take some refugees from Dalny.

Jap Objective Is Port Arthur.

Liaoyang, May 31.—The impression at headquarters is growing that the main objective of the enemy is Port Arthur, and it would not be surprising if the actual assault on that fortress began within a fortnight.

Russian Scouts Captured.

Tokio, May 31.—Gen. Kuroki, reports a number of outpost affairs, and the capture of eight Russian scouts.

42 WALKERS MISSING.

Many of French Pedestrians Succumb to Hardships of Race.

Paris, May 31.—Fatal results followed the army walking match Sunday from the Place de la Concorde to St. Germain and back, a distance of about twenty-eight miles, in which 2,000 soldiers from many regiments took part. Reports received by the Minister of War show that forty-two men are missing and a number of them are said to have succumbed to hardships. Besides those missing, thirty-four men were taken to the hospitals along the course, in various stages of prostration. Six were in a serious condition, one man is dead, and another in a dangerous condition. Some reports place the number of dead at four.

Death in a Well.

Toronto, May 31.—Caught some fifteen feet below the surface of the ground by the collapse of earth in a well, William Reid met death by suffocation in East Toronto town last night. The accident happened about half-past seven, and it was two hours before the body was recovered. The unfortunate man was between 45 and 50 years of age, and leaves a widow and family.

Baltimore's Mayor a Suicide.

Baltimore, Md., May 31.—Robert L. McLane, Mayor of this city, shot himself dead late yesterday afternoon in the bed-room of his residence.

VATICAN AND FRANCE.

Chamber of Deputies Hears Interpellation on Government's Attitude.

Rome, May 31.—The Chamber of Deputies were crowded yesterday to hear the discussion on the interpellation on the attitude of the Government towards the Vatican protest against President Loubet's visit. Signor Mazza, Republican, called the note of the Papal Secretary of State, Merry del Val, a perfect insult. He recalled that the Pope had not protested against the atrocious offences to religion in France. His Holiness had now risen against a king, who, according to the Vatican, had stolen the pontifical patrimony, designating his Majesty as a usurper. The note, therefore, was a declaration of war.

Sig. Mazza asked the Government to take energetic action to prevent the invasion of church into the king's affairs. The Government had forgotten all pride and the national dignity by answering the Vatican insult, by giving hospitality to Cardinal Svampa when the king, on Saturday, went to Bologna. The Government permitted the people of France to defend Italian rights. The Liberals and the extreme parties applauded and the galleries joined.

Sig. Guerci, Radical, followed, saying that "this time the Vatican was not protesting, but bleating."

Sig. Sabrins, Socialist, interrupting, said: "Call it braying." (Laughter.)

Enquiry Already Begun.

Montreal, May 31.—Judge Winchester arrived in town yesterday morning and began his enquiry into the complaints re the employment of aliens on the G.T.R. surveys. He expects to be in this city for three or four days.

Double Tracking G.T.R.

Woodstock, May 31.—Double tracking operations have been commenced on the G.T.R., just east of the city, and also in the city limits near Norwich avenue.

Grand Duke Wilhelm Dead.

Berlin, May 31.—The death is announced of Grand Duke Friedrick Wilhelm of Mecklenburg-Streitz. The Grand Duke was born Oct. 17, 1819.

Pear's Brickmakers Strike.

Toronto, May 31.—There was not a brick made in Pear's brickyard at Toronto Junction yesterday. The men are out on strike for higher wages. This is the largest brickyard in the western part of Toronto and involves the paving brick plant as well. A speedy settlement is looked for.

Received African Prince.

London, May 31.—King Edward held a brilliant levee yesterday morning. After the levee the King received in audience the Alake of Abeokuta (Upper Guinea), a picturesque West African potentate. The British Government has agreed to buy all the Alake's lahos cotton for three years.

A WINNIPEG PROTEST.

Twenty-one Liberal business men in Winnipeg have signed a protest against the G.T.P. scheme as introduced by the Laurier Government. Here is their statement, and if a stronger indictment of the whole scheme is extant we have not seen it. And the men who sign and promulgate this document, mark you, are Liberals, dyed-in-the-wool, but they are evidently patriotic enough to oppose a proposition which they believe to be detrimental to the best interests of Canada as a whole:

"As business men, whose interests will be seriously affected by the railway policy of the Dominion Government, and who, therefore, realize the effect upon the general interest of the west, we feel obliged to protest against the proposal embodied in the Grand Trunk Pacific agreement. Liberals on principle and by conviction, we cannot support the Liberal party in a transaction embodying, on a gigantic scale, the very evil to which genuine Liberalism is most fundamentally opposed—the sacrifice of public good to private greed.

"The enormous liability proposed is to be incurred mainly for the construction of the proposed eastern section, an undertaking absolutely absurd as a remedy for the congestion of traffic or for the lack of adequate facilities from which the west has suffered. Nor is the western section, as shown in the map published by the Dominion Government, of much more value. Closely paralleling lines already in operation or approaching completion from Winnipeg to the Rocky Mountains, it fails to develop new territory. And its possibilities of usefulness as a means of securing reduced rates or improved car supply, either for western exports or imports from the east, are effectively nullified by the terms and conditions under which it is to be constructed and financed.

"The remedy lies in railways under public ownership, and operated by a non-partisan commission. The Intercolonial should be freed from the spoils system, placed under such a general manager as Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, Mr. Hays, Mr. Whyte, or other efficient railway administrators, and extended to the Rocky Mountains and the Pacific Ocean. Public ownership would free us from over-capitalization, from combination, from excessive rates, and from inadequate equipment, with cars and locomotives. It would give us a truly national transportation policy, would immensely facilitate business and augment the prosperity of Canada, and it would deliver us from the frightfully demoralizing effect upon our whole public life of the railway policy hitherto pursued.

"We have spoken from the standpoint of western business men. A word may be added to our friends in the east. The amount of business to be done in western Canada, the market to be gained or retained here by the producers of eastern Canadian competition with those of the United States is largely a question of railway rates and facilities. Those who imagine that the Grand Trunk Pacific, loaded with enormous over-capitalization, and with that great and costly folly, the eastern section, will be anything but an additional incubus to inter-provincial trade, are nursing a grievous delusion. The one way to the future lies in public ownership."

The signatories to the resolution are: A. Macdonald, wholesale grocer, formerly Mayor of Winnipeg; Thos. D. Robinson, wholesale coal and wood; Alex. R. Bethune, wholesale furs and clothing; John McVicar, grain dealer; J. F. McIntyre, former president of a Liberal organization; Alex. Douglas, G. H. West, J. P. Graves, Andrew Wright, R. H. Nunn, J. R. Haney, Jos. Stovel, Jos. Riley, Jos. P. Galloway, J. B. McLennan, Austin Francis, K. Mackenzie, Samuel Collwell, R. W. Matthews, Joshua Calloway, John S. Roberts.

TIMELY TOPICS.

We rather incline to the opinion that the Council this year made a mistake in not laying a cheaper kind of sidewalk than granolithic on some of the back streets of this city. We quite agree with Ald. McFee that granolithic sidewalks are none too good, but there are twenty-six miles of sidewalks in this city, and it will be many a long day before all the streets are blessed with granolithic walks. At present, on some of the back streets, the walks are nothing but man traps, rotten and loose planks are lying in wait for the unwary. If those old relics were removed and some kind of gravel walk, costing about three or four cents a foot, were put down, it would have saved many accidents and much weariness of spirit to a large number of people. Other places, quite as dignified as Belleville, lay gravel walks on their outlying streets, why should not this city?

* * *

People who live on and those who drive along Mill street are wondering why that thoroughfare is not being sprinkled this year. The dust, they say, is something awful.

* * *

Merchants of this city, we are told, will be eternally grateful to their customers if they will make their purchases early this week, so that most of the deliveries can be made before Saturday. The reason for this is, you know, that the circus is coming next Saturday, and it is hardly safe to have the meekest old plug that ever happened out on the street when the elephants are around. Some old-timers, we are told, who wouldn't run away if you let off a cannon cracker under their feet, will pretty nearly jump out of their hides if they see an elephant loom up or get a scent of one. So, in their own interests, as well as in those of the merchants, it behooves our citizens to do their buying early this week and give the delivery waggon drivers a chance.

Some people complain that the lawn hose fiends are at it again, and are soaking the streets and wasting the city's water in a way contrary to law. One bicyclist got a mud bath and a bruised side, besides losing enough skin to make a tobacco pouch with. Why will people be so unreasonable and careless of the rights of others?

The Intelligencer tenders its sincere condolences to the relatives of the late Dr. Marshall, who this morning passed beyond the smiling and the weeping. Belleville has lost a good citizen.

Ald. Panter, it is safe to presume, did not ask his question, re inspection of unsafe buildings, in the Council last night, without some object in view. Does he know of any building, used by the public, in this city, which is unsafe, or was he simply asking the question to bring about the appointment of an inspector of buildings? It will, we are sure, surprise many to learn that the city has at present no such official. It would, we believe, be in the public interest if one were appointed, and at once.

The Chairman of Public Works has progressive ideas, and warmly espouses the idea that Belleville should import granite to pave her main street. "Front St.," he says, "will, I believe, never be in a satisfactory condition till it is paved with granite from the station to the wharf." And there's more truth than poetry in that.

This is the way Rev. Dr. Wild looks on the matter of church parades on Sunday: "Our liberties, commerce, and religion are dependent upon the strength of arms. To parade on Sunday and attend divine service is an inspiration to the young, to be loyal. It kindles love of country and is to be fostered and encouraged." And the fact that many don't agree with him won't trouble the Doctor a bit.

GOING TO OPEN ANOTHER BRANCH.

MR. CHAS. H. ZURHORST, OF THE DAVIES CO., TO LEAVE BELLEVILLE.

His many friends in this city will regret to learn that, on Saturday next, Mr. Charles H. Zurhorst, for thirteen months the popular and obliging manager of the Wm. Davies Co., in this city, is to leave Belleville. Mr. Zurhorst is engaged by the Davies Co. to open up new branches for them in towns and cities where they locate, Belleville being the 5th place in which he has established a new business for that enterprising firm. It is safe to say that, if Mr. Zurhorst left the other four stores in as flourishing and satisfactory state as he leaves the Belleville one, he had much to be proud of. Mr. Zurhorst leaves for Toronto and Montreal on Saturday next, on business, and on June 18th will open up another branch for his firm in Woodstock, the best wishes of all Bellevillians who have met him going with him.

During his thirteen months residence here Mr. Zurhorst has made many friends, and expresses his regret at being compelled to leave this city, which he considers one of the prettiest and most attractive socially he has ever lived in.

MR. GAMEY TO SPEAK THERE ON JUNE 10th—REWARD FOR ARREST OF DOG POISONERS.

Deseronto, May 27th.

The Deseronto Liberal-Conservative Association has made definite arrangements for R. R. Gamey, M.P.P., to speak in Naylor's theatre on the evening of Friday, June 10th. Mr. Gamey will also speak in Napanee on the afternoon of the same day.

Some miscreant has been scattering poisoned meat in the East End, and as a consequence several valuable dogs have been killed. A reward of $25 is offered by the Municipal Council for information that will lead to the arrest of the guilty person.

Attended with blinding pain, but relief comes quickly when Nerviline is applied, for it is the strongest pain-reliever in the world. "I consider Nerviline a most magical remedy for neuralgia. I am subject to violent attacks," writes E. G. Harris, of Baltimore, "but never worry if Nerviline is in the house. The prompt relief that Nerviline brings is priceless to me. TO SEND OUT PAUPERS

Thought 7,000 Children Would Pass Our Government Tests.

Gen. McNeill Buried—Dublin Freeman on Edward Blake's Sacrifices For Ireland—A Generous Appreciation—Music in Canada—Dr. Grace to Preside at the Banquet to Canadians in London on June 21.

London, May 31.—(C. A. P.)—Representatives of the pauper guardian boards throughout England at a meeting in London will urge the Local Government Board to send pauper children to Canada or some other colony at the expense of the guardians to work on small farms, either training them for agricultural life in England or for other work. Out of 68,000 indoor paupers' children in England and Wales the guardians exercise control over 7,724. Out of these 7,000 it is believed would pass the Canadian Government medical tests. A speech in support of the scheme was made by R. Lewis of New Brunswick.

Gen. McNeill Buried.

London, May 31.—(C. A. P.)—Sir Charles Tupper and Lord Strathcona attended the funeral of Major-General Sir John Curstairs McNeill.

Mr. Blake's Sacrifices.

London, May 31.—(C. A. P.)—The Dublin Freeman, commenting on Edward Blake's Longford address, says that never has any patriot sacrificed so much on behalf of Irish liberty from the time he first joined the Irish party. Though willing to serve in the ranks his advice has been sought and has always been moderate, sane, firm and reliable.

Music in Canada.

London, May 31.—(C. A. P.)—Albert Visetti, writing to The Daily Telegraph, says that a musical spirit is abroad in Canada. He expects as a result of his tour that instead of going to the continent he will see many Canadian faces at the Royal Academy of Music or at the Royal College.

Dr. Grace to Preside.

London, May 31.—(C. A. P.)—Dr. W. G. Grace, president of the English Bowling Association, presided at a meeting when it was resolved to tender a banquet to the Canadians in London on June 21. The international matches will be held in Glasgow on July 11, 12 and 13, and it was decided that the English team should be composed of two rinks from the south and two north of the River Trent.

Sticks to the Past.

London, May 31.—(C. A. P.)—The General Assembly of the Church of Scotland has decided against the adoption of the uniform version of the metrical psalms prepared by Canada and the United States on the ground that its adoption meant too great a breaking with the past. Scotland already had a uniform version, and the Canadian-American version had altered considerably some of the greatest psalms.

Will Give Up Practice.

London, May 31.—(C.A.P.)—Edward Blake, M.P., speaking at Longford, said that in the choice before him of giving up either the representation of the constituency or his professional work, he decided to give up the latter, remaining their representative as long as they wished him to do so. Speaking on the new land act he said the farmers must never forget that they had at their backs the old safeguard, unsatisfactory as it was, on judicial rent, that they need not buy the land on any terms the landlords demanded.

Not Envious of Britain.

London, May 31.—(C.A.P.)—The National Zeitung of Berlin makes a plea for a good understanding with Britain. It says Germany does not envy England, Canada, Egypt, the Indian Empire, or South Africa. Germany never expects to become a colonial power.

WHAT WOMEN SHOULD KNOW.

That the cause of a great deal of suffering, usually supposed to be on account of female disorders, is overcome by ANTI-PILL, the discovery of Dr. J. S. Leonhardt.

A great amount of womens' ailments are caused by the food that is taken being turned (through improper digestion) into poison instead of nutrition. This poison carried by the blood throughout the system, makes weak women—women who are hardly ever well—nerves in dreadful condition—limbs ache, back aches, head aches—billions, constipated. ANTI-PILL, the Great System Treatment, will correct these troubles—it starts its work by making a well stomach—it insures strength to weak women—It is harmless at any stage or condition of a woman's life, and there is no time ANTI-PILL cannot be used with safety. Any woman who cares to may use a bottle of ANTI-PILL free from any expense. If satisfactory results do not follow its use, mail us wrapper with name of druggist from whom purchased and get your money back by return mail. Wilson-Fyle Co., Niagara Falls, Ont. Marlborough as Lord Lieutenant.

It is becoming notorious how desperately eager the Duke of Marlborough is to obtain the expensive post of Lord Lieutenant of Ireland. It would be expensive, indeed, if he were to emulate his predecessors. Lord Cadogan and Lord Dudley each have spent far more than one hundred thousand out of their private funds over public functions and entertainments.

A reason against the success of the Duke of Marlborough as Lord Lieutenant—apart from the fact that he is a very poor speaker—is that the Duchess is not very able to act as a good hostess on a large scale. Personally, she is very kind, and most anxious to do all she can for her guests, but she has never sought London society on a broad basis, preferring her own American acquaintances and the personal friends of her husband. Unfortunately, a couple of years ago, she became afflicted with deafness, and has twice been to Vienna to undergo the painful treatment which partially consists in putting instruments into the ears to meet others put up the nostrils. Although she now hears an ordinary conversation, directly there is a buzz of talk she becomes quite unable to discern what is said. The regularity of a Dublin Court would also not suit her, for she has never acquired the repose of the British country aristocracy, and after having been two or three days in a place, loves to be off by train somewhere else.

Kitchener's Thoroughness

Lord Kitchener is determined that the Indian army, while under his command, shall be in a condition to meet any emergency. When the details were submitted to him for the last manoeuvres at Attock, he approved of them generally, but strongly objected to one suggestion. It had been proposed that the troops to take part in the operations should be told off as usual, so that they might be in readiness to move when necessary. "Why give them notice?" was Lord Kitchener's inquiry; "and why warn staff officers? It is surely all-important that the army of India should be ready to move anywhere at a few hours' notice. Let there be no published program and no issued orders; let the conditions of actual warfare be imitated as closely as possible." Nothing, therefore, was allowed to be known, beyond the fact that the manoeuvres were to take place in the country round Peshawur, the ground upon which there would be certain to be a mobilization of forces in the event of any trouble arising on the frontier.

Comforting the Curate.

A very nervous young curate who as a rule always shaved himself once found himself compelled to patronize a barber, having while from home forgotten his shaving tackle.

"I hope you can shave me without cutting me. I am—er—I mean I have a very nervous—er—that is, sensitive skin," stammered the curate.

"Cut you, sir," repeated the juvenile looking operator reassuringly, flourishing his gleaming razor round the shrinking throat of the curate. "If I so much as nick you once I'll—I'll—I'll cut your 'ead off, sir, and my own arterwards. I can't say fairer'n that."—Liverpool Globe.

A Statesman's Queer Ambition.

The great Lord Grey had an ambition far above politics. He had passed the reform bill, but that did not satisfy his soul. There was talk of Taglioni, and Grey said quite earnestly, "What would I give to dance as well as she!" The statesman who had been prime minister and had left an indelible mark on the history of his country was envious of an opera dancer!—London Chronicle.

Cruel.

"But, papa," wailed the young woman, "you can have no idea how he loves me. He is willing to die for me this very minute."

"Well," said the old man, scratching his head thoughtfully. "I don't know that I have any objection to that. I was afraid he wanted to marry you."

How They Interpreted It.

We are taught not to be anxious for the future, as the future will come in time.

We are taught in the sermon on the mount not to think of the future, because the evil we do in one day is sufficient.—Answers of London School Children.

Not a Success.

"I took Gladys riding in an automobile yesterday," he said.

"Have an enjoyable ride?"

He shook his head. "The horseless carriage is not a success."

"Not a success?"

"No, sir; it is not. Between the motor lever and the brake it gives a fellow more occupation for his hands and arms than even a spirited horse. What is needed is one that can be operated entirely with the feet."

Weak Kidneys.

A change in the weather—the slightest imprudence—and O! what excruciating pain in the back. A cold, flies to the weakest spot. And Kidneys that take cold easily, prove weakness—perhaps disease. A slight weakness soon becomes a serious disease in such vital organs as the Kidneys. Heed Nature's warning. Make the Kidneys well and strong, so they can perform their proper duties.

To get that appetizing, brown appearance and outside crispyness on roasts of lamb, beef, etc.—to keep their goodness in them they must be basted. In the old style stove this necessitated reaching into the hot oven and moving the hot, heavy pan and holding it in the front of the oven while it was basted. A tedious performance with unsatisfactory results. The draw-out oven rack of the Hanging up in the Council Chamber is a beautiful work of art setting forth the history of the Governor-General's medal in this city, the conditions of which are too well-known to our readers to need recounting. A glance at the artistic production in question will show the casual observer that spaces are in it left for the names of the bright boys and girls who may be fortunate and clever enough to win the medal. But there is no entry since 1898. Why? Certainly not because the medal has not been won since that year, for it has. Whose place is it to attend to this matter?

The band concerts begin on Thursday evening of this week, and it's to be hoped the weather will warm up a bit in the meantime. The seats on the park, we are told, have all been moved on to dry ground, and there is no need for anybody to get his feet wet unless he gets reckless and goes chasing lightning bugs. The band will play "Bedelia," and there is no reason why, if the frost keeps away, people can't have a lot of enjoyment and fresh air down at the park next Thursday evening.

SPRING MILLINERY.

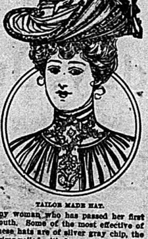
Two Styles of Hat For Dressy and For Tailor Made Gowns.

Millinery is now occupying our minds, and it can be divided into two classes—the chic and the picturesque.

With the walking skirt and garments of a tailor made order the sailor hat holds its own. It can be made of almost any material, including canvas or sailcloth and the finest of fine straw trimmed with a scarf of lace drooping slightly in the back.

The really dressy hats have lace brims and falling curtains of chiffon and lace with wreaths of flowers.

The shepherdess shape covered with dainty flowers is pretty, but trying to any woman who has passed her first youth. Some of the most effective of these hats are of silver gray chip, the brims veiled with deep cream imitation chantilly or alencon lace and trimmed with pale pink roses and parma violets.



TAILOR MADE HAT.

The pointed floral toque is well suited to the French face, and it is very fashionable over on the other side.

Crinoline hats, which have been so fashionable for the last few years, are now giving place to leghorns.

The majority of the best millinery models abroad have the brims veiled with black, which is most becoming to the face.

HEAD SOLID SORE

Awful Suffering of Baby and Sleepless Nights of Mother.

CURED BY CUTICURA

Skin Fair as a Lily with no Scar to Recall Awful Sore Writes Mother.

"I herewith write out in full the beginning and end of that terrible disease, eczema, which caused my babe untold suffering and myself many sleepless nights.

"My babe was born seemingly a fair, healthy child, but when she was three weeks old a swelling appeared on the back of her head, and in course of time broke. It did not heal but grew worse, and the sore spread from the size of a dime to that of a dollar. I used all kinds of remedies that I could think of, but nothing seemed to help; in fact, it grew worse. Her hair fell out where the sore was, and I feared it would never grow again. It continued until my aged father came on a visit, and when he saw the baby he told me to get Cuticura Soap and Ointment right away.

"To please him I did so, and to my surprise by their use the sore began to heal over, the hair grew over it, and to-day she has a nice head of hair, her skin is as fair as a lily, and she has no scar left to recall that awful sore, and it is over eight months and no sign of its returning."

Mrs. Wm. Ryer, Elk River, Minn.

"Cure permanent." So writes Mrs. Ryer, Feb. 25, 1903, six years later:

"Your letter of the 19th inst. received, asking in regard to the cure of my baby some six years ago. Well, the disease has never returned to her head which at that time was a solid sore on top and down the back. Once or twice since then a patch has come on her hand near the wrist, but it finally disappeared after proper treatment with Cuticura."

Cuticura Resolvent, liquid and in the form of Chocolate Coated Pills, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Soap are sold throughout the world. THE MYSTERY OF AGATHA WEBB.

By Anna Katharine Green,

Author of "The Leavenworth Case," "Lost Man's Lane," "Hand and Ring." Etc., Etc. Copyright, 1900, by Anna Katharine Green.

"I don't see anything but this poor sleeping man," he began.

"Look at his sleeve."

Mr. Sutherland, with a start, again bent down. The arm of his old friend lay crooked upon the table, and on its blue cotton sleeve there was a smear which might have been wine but which was—blood.

As Mr. Sutherland became assured of this, he turned slightly pale and looked inquiringly at the two men who were intently watching him.

"This is bad," said he. "Any other marks of blood below stairs?"

"No. That one smear is all."

"Oh, Philemon!" burst from Mr. Sutherland in deep emotion. Then as he looked long and shudderingly at his friend he added slowly:

"He has been in the room where she was killed, so much is evident. But that he understood what was done there I cannot believe or he would not be sleeping here like a log. Come, let us go upstairs."

Fenton, with an admonitory gesture toward his subordinate, turned directly toward the staircase. Mr. Sutherland followed him, and they at once proceeded to the upper hall and into the large front room, which had been the scene of the tragedy.

It was the parlor or sitting room of this small and unpretentious house. A rag carpet covered the floor, and the furniture was of the plainest kind, but the woman who lay outstretched on the stiff old fashioned lounge opposite the door was far from being in accord with the homely type of her surroundings. Though the victim of a violent death, her face and form, both of a beauty seldom to be found among women of any station, were so majestic in their calm repose that Mr. Sutherland, accustomed as he was to her noble appearance, experienced a shock of surprise that found vent in these words:

"Murdered! She? You have made some mistake, my friends. Look at her face!"

But even in the act of saying this his eyes fell on the blood which had dyed her cotton dress, and he cried:

"Where was she struck and where is the weapon which made this ghastly wound?"

"She was struck while standing or sitting at this table," returned the constable, pointing to two or three drops of blood on its smooth surface. "The weapon we have not found, but the wound shows that it was inflicted by a three sided dagger."

"A three sided dagger?"

"Yes."

"I didn't know there was such a thing in town. Philemon could have had no dagger."

"It does not seem so, but one can never tell. Simple cottages like these often contain the most unlooked for articles."

Mr. Sutherland thought of what this cottage did contain and scrutinized the constable closely. But the latter showed no discomposure.

"I cannot imagine a dagger being among its effects," he pursued. "Where was the body of Mrs. Webb lying when you came in?"

"Where you see it now. Nothing has been moved or changed."

"She was found here, on this lounge, in the same position in which we see her now?"

"Yes, sir."

"But that is incredible. Look at the way she lies! Hands crossed, eyes closed, as though made ready for her burial. Only loving hands could have done this. What does it mean?"

"It means Philemon; that is what it means, Philemon."

Mr. Sutherland shuddered, but said nothing. He was dumfounded by these evidences of a carzy man's work. Philemon Webb always seemed so harmless, though he had been failing in mind for the last ten years.

"But," cried Mr. Sutherland suddenly rousing, "there is another victim. I saw old woman Batsy hanging from a window ledge, dead."

"Yes; she is in this other room; but there is no wound on Batsy."

"How was she killed, then?"

"That the doctors must tell us."

Mr. Sutherland, guided by Mr. Fenton's gesture, entered a small room opening into the one in which they stood. His attention was at once attracted by the body of the woman he had seen from below, lying half in and half out of the open window. That she was dead was evident; but, as Mr. Fenton had said, no wound was to be seen upon her, nor were there any marks of blood on or about the place where she lay.

"This is a dreadful business," groaned Mr. Sutherland, "the worst I have ever had anything to do with. Help me to lift the woman in; she has been long enough a show for the people outside."

There was a bed in this room; indeed, it was Mrs. Webb's bedroom, and upon this poor Batsy was laid. As the face came uppermost both gentlemen started and looked at each other in amazement. The expression of terror and alarm which it showed was in striking contrast to the look of exaltation to be seen on the face of her dead mistress.

CHAPTER III.

A MENTAL WRECK.

As they re-entered the larger room they were astonished to come upon Miss Page standing in the doorway. She was gazing at the recumbent figure of the dead woman, and for a moment seemed unconscious of their presence.

"How did you get in? Which of my men were weak enough to let you pass against my express instructions?" asked the constable, who was of an irritable and suspicious nature.

She let the hood drop from her head and, turning, surveyed him with a slow smile. There was witchery in that smile sufficient to affect a much more cultivated and callous nature than his, and though he had been proof against it once he could not quite resist the effect of its repetition.

"I insisted upon entering," said she. "Do not blame the men. They did not want to use force against a woman." She had not a good voice and she knew it, but she covered up this defect by a choice of intonations that carried her lightest speech to the heart. Hard visaged Amos Fenton gave a grunt, which was as near an expression of approval as he ever gave to any one.

"Well, well!" he growled, but not ill naturedly. "It's a morbid curiosity that brings you here. Better drop it, girl. It won't do you any good in the eyes of sensible people."

"Thank you," was her demure reply, her lips dimpling at the corners in a way to shock the sensitive Mr. Sutherland.

Glancing from her to the still outlines of the noble figure on the couch, he remarked with an air of mild reproof:

"I do not understand you, Miss Page. If this solemn sight has no power to stop your coquetries nothing can. As for your curiosity, it is both ill timed and unwomanly. Let me see you leave this house at once, Miss Page, and if in the few hours which must elapse before breakfast you can find time to pack your trunks, you will still further oblige me."

"Oh, don't send me away, I entreat you."

It was a cry from her inner heart, which she probably regretted, for she instantly sought to cover up the anxiety it showed by a submissive bend of the head and a step backward. Neither Mr. Fenton nor Mr. Sutherland seemed to hear the one or see the other, their attention having returned to the more serious matter in hand.

"The dress which our poor friend wears shows her to have been struck before retiring," commented Mr. Sutherland, after another short survey of Mrs. Webb's figure. "If Philemon"—

"Excuse me, sir," interrupted a voice, "but the young woman is listening to what you say. She is still in the hall." It was the young man speaking, who had been left in the hall.

"She is, is she!" exclaimed Fenton sharply, his admiration for the fascinating stranger having oozed out at his companion's rebuff. "I will soon show her"— But the words melted into thin air as he reached the door. The young girl had disappeared, and only a faint perfume remained in the place where she had stood.

"A most extraordinary person," grumbled the constable, turning back, but stopping again as a faint murmur came up from below.

"The gentleman is waking," called up a voice whose lack of music was quite perceptible at a distance.

With a bound Mr. Fenton descended the stairs, followed by Mr. Sutherland.

Miss Page stood before the door of the room in which sat Philemon Webb. As they reached her side she made a little bow that was half mocking, half deprecatory, and slipped from the house. An almost unbearable sensation of incongruity vanished with her, and Mr. Sutherland, for one, breathed like a man relieved.

"I wish the doctor would come," Fenton said, as they watched the slow lifting of Philemon Webb's head. "Our fastest rider has gone for him, but he's out Porchester way, and it may be an hour yet before he can get here."

"Philemon!"

Mr. Sutherland had advanced and was standing by his old friend's side.

"Philemon, what has become of your guests? You've waited for them here till morning."

The old man with a dazed look surveyed the two plates set on either side of him and shook his head.

"James and John are getting proud," said he, "or they forget, they forget."

James and John. He must mean the Zables, yet there were many others answering to these names in town. Mr. Sutherland made another effort.

"Philemon, where is your wife? I do not see any place set here for her?"

"Agatha's sick, Agatha's cross; she don't care for poor old man like me."

"Agatha's dead and you know it," thundered back the constable with ill-judged severity. "Who killed her? Tell me that. Who killed her?"

A sudden quenching of the last spark of intelligence in the old man's eye was the dreadful effect of these words. Laughing with that strange gurgle which proclaims an utterly irresponsible mind, he cried:

"The pussy cat! It was the pussy cat. Who's killed? I'm not killed. Let's go to Jericho."

Mr. Sutherland took him by the arm and led him upstairs. Perhaps the sight of his dead wife would restore him. But he looked at her with the same indifference he showed to everything else.

"I don't like her calico dresses," said he. "She might have worn silk, but she wouldn't. Agatha, will you wear silk to my funeral?"

The experiment was too painful, and they drew him away. But the constable's curiosity had been roused, and after they had found some one to take care of him he drew Mr. Sutherland aside and said:

"What did the old man mean by saying she might have worn silk? Are they better off than they seem?"

Mr. Sutherland closed the door before replying.

"They are rich," he declared to the utter amazement of the other. "That is, they were, but they may have been robbed; if so, Philemon was not the wretch who killed her. I have been told that she kept her money in an old fashioned cupboard. Do you suppose they alluded to that one?"

He pointed to a door set in the wall over the fireplace, and Mr. Fenton, perceiving a key sticking in the lock, stepped quickly across the floor and opened it. A row of books met his eyes, but on taking them down a couple of drawers were seen at their back.

"Are they locked?" asked Mr. Sutherland.

"One is and one is not."

"Open the one that is unlocked."

Mr. Fenton did so.

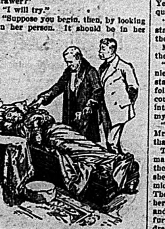
"It is empty," said he.

Mr. Sutherland cast a look toward the dead woman, and again the perfect serenity of her countenance struck him.

"I do not know whether to regard her as the victim of her husband's imbecility or of some vile robber's cupidity. Can you find the key to the other drawer?"

"I will try."

"Suppose you begin, then, by looking on her person. It should be in her pocket, if no marauder has been here."



The perfect serenity of her countenance struck him.

"It is not in her pocket."

"Hanging to her neck, then, by a string."

"No; there is a locket here, but no key. A very handsome locket, Mr. Sutherland, with"—

"Never mind, we will see that later; it is the key we want just now."

"Good heavens!"

"What is it?"

"It is in her hand; the one that lies underneath."

"Ah! A point, Fenton."

"A great point."

"Stand by her, Fenton. Don't let any one rob her of that key till the coroner comes and we are at liberty to take it."

"I will not leave her for an instant."

"Meanwhile, I will put back these books."

He had scarcely done so when a fresh arrival occurred. It was one of the village clergymen.

CHAPTER IV.

A MYSTERIOUS WOMAN.

This gentleman has some information to give. As he was returning home from the bedside of a sick parishioner some little time before he had been run against on this very corner by a man rushing out of the gateway in a state of great agitation. This man held something in his hand that glittered, and, though the encounter nearly upset them both, he had not stopped to utter an apology, but stumbled away into the darkness in a dazed and feeble way, showing that he was neither young nor active. The minister had not been able to see his face, but noticed the ends of a long beard blowing over his shoulder as he hurried away.

Philemon was a clean shaved man. Asked if he could give the time of his encounter, he replied that it was after 11 and before 12, for he was in his own house by 12.

"Did you look up at these windows before leaving?" asked Mr. Fenton, for this interview had taken place in the presence of the dead.

"I must have, for I now remember they were both lighted."

"Were the shades up?"

"I think not, or I should have noticed the ceiling of the room. I remember seeing nothing."

"How were the shades when you broke into the house this morning?" inquired Mr. Sutherland of the constable.

"Just as they are now; we have moved nothing. The shades were both down—one of them over an open window."

"Well, we may find this encounter of Mr. Crane's of decided importance."

"I wish I had seen the man's face," remarked the latter.

"What did the object look like you saw glittering in his hand?"

"I should not like to venture an opinion. I saw it but an instant."

"Could it have been a knife or an old fashioned dagger?"

"It might have been."

"Alas, poor Agatha! That money, something she so despised, should cause the death of a creature so grand and simple! Unhappy life, unhappy death! Fenton, I shall always mourn for Agatha Webb."

"Yet she seems to have found peace at last," said the minister. "I have never seen her look so contented." Then leading Mr. Sutherland aside he whispered: "What is it you say about money? Had she any considerable amount of it? I ask because in spite of their humble means of living she always put a generous donation on the plate, and I have received more than once during my pastorate an unexpectedly large and anonymous contribution for certain charities. As it was always for sick or suffering children I"—

"Yes, yes. I have no doubt it came from her. She was by no means poor, though I myself never knew the extent of her means till lately. Philemon was a good business man once, but they evidently preferred to live simply, having no children living"—

"They have lost six, I have been told."

"So the Porchester folks say. They probably had no heart for display or for even the simplest luxuries. At all events they did not indulge in them."

"Philemon has long been past indulging in anything."

"Oh, he likes his comfort, and he has had it too. Agatha never stinted him."

"But why do you think her death was due to her having money?"

"She had a large sum in the house, and there are some who knew this."

"And is it gone?"

"That we shall know later."

As the coroner arrived at this moment the minister's curiosity had to wait. Fortunately for his equanimity no one had the presumption to ask him to leave the room.

The coroner was a man of but few words and but little given to emotion. Yet they were surprised at his first question.

"Who is the young woman who is standing outside there, the only one in the yard?"

Mr. Sutherland, moving rapidly to the window, drew aside the shade.

"It is Miss Page, my housekeeper's niece," he explained. "I do not understand her interest in this affair. She followed me here from the house and could hardly be got to leave this room, into which she intruded herself against my express command."

"But look at her attitude." It was Mr. Fenton who spoke. "She's crazier than Philemon, it seems to me."

There was some reason for this remark. Guarded by the high fence from the gaze of the pushing crowd without, she stood upright and immovable in the middle of the yard, like one on watch. The hood which she had dropped from her head when she thought her eyes and smile might be of use to her in the furtherance of her plans had been drawn over it again, so that she looked more like a statue in gray than a living, breathing woman. Yet there was menace in her attitude and a purpose in the solitary stand she took in that circle of board girded grass which caused a thrill in the breast of those who looked at her from that chamber of death.

"A mysterious young woman," muttered the minister.

"And one that I neither countenance nor understand," interrupted Mr. Sutherland. "I have just shown her the displeasure I feel at her actions by dismissing her from my house."

The coroner gave him a quick look, seemed about to speak, but changed his mind and turned toward the dead woman.

CHAPTER V.

BLOOD ON THE GRASS.

The inquiries which followed elicited one or two new facts. First, that all the doors of the house were found unlocked, and, secondly, that the constable had been among the first to come in, so that he could vouch that no disarrangement had been made in the rooms with the exception of Batsy's removal to the bed.

Then, his attention being drawn to the dead woman, he discovered the key in her tightly closed hand.

"Where does this key belong?" he asked.

They showed him the drawers in the cupboard.

"One is empty," said Mr. Sutherland. "If the other is found to be in the same condition, then her money has been taken. That key she holds should open both these drawers."

"Then let it be made use of at once. It is important that we should know whether theft has been committed here as well as murder." And drawing the key out he handed it to Mr. Fenton.

The constable immediately unlocked the drawer and brought it and its contents to the table.

"No money here," said he.

"But papers as good as money," announced the doctor. "See, here are deeds and more than one valuable bond. I judge that she was a richer woman than any of us knew."

Mr. Sutherland meantime was looking with an air of disappointment into the now empty drawer.

"Just as I feared," said he. "She has been robbed of her ready money. It was doubtless in the other drawer."

"How came she by the key, then?"

"That is one of the mysteries of the affair. This murder is by no means a simple one. I begin to think we shall find it full of mysteries."

"Batsy's death, for instance?"

"Oh, yes, Batsy! I had forgotten that she was found dead too."

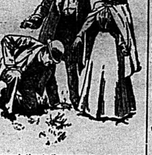
"Without a wound, doctor."

"She had heart disease. I doctored her for it. The fright has killed her."

"The look of her face confirmed that."

"Let me see. So it does. But we must have an autopsy to prove it."

"I would like to explain before any further measures are taken how I came to know that Agatha Webb had money in her house," said Mr. Sutherland as they stepped back into the other room. "Two days ago I was sitting with my family at dinner. Old gossip Judy came in. Had Mrs. Sutherland been living she would not have presumed to intrude upon us at mealtime, but as we have no one now to uphold our dignity this woman rushed into our presence panting with news and told us all in one breath how she had just come from Mrs. Webb, who had a pile of money in her house; that she had just seen it with her own eyes; that going up stairs, as usual, without knocking, she had seen Mrs. Webb through the crack of the sitting room door walking toward the fireplace cupboard with a huge roll of bills in her hand; that listening she heard her say: 'Just fifteen hundred! Too much money by far to have in the house.' After which she heard first one lock turned and then another, and, satisfied that the money had been put into some receptacle in the cupboard, she crept out as quietly as she had come in and ran away to tell the neighbors. Happily I was the first one she told, but I have no doubt that in spite of all my injunctions she has related the news to every one who would listen."



She, pointing to the grass at her feet, said quietly, "See this!"

"Was the young woman I see down yonder at the table with you when Judy told this story?" asked the coroner, pointing toward the yard.

Mr. Sutherland pondered. "No; I do not think she was. Frederick was seated at the table with me, and my housekeeper was pouring the tea, but Miss Page had not yet come down, I think. She has been putting on great airs of late."

"Can it be possible that he does not know that his son Frederick wants to marry this girl?" muttered the clergyman into the constable's ear.

The constable shook his head. Mr. Sutherland was one of those debonair men whose very mildness makes them impenetrable.

The coroner on leaving the house was followed by Mr. Sutherland. As the fine figures of the two men appeared on the doorstep a faint cheer was heard from the two or three favored persons who were allowed to look through the gate. But to this token of welcome neither gentleman responded by so much as a look, all their attention being engrossed by the sight of the solitary figure of Miss Page, who still held her stand upon the lawn. Motionless as a statue, but with her eyes fixed upon their faces, she awaited their approach. When they were near her, she thrust one hand from under her cloak and, pointing to the grass at her feet, said quietly:

"See this?"

Literary Notes.

Since the death of Sir Henry M. Stanley, on May 10, perhaps nothing that has appeared in print so well summarizes the work accomplished in Africa since Stanley's explorations began as does the article in the Review of Reviews for June by Mr. Cyrus C. Adams, the geographical expert. The remarkable changes in the past thirty years in the map of Africa are clearly set forth, and the world's debt to the intrepid explorer is graphically described.

JUNE CANADIAN MAGAZINE.

A beautiful colored frontispiece, entitled "Sunset on the Bay of Fundy," is a feature of the June "Canadian Magazine." The opening article is entitled "The Building of a Railway," by Hopkins J. Moorhouse, with some interesting photographs illustrating the new methods in railway building, besides a full-page reproduction of the historic driving of the golden spike on the Canadian Pacific Railway in November, 1885. Equally conspicuous are two interesting articles on Toronto's Great Fire, illustrated with numerous drawings and photographs. These articles make this number one to be carefully preserved as containing the most complete record of an event which will always be prominent in Canadian history. The other features of the magazine are quite equal to the best that this publication gives each month.

Thinking, perhaps, they will cure catarrh, but no one ever heard of a genuine cure following such senseless treatments. There is just one prompt and thorough cure for catarrh and it is fragrant, healing Catarrhozone, which goes right to the root of the trouble. It destroys the germs, heals the inflamed membranes and cures any case, no matter how obstinate or long standing. "I experimented for years with catarrh remedies, but found Catarrhozone the most rational and satisfactory," writes W. J. MacEachern, of Walkerville. "It cured me for all time." For a sure cure use only Catarrhozone. Complete outfit, $1.00; trial size 25c.

There is nothing equal to Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator for destroying worms. No article of its kind has given such satisfaction.

Only 900 people in 1,000,000 die of old age.

Some persons have periodical attacks of Canadian cholera, dysentery or diarrhoea and have to use great precautions to avoid the disease. Change of water, cooking and green fruit is sure to bring on the attacks. To such persons we would recommend Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial as being the best medicine in the market for all summer complaints. If a few drops is taken in water when the symptoms are noticed no further trouble will be experienced.

Few men realize what large dividends they can draw on kindness.

For coughs, colds, bronchitis and all lung and throat troubles there is no preparation of medicine can compare with Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It never fails to afford prompt and permanent relief. It removes all soreness and heals the diseased parts. It immediately soothes the most troublesome coughs, and by promoting expectoration, removes the mucous which stops up the air tubes which causes difficulty in breathing, thereby gives relief to that depressing tightness experienced in the chest. Public speakers and singers will find Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup of inestimable value, as it speedily and effectually allays all irritation and huskiness in the throat and bronchial tubes and gives power to the vocal cords, rendering the voice clear and sonorous. If parents wish to save the lives of their children and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness, give the Syrup according to directions.

Cut the trunk, the branches fall of themselves.

To Those of Sedentary Occupation—Men who follow sedentary occupations, which deprive them of fresh air and exercise, are more prone to disorders of the liver and kidneys than those who lead active, outdoor lives. The former will find in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills a restorative without question the most efficacious on the market. They are easily procurable, easily taken, act expeditiously, and they are surprisingly cheap considering their excellence.

bottle was finished I found I was entirely cured, and as a year has elapsed since then, I feel confident that the cure is complete and permanent. To all afflicted with this distressing complaint I heartily recommend Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, believing that the persistent use of it will cure any case of Dyspepsia. (Signed)

A self made man has his private opinion as to what is the noblest work of God.

He Has Tried It.—Mr. John Anderson, Kinloss, writes: "I venture to say few, if any, have received greater benefit from the use of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil than I have. I have used it regularly for over ten years and have recommended it to all sufferers I knew of, and they also found it of great virtue in cases of severe bronchitis and incipient consumption."

A Sure Cure for Headaches.—Billous headaches, to which women are more subject than men, become so acute in some subjects that they are utterly prostrated. The stomach refuses food, and there is a constant and distressing effort to free the stomach from bile which has become unduly secreted there. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are a speedy alterative, and in neutralizing the effects of the intruding bile relieve the pressure on the nerves, which cause the headache. Try them.

UNTOLD MISERY — WHAT A WELL-KNOWN COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER SUFFERED, AND HOW HE WAS CURED.—Gentlemen, about five years ago I began to be troubled with Dyspepsia, and for three years suffered untold misery from this terrible complaint. I was at that time travelling for Messrs. Walter Woods & Co., Hamilton, and was treated by some of the best physicians in the country, but to no purpose. I continued to grow worse, one day I was induced to try a bottle of Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, and to my great surprise and joy, I soon began to improve. Grand Trunk Exhibit World's Fair.

The Grand Trunk Railway Exhibit, occupying a central position in the Forestry, Fish and Game building, is one of the handsomest pavilions on the grounds. It is of Doric and Corinthian architecture, with Deer and Moose heads as central pieces in the cornice. Large bromide pictures depicting hunting, fishing and summer resort scenes along the line are in panels on the three sides. The interior is decorated with large photographic productions, well mounted fish, consisting of brook trout, land-locked salmon, ouananiche, wall-eyed pike, small mouth black bass and maskinonge. Two oil paintings, 9x13 ft., executed by one of the best artists in Canada, and titled "The Royal Muskoka Hotel," and "Head of Lake Joseph," scenes in the Muskoka Lake district, handsomely framed, are on the inside front wall. These two pictures will be placed in the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, after the Fair closes. One of the largest Moose heads in the world, is also on the wall. This head has a spread of sixty-six inches, the palms having a width of fourteen inches, and is one of the finest specimens of taxidermy on the grounds.

The ceiling is divided in three panels, each panel having an art glass skylight of unique design, the whole being lighted with over one hundred ground glass incandescent bulbs. The general coloring is maroon and cream, and the light green frames of the bromides and the gold of the oil paintings make a very pleasing contrast. Two moving pictures, showing the road from the St. Clair Tunnel to the Androscoggin River in Maine, are run continuously, while the wonderful reflection picture "On Shadow River," continue to revolve every 30 seconds, and a puzzle to many is which is the reflection!

Handsomely printed matter, descriptive of the different sections, is being distributed, and the representative in charge gladly furnishes information regarding same.

THE CANADIAN SEA.

"Probs," Mr. R. F. Stupart, Speaks to Toronto Club, on "Navigation of Hudson's Bay and Strait."

Mr. R. F. Stupart, of the weather office, delivered the other day before the Empire Club, Toronto, an address on "The Navigation of Hudson's Bay and Strait," which was to the following effect:

To the north of Ontario and Quebec there is, as you all know, a great inland sea, a vast expanse of salt water, 850 miles from north to south and 600 in breadth, and bounded wholly by lands which are part and parcel of our great Dominion, and connected with the broad Atlantic by a strait some 450 miles in length. We have as yet but a most imperfect knowledge of what wealth these waters contain. We know that they do contain the right whale, porpoise or white whale, walrus, narwhal, seal, salmon, trout, cod, and a variety of small fish, but the only fishing industries so far developed are the whale fishery by the Americans and the walrus, porpoise and salmon fisheries by the Hudson's Bay Company. The chief whaling ground is in the northwestern part of the bay, and here whalers from Massachusetts and Connecticut have been carrying on a profitable fishery for nearly half a century. I fancy I am not astray in surmising that these people have year by year been taking out oil and bone to the value of at least $100,000. Some years ago the Hudson's Bay Company made large profit out of the oil of the seal and white whale, and refined the oil at their northern ports; now, as the oil has a less commercial value, they have ceased this industry. The walrus is hunted not only by the native Eskimo, who roams the shore line of the bays and straits and kills this huge animal from kyak and ice floe, but also by the company's men, who seek it in small vessels out from Churchill.

The rivers which flow into Ungava Bay and doubtless others further west, abound in salmon—salmon equal in flavor to those of New Brunswick. The Hudson's Bay Company at one time found it worth while to send a ship to Ungava and George's River for salmon alone to be shipped in cold storage. I believe this ship has been discontinued, but I think it probable for reasons other than the failure of the fishery. We Canadians have very slowly awakened to the realization of the fact that in Manitoba and our Northwest Territories we have the best of wheat growing lands on the surface of the globe, sixty million acres, where wheat is as certain a crop as in any part of the world and more than twice sixty million acres where the wheat fields will in most years yield ample returns and where in every year other crops are so certain of success that the farmer will be able to regard with tolerable equanimity the possibility of partial failure of wheat. What wonder that the Manitoban and Northwest farmer have considered whether Hudson's Bay and Straits are not the natural and best outlet from the Northwest granary to the markets of Europe. Churchill is only 859 miles from Edmonton, 620 miles from Prince Albert and 640 miles from Winnipeg and the sea route from Churchill to Liverpool is but 3,368 miles.

The original charter of the Hudson's Bay Company was granted in 1668, in which Prince Rupert sent an expedition into the bay, and Fort Charles, the first English settlement, was established near the mouth of Rupert's River. For nearly 200 years the company's ships have been passing backwards and forwards through the Straits, and seem not to have been liable to any large percentage of disaster. It must, however, be borne in mind that the ships have until recent years been sailing vessels, and making but one trip per annum, have passed through the Straits when there has been very little ice. They leave Scotland so as to reach the entrance of the Straits about August 1st, and within less than two months they are again out of the Straits homeward bound.

Mr. Stupart then proceeded to give some particulars relating to the length of time navigation in the bay is impeded or actually suspended through the ice, then continued:

"I give the following as the season during which navigation may in ordinary years be regarded as practicable for the purpose of commerce; not indeed to the cheaply built freight steamer, commonly known as the 'ocean tramp,' but to vessels of about 2,000 tons gross, fortified for meeting ice, and of such construction as to enable them to be fair freight carriers. These vessels must be strengthened forward; should have wooden sheeting and be very full under the counter; the propeller should be of small diameter and be well down in the water. I place the limit of size at about 2,000 tons because a larger ship would be somewhat unwieldly, could not make such good way through the loose ice, and being unable to turn so sharply she would get many a heavy blow that the smaller ship would escape."

Wakeham's Experiences.

The speaker then went on to give some interesting details concerning the vicissitudes experienced by Captain Wakeham, the commander of a whaling vessel and concluded his remarks thus:

In judging of the suitability of Hudson's Straits as a commercial trade route we have not to consider during what period of each year a Dundee whaler or a specially constructed ice crusher can navigate the Straits, but rather during what period an ordinary well found iron ship with a master of usual experience can navigate them with an ordinary degree of safety. The result of investigation is not uncertain—such a ship may with safety enter the Straits early in July and should she have good luck she may get through to the bay with but a few delays in the ice, but delays of a week or ten days will not be infrequent. At the close of the season ships should not leave Churchill later than the middle of October, because at that date winter has set in.

MEN'S SUITS

The Newest of All.

The more exacting and particular a man may be about exclusiveness in fabrics and patterns, even if he insists on all the advantages he expects from a tailor, then the more these new suits which we are showing for the first time will appeal to him.

He will find in them all the style and satisfaction he would in garments that the best tailors could build to his measure, though they cost a little more than half the tailor's price and the same as he would pay elsewhere for ready-made clothes that would not prove as satisfactory.

Throughout these splendid garments the tailoring will be found to be faultless; it is of the highest character known and if anything a little more exacting and thorough than is found on the tailor's best productions. And of more importance than all, they possess that well bred air the tailor's have a knack of giving to the clothes they turn out.

Needless to say, the styles as they are found here are correct, that is expected, or that a perfect fit is assured in every case—we are more particular about that than you could be.

$15,000 TO BE SPENT ON NEW SIDEWALKS

Council Last Night Decided to Increase Its First Estimate 50 Per Cent.

East Side and West Side Aldermen Have Warm Argument as to Precedence.

Zwick's Island Water Scheme Appears to be Shelved Till Next Winter.

The City Council had a meeting last night, though for a while it looked as though it was going to be a case of "no quorum." Ald. McFee was their first, as usual. Then came the Mayor, Ald. Panter Sulman and Paterson. At five minutes past eight there was still one shy; at ten minutes past eight the five members present began to fear they had their walk for nothing; but at 8.15 Ald. Magrath came up the stairs, the Aldermen breathed a sigh of relief and the newspaper men a sigh of disappointment, and the seance began.

Communications, etc.

The following accounts were presented, the first two being passed and the others referred:

W. B. Riggs	$ 4.00
J. W. London	1.50
J. W. Walker	61.35
Can. Port. Cement Co.	654.00

Ald. Sinclair came in.

Ex-Mayor Graham wrote in reference to his taxes, remitted under Statute. Referred.

City Surveyor Hulme submitted a statement in reference to the Zwick's Island water scheme. He could not give an estimate of the cost of taking up the pipe at present in use, and would not advise such action, anyhow, but thought the present system should be left intact, in case anything happened to the new system. It would be impossible to hire barges for the work now, and he would recommend that the matter be submitted to the people at once, so that, if it carried, the shore work could be done this summer and the pipe-laying and sub-marine work next winter. Then the new system could be in operation next year. Laid on table.

Dr. Dolan et al wrote asking that the new sidewalk to be laid on Victoria Ave., from Front street to Pinnacle, be laid outside trees. Laid on table.

Ald. Marsh came in.

Mr. Hulme submitted an estimate of the cost of laying a water main to the Hospital, which would be $660.

Petitions for granolithic walks on Hillside, George and Cedar streets were presented and referred to the Assessor and Solicitor.

Reports of Committees.

The reports of the various standing committees, as already published, were read.

Ald. Ketcheson arrived.

Council went into Committee of the whole, Ald. Sulman in the chair.

Some discussion ensued as to the shed which the Street Surveyor was building for the purpose of storing cement. It came out that Mr. Arnott had offered to rent the dressing rooms of the skating rink for $5 per month, but as the shed was now half built, and the Surveyor said the skating rink was not fitted for the purpose, anyhow, the matter was allowed to proceed.

Mr. Lang's tender for building a vault in the city building was accepted, the committee to select what doors they wanted.

The other recommendations of the various committees were passed without discussion.

When Mr. Hulme's recommendation re Zwick's island came up,

Ald. Sinclair said he did not agree with everything Mr. Hulme had said, and did not think it would be wise to go to the people with a by-law now. They had better, in his opinion, leave the matter alone for the present.

It was referred to the Water Committee.

A petition was read from various residents of Bridge St. west, complaining that the new sidewalk built there lately was too high.

Ald. Panter moved that the letter be placed on file.

Ald. Sinclair thought that, when the job was completed, most of the residents of the street would be satisfied. It was now in a half-finished state, and a fair opinion could hardly be given of it.

The matter was referred to the Public Works committee, after Ald. Panter had stated that, in his opinion, some of the residents of Bridge St. west should be furnished free by the city, with material to "grade up" with.

Mr. Davison's Drain.

Messrs. O'Flynn and Davison were heard in reference to a [illegible] in which it was alleged had flood [illegible] the latter gentleman's cellar, and he blamed the Waterworks department for causing the damage, inasmuch as one of its employees had lately been doing some work in the vicinity and the cellar had been dry previous to that time.

Mr. Hulme did not think any blame could be attached to the Waterworks people. Mr. Davison's private drain was stopped up.

Ald. Gordon arrived.

After a good deal of discussion in reference to Mr. Davison's drain the matter was left in the hands of the Chairman of Water, the Chairman of Public Works and the Street Surveyor.

The petition re the proposed sidewalk on Victoria avenue caused a lot of talk.

Ald. McFee was in favor of the petition being granted. The street, he thought, was wide enough to permit of the walk being built outside the trees.

The Surveyor was opposed to it. It would not look well to see a walk on one side of the street inside the trees and the one on the other outside.

The matter was finally referred back to the Public Works Committee.

Enquiries.

Ald. Sinclair wanted to know if any granolithic walks would be built on the east side of the river this year.

Ald. McFee laughingly said he would build them all over the city if they would give him the money.

Ald. Sinclair said the reason he asked was because of the condition of the walk on lower Front St., which was a disgrace. He did not think all the money appropriated for new walks should be spent on the west side and Front St. not attended to. He would bring up the matter under the head of motions.

Ald. Paterson asked if something could not be done with a ditch on Church St., which looked like a trout stream.

Ald. Panter asked if there was a city by-law in regard to inspection of buildings which were considered unsafe.

The Mayor said he knew of no such by-law. The city had no building inspector.

By-laws.

A by-law in regard to the tax roll for 1903 was passed and numbered 1164.

Motions.

Ald. Marsh moved, seconded by Ald. Panter, that the Minister of Militia be requested to send up the Government architect to consult with the City Council and the officers of the Fifteenth in regard to the proposed new drill shed, the site of which had been furnished to the Government by the city.—Carried.

Ald. Sinclair moved, seconded by Ald. Sulman, that, on the completion of the sidewalk to be built on Dunbar street, the Street Surveyor be instructed to proceed with the building of walks on Front St., Queen St., John St. and George St.

The West side Aldermen immediately began to show symptoms of blood in their eyes.

Ald. Marsh asked the Street Surveyor how much of the $10,000 appropriated would have been expended when the Coleman street walk was finished.

The Surveyor said that, roughly speaking, he thought about $3,400.

Ald. Sinclair then changed his motion so that the Front St. sidewalk would be proceeded with when Coleman St. was finished. The east side of the river, he thought, should receive some consideration this year.

Ald. Panter pointed out that the Dunbar St. walk had been petitioned for and promised long ago.

Ald. Paterson moved in amendment that the Dunbar St. walk be laid before the Front St. walk was begun.

Ald. Sinclair did not think the West side people were entitled to more than half of the appropriation. The Surveyor said that, when Coleman street was finished, there would only be sufficient money left to build the Front street walk.

Ald. Magrath deprecated the idea of putting one side of the river against the other. They were elected by the citizens at large, and not by the citizens of any particular ward. He did not see why the city should be divided up this year any more than in former years. In the past most of the walks had been built on the east side of the river, and the West side people had made no complaints.

Oil on the Troubled Waters.

Ald. Ketcheson said it was apparent that the people wanted the walks and were willing to pay for them. Why not give them? Labor and cement, he believed, were cheaper this year than they would be next. He moved that $20,000 be expended on granolithic walks this year, instead of $10,000.

This seemed to set everybody a-thinking, and the more the Aldermen thought of the proposition the better they seemed to like it.

Ald. Panter said he was sorry there had been putting any one side against the other. In the past the East side had had six walks to the West side's one. Yet there was no complaint.

Ald. McFee was in favor of Ald. Ketcheson's idea. The sidewalks on the West side were very bad, he had walked around and seen them.

The Mayor thought they might build cheaper walks.

Ald. McFee said the granolithic walks were none too good.

Mr. Mikel just here volunteered the information that the company which carried the city's accident insurance was seriously considering the advisability of cancelling the policy, on account of the many bad sidewalks.

The discussion went on for some time, and some of the Aldermen were afraid that $20,000 was too much to spend for sidewalks this year. Fifteen thousand was suggested as a compromise.

Ald. Magrath wanted it made $17,000.

Ald. Gordon said the citizens were asking for the walks and were willing to pay for them. It seemed too bad they could not get them.

Ald. Sinclair's motion and Ald. Paterson's amendment were finally withdrawn, and Ald. Ketcheson changed his motion to provide that $15,000 be spent this year on walks which was finally carried without a dissenting voice.

Ald. Marsh then moved that, upon the completion of Coleman St., the Front St. walk be proceeded with. This seemed to be agreed to.

The Band Concerts.

Ald. Ketcheson, Chairman of Parks, informed the Council that he had arranged for the band concerts on Victoria Park to start on Thursday evening, June 2.

Council adjourned.

Sports and Pastimes

FOOTBALL.

Soldiers Trimmed Theologs

It was a large and enthusiastic crowd which gathered at the Deaf and Dumb Institution grounds yesterday afternoon to witness a football match. The teams represented the Fifteenth Regiment and Albert College, between whom there is considerable rivalry for the possession of the Corby Cup, as it is generally admitted that one of these teams will for this season at least hold the trophy. Although the Red Coats shut out the University boys yesterday, the game was well contested and exciting. It was near the hour of 6 o'clock, when the referee, Mr. H. P. Thomas, sounded the whistle and the fun commenced, the Fifteenth kicking towards the south and Albert to the north. Half an hour each way was the time agreed upon for actual play. About a minute before the first half was up the Fifteenth made an excellent rush upon the Alberts' goal, and McGuire, by a well-directed side kick, scored, amidst deafening cheers. During the second half the Soldier boys added two more goals to the score, Dean and Thompson doing the trick. The Alberts made some excellent rushes, but were unable to score, much to the chagrin of the college girls and boys, who were out in full force to cheer them on. The game throughout was well played and roughness was eliminated. Shortly before the game concluded, Thompson, one of the Fifteenth players, received a severe kick upon the leg, but soon recovered and was able to finish the game.

The teams and their positions were as follows:

Fifteenth.	Alberts
Goal.
Burke	Edmison
Backs.
Conger	Wheeler
Spriggs	Lovering
Half-backs.
Kennedy	McQuade
Brown	Astle
Brennan	Thompson
Forwards.
Thompson	Hart
McGuire	Brereton
Dean	Vance
Acton	Gundy
Truaisch	Dyer

The goal umpires were two mutes, namely, J. Kelly and R. Enaminger.

Notes.

The result of the match seemed to meet with the favor of the greater number of the spectators.

Mr. Thomas made an excellent and impartial referee.

The children of the Institution appeared to take a keen interest in the game.

There was gloom at the College last night, but the Theologs have not yet given up hope.

FISHING.

No Change in Bass Season.

It was announced early in the season that the open season for bass would not commence until July 1st this year. Anglers who are anxious to try their luck in catching these gamey fish will no doubt be pleased to learn that there has been no change as to the close season, and bass can be caught after June 15th.

Successful Students.

All the Belleville students of the Royal Dental College, Toronto, including the two sons of the Rev. Mr. Wilson, of Canifton, Mr. Garland and Mr. Morley A. Day, have passed very creditably in the 2nd year's course. In the case of Mr. Day, who has been for the past eight weeks in the Toronto hospital with typhoid fever, the board, at its first meeting after the close of the college, unanimously passed a resolution to the effect that in view of his past record his standing in the 2nd year's course be granted him without the usual examinations.

PNEUMONIA IS FILLING THE HOSPITALS.

Every day we hear of someone being taken with pneumonia. The only preventative is to get strong and keep your body healthy. Take Ferrozone, which makes the rich, red kind of blood, that nourishes and stimulates the entire system. "I was all run down and an apt subject for pneumonia," writes A. B. Charters, of Burlington, "when I tried Ferrozone. I didn't believe it was possible for Ferrozone to build me up so quickly. In a few days my appetite improved, color came into my cheeks and I felt stronger. I gained eight pounds and regained my old-time vigor through using Ferrozone." Try Ferrozone; it assures health. DEATH OF DR. J. A. MARSHALL

ESTIMABLE AND POPULAR GENTLEMAN PASSED AWAY AT AN EARLY HOUR THIS MORNING.

"Dr. J. A. Marshall is dead," was the intelligence passed from one to another upon the street at an early hour this morning. The news was received with universal and sincere regret, for the deceased gentleman was respected by all who knew him. Last fall Dr. Marshall was the victim of a bicycle accident, caused by a collision, and that, we are informed, had considerable to do with bringing on the illness which terminated fatally at an early hour this morning.

The late Dr. Marshall was born at Brampton, Ont., in 1846, being thus in his 58th year. He lived in the western portion of the province until 1886, when he came to Belleville and commenced practising dentistry here. Since then this city has been his home. In his profession he was considered highly proficient, and held various offices in the Ontario Dental Association, being its President one year. For eight years he was a Director of the Royal College of Dentistry. The doctor took a keen interest in municipal matters. During the years 1894, '95 and '97 he was a member of the City Council, being one of the representatives from Samson Ward. Whilst acting in that capacity he did all in his power for the city's welfare. In fraternal societies he was connected with the Royal Arcanum, A.O.U.W., Chosen Friends and I.O.F. In religion he was a Methodist, being a member of Bridge Street Church. Whilst not an active party man, he was in politics a staunch Conservative. The deceased was twice married, his surviving helpmate being a daughter of the late Rev. W. Windell, of Lotus, Ont. The children surviving are three sons and four daughters. The sons are U. A. and John W., of this city; Herbert G., of Detroit. The daughters are Lena, Ella, Eva and Kathleen, all at home. To the widow and children will be extended the heartfelt sympathy of a large circle of friends.

On May 5 The Intelligencer published a report of a police court case, Leverton vs. P. Pearsoll, who was charged with appropriating hay, in which it was stated that "the defendant was acquitted, it being proven that he did not get the hay." This was not exactly correct. The plaintiff, Mr. Leverton, lost some hay, and it was taken by the defendant through a misunderstanding, but the Magistrate, clearly apprehending this misunderstanding, could not find the defendant guilty, hence his acquittal.

MAGNIFICENT SPECTACLE.

JERUSALEM AND THE CRUSADES REGALLY DEPICTED BY RINGLING BROTHERS.

Ringling Brothers' World's Greatest Shows lead their huge circus programme this year with a magnificent dramatic spectacle, Jerusalem and the Crusades, involving a cast of 1,200 characters, a ballet of 300, and a singing chorus of 200 More than 2,000 costumes, designed and made by Parisian artists of world-wide fame, are worn, and the music, composed especially for this grand production, is rendered by the largest and only portable grand organ ever made, and a selected band of fifty soloists. The musical embellishment is peculiarly effective and permeates the entire production. Never in the history of the circus has there been offered to the public a spectacle of the magnitude, the originality and fascinating feature of this stupendous performance. No circus in existence could afford the fabulous expenditure of money invested by the Ringling Brothers in this radiant and dramatic interpretation of the beautiful and dramatic stories of the Crusades. The subject portrays life in the ennobling days of chivalry, when loyalty, bravery, justice and gentleness went hand in hand, and courtesy to an enemy and woman was a cheerful duty. The men and women of this age are inspiring pictures of devotion to high ideals, and depict in glorious flower the sentiment of chivalry from which the stirring crusades sprung. This spectacle opens upon a brilliant scene of preparation for the Crusades, multitudes move about the vast space before the great cathedral of Claremont, France, from whence the invading army started, scanning the tournament notices and instruments to be used by the contesting knights in the tourney, which is to celebrate the departure of the warrior hosts. Bejeweled and enpurpled royalty; obsequious servitors, gaily garbed; ecclesiastics, sparkling with precious ensignia of rank; mounted knights, with shields and helmets inlaid with gold and precious stones; monks, seminarians and other lowly children of church devotion and work; court ladies in daintily fashioned fabrics of glistening sheen; nobles of blue-blooded bearing and dress; soldiers, grim and glittering in armor of steel; singing maidens, dancing girls with garlands, pilgrims, vassals, pages, sword, shield and helmet bearers, and countless other pictorial types of the period intermingle kaleidoscopically in this massive and enthralling scene of changing splendors. The most exciting of ancient sports, including jousting tilts, sword combats, spearing exercises, equestrian exploits, athletic competitions and other thrilling pastimes are reproduced in the splendid tournament. A horse ballet is introduced to illustrate the wonderful equine education of three squadrons of the highest bred animals in the world. The marching pageant as the Crusaders leave upon their holy mission is the most magnificent and bewilderingly beautiful procession display ever seen under canvas.

All the barbaric radiance and voluptuous luxury of the Egyptian court in the mediaeval days of the first crusades are depicted in the environment and action of the next gorgeous scene. A ballet divertisement is presented for the enjoyment of the Egyptian ruler and his numerous court. The enormous scope of stage room is taxed to the utmost by the brilliant gathering. Dancing girls flood the stage, and gracefully glide through bewitching conceits of terpsichorean invention. The costumes are creations of art, fashioned by Parisian masters and models of exquisite elegance and taste. No spectacle of modern times has been staged with the lavish disregard of expense and with such overwhelming success, as this production by Ringling Brothers of Jerusalem and the Crusades. The marvellous shows will exhibit here on Saturday, June 4, and give two performances, afternoon at 2 o'clock and night at 8 o'clock.

The grand street pageant, the largest, most varied in sensational feature and gorgeously decorative ever organized, and more than twice as long as any other show ever gave, will leave the show grounds show day at 10 o'clock.

NEW LINE OF STEAMERS

Government Negotiating For One From Canada to France.

Bourassa Complains of Lord Strathcona—Soldiers to Add to Pay If Good Service Is Given—Minister of Militia Announces New Arrangement to Go Into Effect on June 1, 1904—Mr. Maclean's Two-Cent Passenger Rate Bill.

Ottawa, May 31.—In the House yesterday Hon. W. S. Fielding announced that the budget speech would be delivered on Tuesday, June 7.

Bourassa and Strathcona.

Henri Bourassa made complaint that Lord Strathcona, High Commissioner in London, discussed publicly some phases of the political relations of Canada and the Empire. He insisted that a Canadian official should take no part in the politics of Great Britain. Recently the Prime Minister had stated that W. T. R. Preston had no authority to speak for Canada in certain matters he had discussed; he wanted some such course pursued with regard to Lord Strathcona.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier explained that Lord Strathcona, socially and politically, was highly thought of in Great Britain. While His Lordship sometimes gave his opinions on political questions, Sir Wilfrid said he had never known him to speak on behalf of the Dominion Government.

Ralph Smith Hits a Snag.

Ralph Smith moved the second reading of his bill to enable labor unions to register their labels under the trades marks act.

Speaker Belcourt ruled the second reading out of order under the rule which prohibits the introduction of a bill relating to trade or the restraint of trade without notice in the form of a resolution.

"I give notice to that effect than," said Mr. Smith.

The notice is probably too late, as the bill goes to the bottom of the list of public bills and orders, and is not likely to be resurrected this session.

To Amend Criminal Code.

Mr. Lancaster moved the second reading of his bill to amend the Criminal Code. The object of the bill is to prevent persons under 21 years of age, arrested on a criminal charge, from electing as to how they shall be tried without first securing the advice of their parents as guardians.

Mr. Fitzpatrick suggested that a good many criminals under 21 years of age know how to take care of themselves on such matters without any advice. He thought it would be sufficient to give persons under 16 the protection provided for in Mr. Lancaster's bill.

The amendment was adopted.

Cigarette Resolution.

Without a word of discussion the House went into committee on the resolution: "That it is expedient to bring in a bill to prohibit the importation, manufacture and sale of cigarettes," and passed it. The bill will be brought down at next sitting of the House.

Cattle Guards.

The House having gone into committee on the bill, Mr. Lancaster, the champion of the cattle-guard movement of last session, explained the necessity of amending the Railway Act as proposed.

The bill states that "whenever in a city, town or incorporated village a railway crosses a highway at rail level, the said speed of ten miles an hour shall in no event be exceeded, unless the railway company keeps a watchman at such crossing to warn all people using the highway of approaching trains."

Canada-French Line.

Sir Richard Cartwright stated that since the beginning of the present session the Government has entered into negotiations with the Armstrong Company, shipbuilders, with the object of establishing a line of steamers between Canada and France.

The Treadgold Investigation.

Mr. Casgrain was informed that a new commission has been issued to Mr. Justice Britton to continue and terminate the investigation into the Treadgold and other concessions in the Yukon. The commissioner expects to make his report about July 1.

Only to the Cabinet.

Mr. Barker of Hamilton, wanted to know to what persons, or what dates, and under what circumstances was the application of George A. Cox, Charles M. Hays and William Wainwright read to the House by the Minister of Finance on May 27 last communicated wholly or in part previous to the same being so read to the House. Sir Wilfrid Laurier replied that the application was communicated to the Cabinet, and no one else shortly after it was received.

Timber Protection.

The Minister of the Interior stated that the Government had been informed of the resolution passed at the fifth annual meeting of the Canadian Forestry Association, setting forth the necessity of protecting the timber along the route of the Transcontinental Railway from fire risks with the construction of the road, and also asking for an examination into the water sources of Canada. Mr. Sifton said that an efficient protective service would be instituted where the railway crosses Government lands. The question of enquiring into the water sources of the country is under consideration.

Pay of the Militia.

In reply to Mr. Hendgrson, re the rate of pay to be allowed the militia at the annual camps, the Minister of Militia said that under the act long service and good conduct will be allowed at the rate of 20 cents for the first year, 40 cents for the second and 50 cents for the third year. Several conditions are laid down. To be entitled to this pay, which is in addition to the regular rate of 50 cents a day, privates and non-commissioned officers must be duly enlisted in a regiment outside of the permanent corps.

They must perform the full amount of drill for which their regiments are called out. They must be reasonably efficient in the performance of their duties, in the use of the rifle, or whatever weapon their corps is equipped with. They must have received no punishment beyond admonition or reprimand. If these conditions are not complied with all right to good service standing is forfeited. The act will come into force on June 1, 1904, but privates and non-commissioned officers who have served continuously for three years will come under its provisions.

Two-Cent Passenger Rate.

W. F. Maclean moved the second reading of his bill to amend the Railway Act. The bill, besides providing for a minimum rate of two cents a mile for passengers on railways, contains three other amendments. It deprives the chairman of the Railway Commission of power to override the decision of his two colleagues on questions involving points of law. It brings the express companies within the jurisdiction of the Railway Commission. It provides that compensation in connection with independent telephone companies gaining access to railway stations shall be based on actual damages sustained by the company, and aside from any claim to recognition for violated contract or rights.

Mr. Maclean fought unsuccessfully against sending his bill to the Railway Committee. Like Mr. Lancaster's bill to amend the Railway Act it was passed on to the Railway Committee.

The Minister of Justice gave the assurance that the purpose of the Government in sending it to that committee was not to shelve the bill but to expedite its full consideration.

Aliens on Grand Trunk Pacific.

At midnight, Sir William Mulock tabled into the House the correspondence between the Department of Labor, the representative of the Canadian Amalgamated Society of Civil Engineers and the Grand Trunk management, in connection with the charges of the employment of aliens on the Grand Trunk Pacific.

MR. GAMEY IN TORONTO.

4,500 People Hear Him in Massey Hall, and 4,000 People Outside Could Not Get Admittance.

Toronto, May 31.—If the Massey Hall never was full before, it was stretched with last night's crowd. When it could hold no more the doors were closed and further crowds were excluded. The police estimate that there were 4,500 people inside and 4,000 outside wanting to get in. Many ticket-holders who were late in arriving and who would have been glad to stand up, were kept out on account of the city regulations enforced by the Massey Hall authorities not to permit any crowd beyond the seating capacity.

The floor was packed with the solid, white-headed, grey-headed, bald and business-like citizens. In the gallery there was a fashionable attendance of ladies, and not a few also in the second gallery. The boxes were filled with notable visitors. On the platform were gathered many of the more prominent members of the Conservative party.

Music Before Eloquence.

Before the entrance of the chairman the time was occupied by organ music and Miss Macdonald sang a pretty solo and was encored, giving in response "The Maple Leaf," which was hailed with applause, and joined in by the whole audience. Thus stirred with patriotic enthusiasm, when Robert Roswell Gamey came upon the platform the plaudits and the shouting did not die away for a considerable time.

Commendably brief, the chairman merely remarked that he need not say that the great meeting was a cry for popular Government over the forces of bribery and corruption in the province. At four minutes past 8 Mr. Gamey began to speak, and he invested his oft-repeated story with an interest which did not flag for two hours. When 10 o'clock struck some early birds began to turn nestwards, but for three-quarters of an hour longer Mr. Gamey continued to develop his narrative. In excellent voice throughout, many said that they heard him better at the end than at the beginning of his address. That he had the sympathy of the audience was clear from the frequent and often long continued applause.
